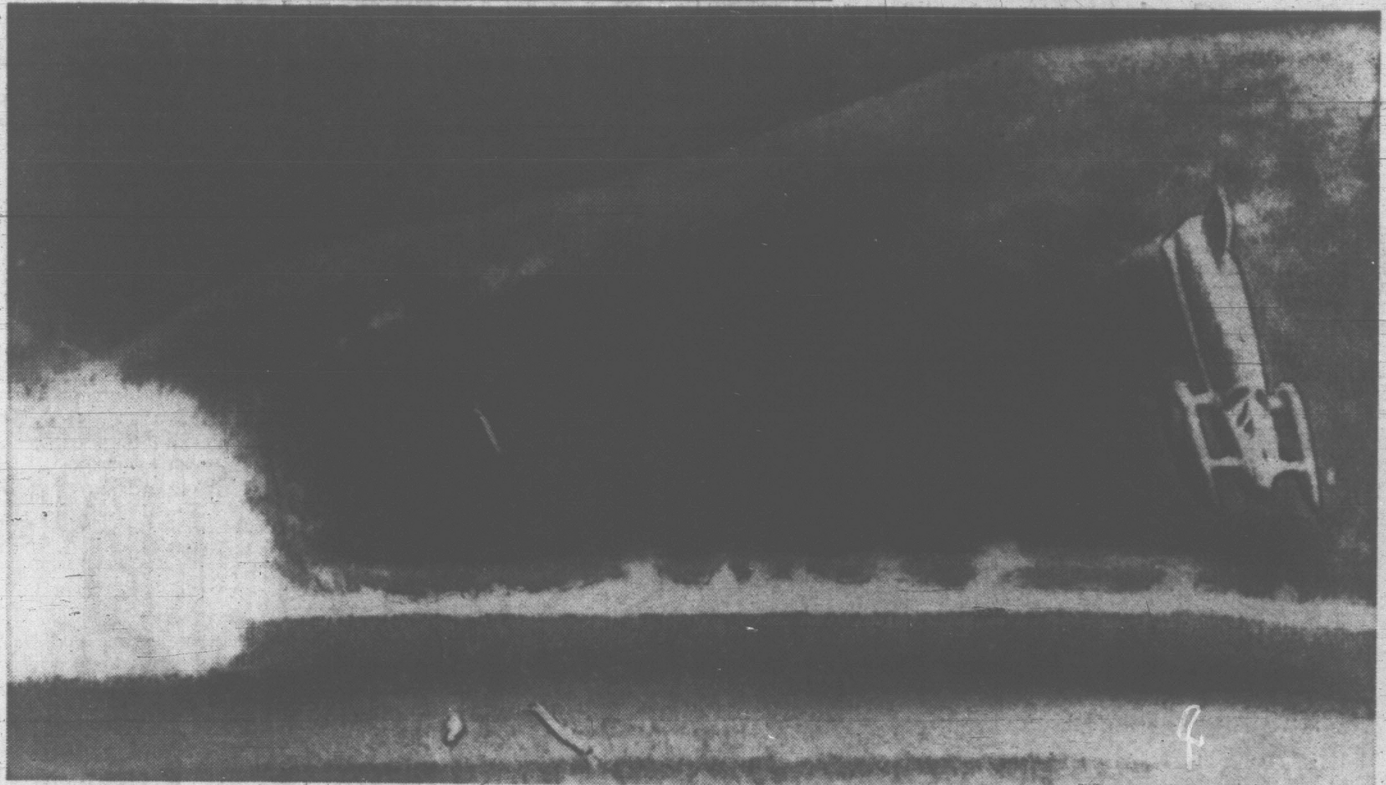
U.S. Missile Soars Over Cuba After Veering From Set Path

WASHINGTON — An unarmed U.S. Air Force missile fired in a test from Florida has veered off its scheduled course into the Gulf of Mexico and presumably soared over Cuba, the defence department said today.

The weapon, undergoing research and development tests, was launched from the air force proving ground at Elgin Air Force Base, Fla.

While the defence department did not go into any explanations, the quick announcement was obviously aimed to get in ahead of any propaganda blasts from the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba.

Donald Campbell Killed In Hydroplane Smashup



JET HYDROPLANE Bluebird, with speed king Donald Campbell at the controls, leaps from surface of Lake Coniston in England before exploding and sinking. Campbell was killed travelling over 300 miles an hour in bid to boost his own water speed record. Frogmen were hunting for his body. (AP Wirephoto.)

Flips Going 300 mph

CONISTON WATER, England (UPI)—The jet-powered hydroplane Bluebird carrying Donald Campbell at more than 300 miles an hour toward a new record flipped 60 feet into the air and smashed to pieces today, killing the British speed ace just short of his goal.

"She's going!" the 45-year-old racer cried over his cockpit radio. Some reports said the bullet-shaped craft appeared to explode as it hit the water and sank 150 feet to the bottom.

Campbell failed by only 100th of a second of completing the course on the mirror-calm lake that would have shattered his previous record of 276.33 miles an hour.

Apparently, he had a premonition of death. But he tried anyway.

JUST TOOK OFF

"I think the explanation of the accident was that the boat was going so fast it just took off," said Norman Buckley, chief observer at the speed test.

Like his father, the late Sir Malcolm Campbell, the water speed king raced cars as well as boats. Sir Malcolm died a natural death in 1949, the year his son started his own racing career. (See story Page 38.)

Strapped into the Bluebird cockpit, Campbell was approaching the end of his return run over a measured kilometer on a lake in northwest England to try for a new speed record.

The craft leaped from the water, arced over and hit the water at a speed of five miles a minute.

Just before it rose, the right "sponson" (hydroplane leg) of the 5,000-horsepower craft lifted from the surface.

Campbell's timekeepers and mechanics heard him say over the radio:

"The water is not in good condition . . . she's tramping (bouncing) . . . I can't see much . . . she's going!"

FOUND MASK

Teammates who sped to the scene in small boats found only pieces of wreckage and Campbells' oxygen mask floating on the sufrace. The mask was Campbell's only hope of survival.

Campbell's timekeepers said his official time for the first run over the measured kilometer (about five-eighths of a mile) was 297 m.p.h. That meant he had to average 303 m.p.h. on the return run to hit the 300 m.p.h target.

"He was travelling over 300 m.p.h. when the crash came and maybe as much as 320 m.p.h.," official observer Andrew Brown told newsmen.

"He was almost through the kilometer, the lake was very smooth," he added. "No one can

55 FT. WAVES DISABLED FREIGHTER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The 10,000-ton Liberian freighter Georgia was towed into Philadelphia today after six days of battling heavy seas in the Atlantic Ocean.

The Georgia's Greek crew told of waves up to "55 feet high" that ripped off hatch covers and poured sea water into the holds.

The freighter, of Second World War vintage, first radioed for help Friday while about 450 miles east southeast of Nantucket.

The freighter, with 29 men aboard, was carrying a load of manganese ore from India to Philadelphia.

New Challenge To Legality Of Bug Probe?

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

A second challenge to the revived royal commission on electronic "bugging" may come next week when it opens for its first hearings in Vancouver.

This possibility loomed today in the wake of a provincial cabinet order reappointing retired county court Judge R. A. Sargent as a one-man royal commissioner in a vastly widened probe.

The new order repeats the Nov, 10 terms of reference ruled as invalid by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson last week. They restricted it to an investigation of the Nov. 5 bugging of hotel rooms used by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and its late president Lloyd Craig.

But a second page has been added widening the investigation into the kinds and extent of "bugging" devices now being used in the province, under what conditions — if any — they should be permitted to private detectives and whether any legislation is needed to establish the civil right to privacy.

Vancouver private detective W. S. Graham testified before the original commission that he "bugged" the Canadian union's hotel rooms in Vancouver for Pat O'Neal, an organizer of the rival International Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Workers' Union.

IN PUBLIC?

Judge Sargent indicated just before the Christmas recess that the four hours of tapes produced by the bugging would be played in public when the commission resumed after the holidays and this led to the Canadian union's resort to the courts to have the commission declared illegal.

In interviews today, Judge Sargent indicated that he will proceed with his plan to discuss playing the tapes with the lawyers shortly after the new commission begins hearings, expected next week in Vancouver.

He suggested an expurgated version may still be made public.

However, John Laxton, lawyer representing the Canadian union at the commission hearings, told the Times his clients will continue to oppose playing any part of them as a direct invasion of privacy by the commission itself.

Mr. Laxton said the Canadian union had approved establishment of the original commission. But the union went to court against it "once the tape playing became a matter before it, because that changed the whole tenor of the inquiry.

'PRIVACY INVADED'

"We felt that from that point on, he (Judge Sargent) was not acting within his terms of reference which were intended to investigate an invasion of privacy."

Mr. Laxton said this was not the exclusive reason for the court case but was "one of the main ones that precipitated it.

"We oppose under any circumstances the playing of these tapes as a matter of principle—that that would be an invasion of privacy.

"We say that no part of the tapes, expurgated or not, can possibly be relevant to this inquiry.

"In our view there was no possible justification for playing them by the old commission and there stil is no possible justification for playing them by the new commission."

Judge Sargent told the Times there had been a "lot of claptrap spoken about those tapes."

He said the question of playing them "was still under advisement when I had adjourned" and this was still the situation.

'Tailings in Buttle No Health Hazard'

The pollution of British Columbia's air and water is a major threat facing the province in the century ahead. The Times assigned reporter Gordon Ritchie to examine the many aspects of the problem in British Columbia and elsewhere. Here is his second report.

By GORDON RITCHIE

Last June the provincial government broke all precedent by allowing a mining company to establish in a provincial park.

Western Mines, Ltd., was allowed to construct a road, a townsite, a hydro-electric station and a 1,000-tons-per-day mining and concentrating operation in Vancouver Island's 100 - square - mile Strathcona Park.

Three months later the B.C. Pollution Control Board, handed the problem by a special cabinet order, granted the mining company a 5-year permit to dump daily some 750 tons of tailings — finely crushed unusable ore — into Buttle Lake, the pride of the park and the most important in a chain of lakes on Vancouver Island.

Buttle Lake is the source of drinking water for 16,000 residents of nearby Campbell River water district and is estimated to contain one-tenth of the fresh water on the Island and as much as 1 per cent of the world's total pure drinking-water supply.

Ruling Soon

The water district promptly took the mining company and the pollution control board to court. The B.C. Court of Appeal is shortly expected to hand down a ruling on an appeal by the water district against a Supreme Court decision upholding the board's action.

The mine began operations last month.

Buttle Lake has consequently been the biggest pollution story of 1966, an inescapable episode in any account of pollution in B.C.

The irony of this situation lies in the fact that the controversy is in large measure a brilliantly-conceived diversionary tactic by the politicians responsible for the far harder-to-defend decision to allow the mine to move into a provincial park in the first instance.

As a Times editorial noted on Sept. 24, shortly after the pollution control board decision was announced:

"Once the green light was given the company to operate a mine in the park it was a foregone conclusion that the means by which the operation could be carried on would also have to be provided.

"But this does not make the Social Credit policy and actions any more acceptable to the many people who consider that legally constituted parkland is a responsibility and a trust which should be honored."

All available evidence indicates the mine tailings will not constitute any public health hazard or even any immediate threat to marine life in the lake.

But all available evidence indicates the possibly highly dangerous long-run consequences of human intervention in the natural balance so carefully protected in a provincial park for the most farsighted and compelling reasons.

The mine is located at the southwestern end of the lake over an orebody of as much as 1.6 million tons of copper, zinc and lead, worth about $100 million and sufficient to keep the mine in operation for at least six and perhaps 20 years.

The annual payroll will probably exceed $2 million, according to general manager Charles Campbell, and annual operating expenditures will approach $4 million, a hefty injection into the economy of the area and the province.

The company expects annual profits of over $4 million on a total capital investment of about $11 million.

Of this $2 million represents the company's share of a 22-mile-long public road put into the park by the highways department, and $1 million — a 4,500 horsepower hydro station which will remain behind when Western Mines packs up its equipment and razes the wooden townsite 20 years from now.

During those 20 years the mine will add to Buttle Lake the treated sewage from the 1,000 residents of the campsite — and the mine tailings containing the fine rock-dust and traces of copper, hexavalent chromium, zinc and cyanide, all lethal to humans and to fish in high enough concentrations.

Holding Pond

Right now the tailings are being poured into a holding pond where final chemical analysis on the nature of the tailings are carried out before they are poured into Myra Creek which flows into the lake.

As soon as a tailings line — essentially a long pipe — is completed it will be called into service to carry the tailings borne along in 720,000 gallons of water per day to a point just over 100 feet below the surface of the lake.

"The lake is 180 feet deep in the centre," says Mr. Campbell, "and we have calculated that we will be able to run tailings into the lake for 100 years without them coming within 100 feet of the surface."

He adds: "As far as we're concerned we've done this as thoroughly as we can because we are aware the spotlight is on us.

"The steps we've taken have cost us money but as far as the whole operation is concerned the cost of disposing of these tailings safely, while significant, is minor in terms of the total operation and the company will not hesitate to see it is done properly.

"On the basis of extensive testing by highly responsible independent metallurgical people," Mr. Campbell says,

Hanoi Hints Reds Willing To Negotiate

NEW YORK (AP) — Premier Pham Van Dong of Communist North Vietnam says his government's four - point demands in the Vietnam war are not necessarily conditions for peace talks but rather a "basis of settlement of the Vietnam problem," the New York Times reports today from Hanoi.

The Hanoi premier's statement, in an interview with correspondent Harrison E. Salisbury, raised speculation that North Vietnam had shifted in some measure from a hard-line stand which blocked the path to a conference table.

Salisbury quotes Premier Dong as saying:

"The big question is to reach a settlement which can be enforced.

"The party which has to make the first steps is Washington. We have no doubt on this point. We cannot press history forward. If this does not come about today, it will come about tomorrow. It's no use to make haste. If we show haste, the question will be put wrongly and we will have to wait again. So let the situation ripen."

Hanoi's four - point demands have been these: Recognition of the rights of all Vietnamese to peace, independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity; pending peaceful reunification, strict adherence to the terms of the 1954 Geneva agreements which divided Vietnam after the French were expelled; settlement of the internal affairs of South Vietnam by the Vietnamese people "in accordance with the program" of the National Liberation Front which is the Viet Cong's political arm, and reunification without any foreign interference.

TALK AFTER WAR ENDS

In the interview, described by the correspondent as a detailed discussion of North Vietnam's views, the premier was represented as emphasizing that once hostilities were brought to a close, it would be possible to "speak of other things."

"The moment the United States puts an end to the war, we will respect each other and settle every question. Why don't you (the United States) think that way?" Dong was quoted as saying.

Some U.S. officials regarded the premier's remarks as hinting a significant shift in Hanoi's stand on peace talks, although some others said they believed the four-point demands never had been intended as conditions to peace talks.

Stolen Treasures Recovered

LONDON (AP) — Eight paintings worth $7,000,000 stolen five days ago in the world's biggest art theft, were reported today recovered intact.

Three of the old masters were found in what was believed a professional robbers' den and others in a parcel behind a clump of bushes not far from London's Dulwich College Gallery where they were stolen, police informants said.

Scotland Yard announced the recovery of the paintings but declined to give details. Detectives were still questioning some men in connection with the theft, the yard said.

The paintings — three Rembrandts, three Rubens and one each by Gerald Dou and Adam Elsheimer—were reported to be in good condition despite exposure to frosty air. Some of the paintings were damaged slightly, officials said.

FOUND IN CACHE

Scotland Yard insiders said three of the paintings were found Monday at a hideout which contained a hoard of other stolen property and some weapons.

They said an anonymous telephone call led detectives Tuesday night to Streatham Common, about four miles from Dulwich Gallery in south London, where the remaining five paintings were found in some bushes.

Ruby Family Claims Neglect

CHICAGO (UPI) — Jack Ruby's family charged today their brother was neglected by Dallas authorities for months before his death.

Ruby's brother and sister made the charges of neglect and said published speculation that Ruby's slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald was a part of a plot robbed him of "the will to live."

CNR Bids To Drop Lines on Prairies

WINNIPEG (CP) — The CNR announced today that it has applied to the Board of Transport Commissioners for permission to abandon 491 miles of branch line in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

A statement issued by the CNR said the application involves 15 separate lines ranging in length from 13 to 80 miles — 302 miles in Manitoba and 189 miles in Saskatchewan — and that no major communities are affected by the application.

MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO

Gordon Rejoins Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP)—Walter Gordon, who resigned as finance minister in November, 1965, rejoined the cabinet today as a minister without portfolio.

OTTAWA—Walter Gordon and Prime Minister Pearson have met for the second time in two days amid strong reports that the former finance minister is about to re-enter the cabinet.

Mr. Gordon himself refused any comment on the speculation that has him becoming a minister without portfolio.

He was caght by newsmen leaving his Parliament Hill office in a rush at noon.

It turned out the big hurry was to skip over to the East Block for another meeting with the Prime Minister, the second in as many days.

The speculation, which said the prime minister had offered Mr. Gordon a cabinet post Tuesday and was accepted, was a startling break from persistent reports that Mr. Gordon was on the verge of resigning his seat in the Commons.

He left the cabinet in November, 1965, following the last federal election when the Liberals once again failed to gain a majority.

It has been no secret since then that Mr. Gordon has become increasingly unhappy with his role as an ordinary member of Parliament and has spent very little time in Ottawa in recent months.

Joe Greene, Minister of Agriculture, commented today: "I think enough of us in the cabinet want Walter back, that he will be back. As far as I'm concerned Walter Gordon is very much needed in the cabinet."

U.S. Draft Refugee Protected in Canada

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—A 23-year-old Hartford man who was featured in a recent magazine article on Americans who flee to Canada to avoid the draft has been charged by a federal grand jury with draft evasion.

Gregory R. Garach was pictured with another young American in Life magazine's Dec. 9 edition. The article said they were among 400 to 1,000 Americans now in Canada to avoid compulsory military service.

A bench warrant was issued for his arrest and his bail was set at $5,000. However, the warrant cannot be served in Canada.

. . . BUTTLE LAKE

"we are satisfied that any operational difficulties can be resolved and the tailings dropped into the lake without any danger to fish or other life in the area."

That was apparently good enough to satisfy the pollution control board which promptly gave Western Mines the three permits they required without allowing a public hearing on the matter.

Crucial Permit

While giving the company everything they asked the board specified upper limits to the chemical content of the tailings and tacked on to the crucial permit No. 163 seven special provisions covering monthly testings during the first year and remedial and emergency measures, and stipulating: "If, in the opinion of the board, the final means of disposal is unsatisfactory, remedial measures deemed necessary by the board at that time shall be undertaken immediately."

It was not good enough for the water district, the municipality of Campbell River or the 18,000-member B.C. Wildlife Federation which demanded a public hearing on the permits. The water district which gets its water from the far end of the lake some 20 miles away wanted the hearing delayed until they had received a report on the situation from the B.C. Research Council — an independent million-dollar research agency.

"We consider no tests or experiments can establish with any sufficient degree of certainty that our water supply will not be polluted," the water district stated.

The pollution control board vetoed the request under a provision of the Pollution Control Act giving the board sole discretion over whether a hearing would be held.

The board's executive engineer, Charles Keenan, explains: "On the basis of all the technical evidence it seemed superfluous to hold a hearing. No one had presented any concrete evidence that anything was amiss."

The board was at once accused of doing the government's dirty work.

"The Pollution Control Board is asked to do a whitewash job and that's what's been done," charged B.C. Wildlife executive director Howard Paish.

In fact, informed sources suggest the board was intentionally restricting its function to a purely technical level in order to toss the hot potato back into the laps of the politicians who originally made the highly political decision.

But not even all the technical evidence was in yet. The B.C. Research Council had not yet made its report.

The council dropped its bombshell Nov. 3 with a report to the water district blasting the control board's decision.

This report proclaimed Western Mines tailing system would not work efectively, if at all.

It warned of possible catastrophic consequences for marine life in the lake.

It blasted Western Mines application for containing innumerable errors and deficiencies and claimed there was no evidence the Pollution Control Board had examined these shortcomings in the Western Mines proposal.

It called for a re-examination of the proposals before Western Mines installed the equipment.

Unfortunately for the water district the bombshell proved to be a dud.

It turned out that the report had been based on an examination of an "Information Summary" prepared for public consumption by Western Mines before the design of the system was completed.

The summary outlined a quite different system from the one actually put before the control board by Western Mines.

And furthermore the B.C. Research Council's analysis of the summary contained technical errors including an error of 4,000 per cent in underestimating the dilution of the townsite sewage and the proposition that water would on its own flow upward out the top of a pipe several feet above the surface of the lake.

These superficial mistakes overshadowed the report's valid qualms about the possible toxic effect of the tailings on trout spawning in streams leading into the lake, the largest spawning bed in a stream within half a mile of the discharge point.

The report was immediately withdrawn before the press could obtain it, and then reissued after the correction of "minor errors," as one of the report's signers, Dr. Craig Walden, head of the council's applied biology division, put it to The Times.

The main change was the report's conclusion.

The revised report, issued under the name of the council's engineering head as well as the original two signers, concluded:

"Many questions have arisen from this study regarding the overall effectiveness of the waste discharge scheme proposed by Western Mines Ltd. and from the lack of sufficient technical information for adequate evaluation of the proposed scheme.

Serious Problems

"Its failure to function effectively could lead to serious problems regarding the drinking water quality, sports fishing potential and recreational value of the waters of Buttle Lake.

"It is suggested that to more clearly delineate these problems further study would be required. If such work could not be completed for incorporation of its findings into the design of the actual tailings disposal system, then the design should anticipate modifications that might possibly be required to make it effective and in addition, provision for emergency waste disposal should be considered as a standby in the event of serious pollution," the new report based on the original evidence concluded.

A new clause was inserted in the body of the report conceding:

"The Information Summary included with Western Mines' application was found to contain omissions and technical errors and as a result it is considered to be only of limited use as an overall summary of the technical problems involved in the disposal of the mine tailings."

Wrong Data

At the outset, then, the report in effect admitted it was based largely on wrong information, and in the conclusion, still ostensibly based on the original analysis, the original blast became a half-hearted slap on the wrist.

When even this watered-down report was seized upon by opponents of the control board action the head of the council, Dr. P. C. Trussell, under considerable pressure, in effect completely repudiated the original report.

"The principles upon which the tailing disposal system is based are considered to be sound," Dr. Trussell said, "and the council believes that a well-designed system based on these principles would maintain chemical contamination and turbidity well under control so that the purity of waters in and passing from Buttle Lake would not be impaired insofar as human health and fish life are concerned."

The apologetic noises made by the retreating council drowned out the warnings of serious students of the problem.

On the basis of two years' intensive study of Buttle Lake and the other lakes in the Buttle system, University of Victoria biologist Dr. Alan Austin warns the Western Mines action may have unforeseeable and immeasurable consequences.

"Has it occurred to the parties involved," asks Dr. Austin, "that the Buttle Lake-Campbell Lakes water system contains what is very probably some of the best quality water in the world.

"Its price per gallon in the year 2,000 is difficult to estimate, but I would place it at a figure much above that of the copper at the same time.

'Nature Park'

"And primarily Buttle Lake is a nature park," he points out, "a reserve of wild organisms both on land and in the water allowed to follow undisturbed their own path of natural development the result of which may be invaluable to us in the future apart from their present esthetic and social advantages.

"It is impossible to foresee the direction that our interests in living organisms will take.

"As our populations increase our demands on resources expand not just for recreation, tourisn, sightseeing, sports, but solid economic demands for wild types from wilderness areas for plant and animal breeding.

"This is management for our very survival.

"Perhaps for all other unreserved waterways we just can't wait," Dr. Austin admits.

"But at least for the reserved waterways we must have an intelligent, far-sighted conservation plan.

"Our future may hinge on it."

Toothache Remedy 'Got to Him'

A man who told central court a rum-soaked "wad" used to ease a toothache pain "got to him" was fined $300 Tuesday for impaired driving.

Pleading guilty the the charge, James B. Noble, 1419 Harrison, said he had only had "a couple" of beers the evening of Jan. 1 when he began to drive home with the toothache remedy in his mouth.

"There must be better ways of taking care of a toothache," Magistrate William Ostler told him.

Esquimalt police arrested him after he hit another car.

Noble's licence was also suspended.

Jack Payne, 2070 Oak Bay, was fined $350 after he pleaded guilty to driving while impaired Monday evening.

Court was told he collided with a firebox on Government St. A breathalyzer test gave a reading of .26 per cent.

REPORT ASKED

Magistrate Ostler ordered a report on the question of Payne's retention of his licence.

In traffic court William Simpson, 1291 Denman was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for four months on an impaired driving offence Nov. 26.

He was also fined $40 on a careless driving charge.

Fined $40 each in traffic court for careless driving offences were:

Jesse Barwise, 408 St. Charles; Willard Dawson, 3182 Metchosin; Raymond Hunt, 311 Maitland; Melvin McDougall, 1243 Judge Place; John Newell, 419 Luxton; Edith Reid, 83 Regina; David Rogers, 1429 Vining; Sharon Stennes, 2483 Cranmore.

Harry Johnston, 136 Burnside W., was fined $50 on a careless driving charge.

Richard Ballard, 1022 Summit, paid a total of $80 on charges of failing to yield, being a learner driver unaccompanied by a licenced driver, and being a minor without insurance.

Strike Over

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal International Airport's service workers were back on their jobs refuelling airliners at 1 a.m. today after ratifying settlement terms to end their four-day strike.

Nat Gray, representative for the International Association of Machinists, said Tuesday night there was much dissatisfaction with the agreement with Consolidated Aviation and Fuelling Service Ltd., although it was ratified by a large majority.

MAYOR PROMISES ACTION

War Declared on Hoodlumism

Violence and vandalism will get short shrift from Victoria's Chief Magistrate in 1967.

In his inaugural address Tuesday Mayor Hugh Stephen said he would encourage by every means possible "the removal of those causes of neglect and abuse which lead to . . . social disorder."

But he also warned that under his administration lawlessness would not be tolerated.

"We must not shrink from taking whatever steps are necessary to the swift arrest and punishment of the offenders," he said.

"No city can longer prosper unless its citizens can go about their business in a reasonable assurance of peace and safety.

"I feel it is my prime duty as Chief Magistrate of this city to serve notice now that the forces of lawlessness will not be tolerated in Victoria; and I shall not shrink from requesting of council the funds necessary to ensure that the Queen's Peace prevails within our boundaries."

Mayor Stephen said that although juvenile crime appeared to have levelled off in the city, he was alarmed by the growing incidence of violence and vandalism.

He cited vandalism in Centennial Square and Ross Bay cemetery as examples of the lawlessness the city would not tolerate.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Except for a few clear areas, cloud was general over the forecast regions Tuesday night. A few showers occurred along the coast. Intermittent rain fell over the lower mainland and a few snowflurries over the southern interior.

Most of the associated precipitation will remain south but intermittent rain will continue over southwestern B.C. and snowflurries over the southern interior. Showers of snow or rain and snow mixed are expected to persist along the coast.

RCMP IN B.C.

News Blackout Not Intended

By Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—A partial RCMP news blackout in B.C. is a misunderstanding of a federal directive, Solicitor-General Larry Pennell said today.

He stated a directive he sent out recently was not intended to interfere with the normal flow of information of public interest.

Pennell added that the instruction stated there were to be no coments issued concerning policy matters, and that care was to be exercised in information released.

But the directive—issued to RCMP across Canada, to federal prison personnel, and other groups under the minister—has resulted in a partial news blackout in B.C.

Some RCMP detachments will hardly confirm they exist let alone release information on accidents, fires and other incidents.

But Pennell said in Ottawa today that this was not the intention.

He stated the directive was the result of information divulged that should not have been.

The solicitor-general cited one incident in which a prison official stated publicly that a new jail was to be built in a certain location, when in fact th matter still was under consideration.

He said another concerned release of information about an arrested man.

Information was given that police were sure they had the right man becase his fingerprints had been checked out in Ottawa.

The solicitor-general said this was damaging to the man involved, and that such information was improper.

"In police matters things have to be done very carefully," said Pennell.

The solicitor-general said it appeared, however, that his directive had built up as it was passed down the line.

Pennell stated he would take up the matter with RCMP headquarters.

Labor Council Raps O'Neal on Bugging

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver and District Labor Council Tuesday night condemned union leader Pat O'Neal for his part in a bugging incident involving a rival trade union convention at a downtown hotel.

A resolution adopted by the council called on the B.C. Federation of Labor to request Mr. O'Neal's resignation from its executive council meeting if Mr. O'Neal attends.

Mr. O'Neal has admitted hiring a private detective to get information about what he called intimidation tactics by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada against his union, the rival International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

The labor council Tuesday also called on the B.C. federation to dissociate itself from the bugging episode and "any other invasion of individual privacy."

Last month the Duncan-Nanaimo Labor Council also called for Mr. O'Neal's resignation from the executive of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Later, the Canadian Labor Congress sent a telegram to all B.C. labor councils urging them to "avoid reference to union matters now under investigation by royal commission.

Comment before inquiry has concluded would be highly improper and would leave the council in a very vulnerable position before the courts."

The 12,000-member Victoria Labor Council holds its regular meeting tonight.

Police Check Out 'Distress Flares' Off Ten-Mile Pt.

Two reports of "red distress flares" off Ten-Mile Point kept Saanich police scanning the coastline over the holiday weekend.

But no boating mishaps in the area were reported and no evidence of nautical troubles was seen.

Following the first report, shortly after 2 a.m. on New Year's Day, the B.C. Pilotage Authority on Dallas Road dispatched a boat which searched between the point and James Island but found nothing.

"Maybe somebody having a ball. That's all we can think of," a pilotage spokesman said today.

Police searched the water's edge at the point again Monday afternoon when a second similar report was received. Nothing was spotted on this occasion either.

Bus Driver Cheats Death By Seconds

CRESTON (CP)—A bus driver missed death by seconds when a snow slide crashed down in the path of his bus 25 miles west of here Tuesday.

Louie Bax, 26, of Fernie, was driving alone in his bus along the Salmo-Creston link of the Southern Trans-Provincial Highway when the 90-foot long slide swept down on the highway about 2:45 p.m.

"It swooshed down right in front of me. I didn't even have time to stop and plowed right into it," Bax said today.

"If I had come along a couple of seconds earlier I would have been swept over the edge."

He said there is a drop of several hundred feet to Summit Creek below the highway where the slide occurred.

The bus, owned by Dickens Bus Lines of Fernie, burrowed into the slide, smashing the front windshield and trapping the driver.

It was more than an hour before rescue parties could dig out enough snow to allow Mr. Bax to climb out the driver's window.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says trichologist M.D. Harrison to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. He is sending a specialist here to advise men how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Thursday and Friday

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness—and growing thicker hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Thursday and Friday, January 5 and 6.

This news was released here today by M. D. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In his announcement, Harrison named staff trichologist Victor Booth to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Booth will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Hotel Sussex.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no charge or obligation by seeing Mr. Booth," director Harrison said.

"Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home treatment, we will frankly tell you so. But less than 5 per cent of the people we examine are 'hopeless'."

Offers No Cure-All

Harrison emphasized that his new home treatment is neither "mail order" nor "cure-all."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause most baldness."

Harrison said that sometimes your treatment must be changed after a few weeks to get best results. "For this reason, you mail regular reports of your hair progress to the Harrison headquarters in Vancouver.

"Also, your scalp condition is checked personally by a Harrison trichologist at regular intervals."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We can not help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison and his staff tricologists do extension work in more than 100 other cities.

Leonard A. Floyd before and after scalp treatment. Unretouched photographs made four months apart.

Satisfy 95%

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. "We satisfy more than 95 per cent of our clients, and have records to prove it."

"But to overcome the average man's intitial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

"That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Booth in person. Learn how baldness can be stopped, and new hair grown on your own scalp. The new Harrison method permits you to actually stop your baldness and re-grow hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Sussex Thursday or Friday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Booth's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. You won't be embarrassed or obligated in any way. Examinations are given in private.

BRITISH SHIP'S OFFICERS REFUSE TO SAIL

Terrorist Acts by Crew Charged

BRISBANE, Australia (AP)—Twelve ship's officers have refused to take a British ship out of port, claimmg they have been terrorized for months by four of the crew.

They said Tuesday that in one attack, one man had assaulted an officer while another stood by with a meat cleaver. The man apparently made the attack because he had been refused beer.

The officers said that in the last three weeks, every officer except the captain had been assaulted. They demanded that the four men be dismissed.

The ship is the 7,893-ton Bretwalda, which has just arrived from Japan at the port of Budaberg, 250 miles north of here.

The ship's crew is made up of whites, West Indians, West Africans, Samoans and Yemenis. One officer said racial antagonism was part of the cause of the feud.

The officers said that during the last voyage they slept with their cabin doors closed for safety.

Progress With Co-Operation

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF Mayor Hugh Stephen gives cause for satisfaction on two counts: he takes over a city whose affairs are generally in excellent shape as a result of the work of enlightened and dedicated predecessors, and he shows great promise of continuing Victoria's advancement through competent handling of internal affairs and forward-looking co-operation with the other municipalities which make up the capital region.

This is an auspicious start, and the people of Victoria will do well to support the leadership of the well-balanced council which will manage their affairs for the coming year.

As at every level of government these days, the necessary expenditures of the city press on revenue and each annual budget finds items being cut and pruned which could well have benefited the city. But the management of past councils has been good: the city enjoys a satisfactory debt position and the burden of taxation has been kept within reasonable bounds.

In this regard, however, Mayor Stephen issues two warnings, and they are such as any fair-minded person must accept. He says that he will "continue to demand a complete re-appraisal of the financial arrangements implicit in the changing nature of the provincial-municipal partnership". And he makes clear that while the capital city will "continue to exercise leadership in all matters involving the well-being of the area as a whole . . . there are some just limits to this process, and as our sister municipalities evolve towards full maturity they and their taxpayers must be ready to assume a larger and more equitable share in the solution of those problems which bear upon us all with equal weight".

In the first case the provincial government will be urged to enter upon the basic study of provincial-municipal financial relations which is long overdue; in the second, the adjacent municipalities will continue to be called on to accept the responsibilities of their growth and importance.

The day of the satellite dormitory municipality, living off the civic core provided by Victoria, is long gone: there is no place for such a phenomenon in this age of progressive development and regional philosophy. Mayor Stephen is admirably suited to the task of leadership in this field and he will be working with reeves who have demonstrated a high degree of regional statesmanship in their approach to the common problems of Greater Victoria.

Mr. Stephen touched on some of these aspects in his report: the successful achievement of a Greater Victoria Public Library Board operating in harmony, the commendable transfer of Gorge Park property from Victoria to Saanich, the joint actions through the regional authority in regard to park acquisition and the sewerage study, the greater realization of the need for common action to improve the hospital situation.

These are examples of the growing awareness that the region must act as an entity in its approach to many problems: its components have become too big in stature to be small in policy.

On internal matters, Mayor Stephen lists with approval the many advances recently made—the Dardanelles widening, the Johnson Street bridge improvement, the development of a heliport, the rehabilitation of Athletic Park, and the many benefits flowing from the Centennial Square and Bastion Square achievements. The Blanshard Street urban renewal will of course be the major improvement project in the coming year, but it is to be hoped that the unfinished business of the Broad Street Mall and similar downtown improvements will not be forgotten.

Mayor Stephen rightly stresses the importance of the civic scene as "the historic battleground where the struggle for mankind's allegiance will be finally determined". The grass-roots level of government is the one closest to the people, and the base on which a true democracy must be built. By this standard, the fortunes of Victoria appear to be in good hands for another year.

Encouragement Needed

IT CAN SCARCELY BE A MATter of surprise that there has been no rush of applicants seeking the first $300 Mungo Martin memorial scholarship open to Indians wishing to improve their qualifications in any of a number of educational fields.

Announcement that the scholarship was available was made at a busy season of the year. Moreover, a certain reticence might be expected from potential candidates. There are not so many young Indians taking advantage of training that they have wide experience in scholarship applications.

But since the award is now available, Indian students should be given every encouragement by teachers, Indian agents and band officials to apply. The total sum to be disbursed each year is modest, and may be shared by more than one applicant. But small grants may be very useful in setting a promising applicant on his way to self-improvement, and the honor of being a Mungo Martin scholarship winner should be no small part of his satisfaction.

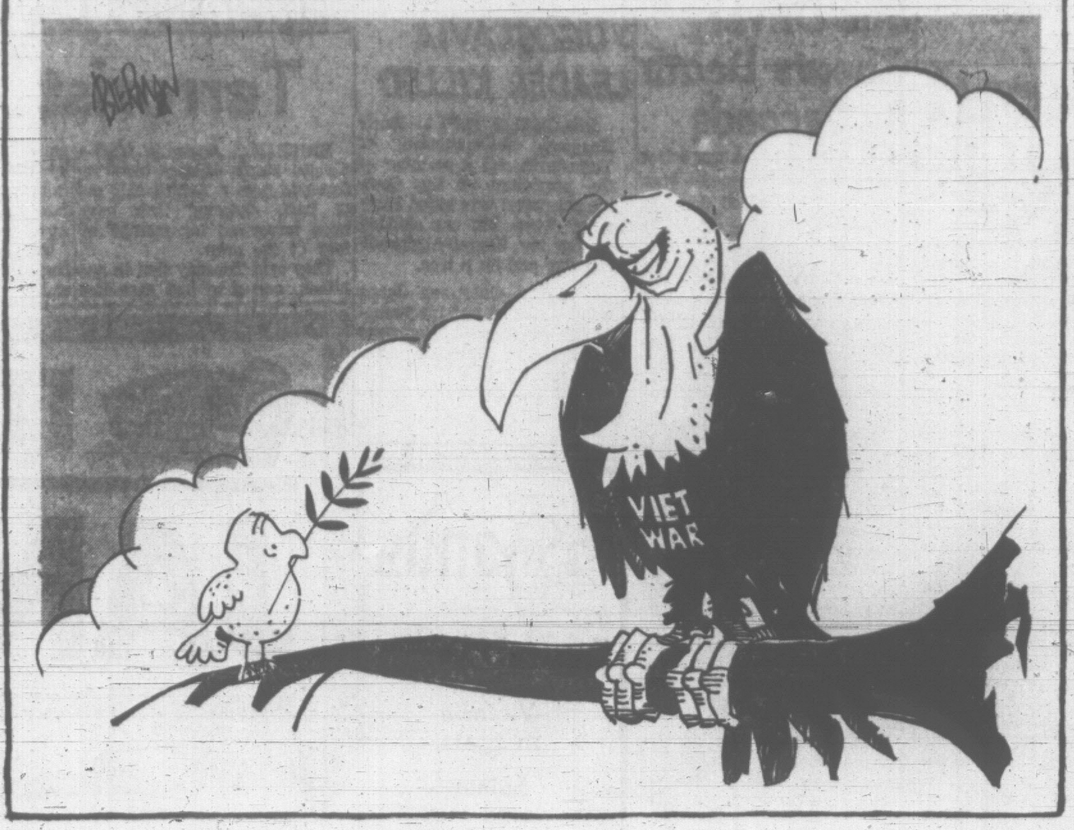
A Gleam of Hope

RED CHINA HAS DETONATED another nuclear test bomb, the United States is charged with killing civilians in Hanoi and has launched a new campaign in the Mekong Delta; an earthquake leveled a Chilean seaport; Britain struggles on the brink of economic disaster; the Middle East is smouldering on the edge of a bloody outbreak; almost every nation on the globe faces problems and fears, and worries about its situation in a world overhung by the nuclear bomb, financial bankruptcy and runaway moral problems.

Under such circumstances it is more than refreshing — it is rejuvenating, revivifying, restorative —to read that twenty Bohemian Waxwings are with us this winter; that 124 species of feathered visitors were observed here in the annual Christmas count and an estimated 55,000 birds are fluttering in our trees, swooping through our skies and feeding in our meadows.

It is beneficial for us to know that these ornaments of nature are fulfilling their migratory destinies in their age-old way, pursuing their lives as though man and his neurotic problems did not exist. But it is equally beneficial to know that there are people to whom these wonders of nature are still important—important enough to warrant a full day in the field making a count and deriving pleasure from the exercise.

The insanities of the wars and war preparations of the world are enough to unsettle any human being—and the hordes of unsettled human beings today are evidence of that. But there are twenty Bohemian Waxwings in our area this season—let us hold on to that one small speck of sanity and fulfilment, at least. It could yet prove to be our antidote and our salvation.



". . . whatever YOUR resolution is . . . forget it . . . !"

By MAURICE WESTERN

Wringing Hands, or Ringing Bells?

Western

THE prime minister, at his pre-New Year press conference, dealt somewhat philosophically with the no rejoicing centennial edict issued in Quebec City by Mr. Yves Gabias, the provincial secretary. From the information which has reached the East Block, Mr. Pearson sees the problem as essentially climatic rather than ideological. Quebec, with some other provinces, has contracted out of New Year's eve, which is likely to be somewhat frigid around the Citadel, but will participate with abandon in the observances when spring brings warmer breezes.

Mr. Gabias avoided climatic details in his public announcement. There may, however have been a practical reason for this reticence. It is only a matter of weeks until everyone in Quebec City will be out in the bracing February air participating, with their customary joie de vivre, in the annual winter carnival. The notion that joy should be confined because of a few degrees of frost is, understandably, not one that a Quebec government would wish to propagate.

On the other hand Mr. Gabias did justify his plan of participation without rejoicing by reference to political-historical arguments at some variance with the centennial theme. The general thought, though not entirely clear, seems to be that Quebec will cash in on whatever is going while averting its eyes from the sorry spectacle of Confederation after 100 years.

This austere approach is likely to present a stern challenge to the people of Quebec. They have suffered many criticisms but never, so far as I know, have they been reproached for puritanism. Champlain had barely unpacked his bags when he launched the Company of Good Cheer and from then on, through the days of the wintering partners, Quebeckers have outdistanced all others in uninhibited celebrations. Mr. Gabias's scheme for rationing joy promises to be a fascinating although scarcely a promising, experiment.

Louisiana Example

The minister's argument seems, in any event, to contain a hole large enough for any would-be merry-maker to drive through with a coach and six. Confederation may not, at the moment, be functioning to Quebec's satisfaction. But it does not follow that Quebec has no reason to celebrate the events of 100 years ago. Had they not occurred, Quebec (whether as province, state or nation) would probably have gone with Louisiana.

It is easy to forget that the main thrust of manifest destiny in the Americas and in the Pacific was felt after 1867. Without Confederation, which made possible railway links with both coasts, the West would undoubtedly have been absorbed by the United States. The English colonies would probably have slipped away too since their economic prospects would have been bleak and British statesmen of the period were by no means happy about defence burdens in North America. What then would have happened to Quebec?

We know what happened when the United States succumbed to the spell of Mr. Kipling and overseas empire later in the century. Mr. Hearst had little trouble in arousing public enthusiasm for a Spanish war offering such modest prizes as Cuba, Puerto Rico and The Philippines. In that premissile age few Americans can have regarded Cuba as a serious security risk. They could scarcely have regarded a Quebec republic in any other light. For much of their history it had been the major threat and it lay astride the St. Lawrence, a major outlet for American commerce.

There are no associate states in the United States and the ideas favored by Mr. Gabias and his party have been frowned on in Washington ever since South Carolina precipitated the nullification crisis early in the last century.

Out of Character

One would think, therefore, that Mr. Gabias — whatever his views on such matters as the constitution and tax-sharing — would have as much reason as anyone to celebrate Confederation. If his spirits have oozed as the temperature has sunk, he will certainly not lack for sympathy in this country. But there seems to be something distinctively out of character in his program of strength without joy.

He is, of course, absolutely within his rights in sternly refusing to fire cannon or carry torches. But it is asking a great deal of French-Canadians to expect them to wring their hands for 365 days when others are ringing bells.

Seeds of Distrust

Manchester Guardian Weekly

Two years ago most people in this country would have tended to blame any violations of the truce on the Communists. It is probably no longer so. Today the Americans are just as likely to be blamed for shooting first, for official American statements are no longer taken on trust here. That is one of the by-products of the war. In the United States, where the phenomenon is naturally causing even more concern, it is called the "credibility gap." We always used to be told that American bombing crews were both scrupulous and skilled in confining their aim to military targets. Mr. Harrison Salisbury has described what he has seen in North Vietnam — the "block upon block of ordinary housing" destroyed by repeated bombing raids. And on Tuesday the Defence Department admitted that civilian areas do get hit.

The Defence Department still insists that its policy is to bomb only military targets, "particularly those which have a direct impact on the movement of men and supplies in South Vietnam." Yet Mr. Salisbury tells of a repeatedly bombed town with none of those targets but only a textile mill and other factories. What cause has the Department given us to believe its own spokesman rather than Mr. Salisbury?

Letters

In Deep Gratitude

The news that the latest Victoria Daily Times "Share with Asian Children" Fund has once again been immensely successful was one of my finest Christmas gifts. Thus, this message is written with deep gratitude in my heart on behalf of the children and adults in Korea, India and Hong Kong who will now be able to receive aid in a multitude of different ways, thanks to your readers' generosity. Laughter will replace tears of obsessing hunger; there will be medicines for those shaking with fever, and little ones will be lovingly cared for while their parents are at work, to provide at least one meal a day.

In the true spirit of this season your readers have shared and cared and I happily join your many friends in Asia who send to each one of you uncounted blessings and the very best wishes for a truly happy new year!—Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director, Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The New Joan

Your Tuesday's "A New Joan on a Discredited Crusade" was read with great interest — especially when the alternative it suggested to Miss (Saint Joan) Southin's reported voice was really the one that saved Jonah the Prophet. (At least, so it seemed to imply.)

More about this Mary Southin and her ideas is called for by a reading of your most interesting article.

There may be certain misgivings about the implied need for Jonah's Whale again now — especially since it may not be a real whale.—C. Carlson, 3760 Saanich.

Old-Time Weather

Concerning the remarks on the weather at Victoria, on Page 1 of your Dec. 27 issue, I looked up some diaries which were kept in Victoria from 1887 to 1905 and which included daily weather notes.

For Dec. 25, 1899, I found the following comment: "This is one of the finest Christmas Days ever seen in B.C. Warm and lovely. Therm. stands at 60 outside the house."—A. B. McNeill, 1141 Hampshire.

7th Battalion

A news story in your issue of Dec. 27, 1966, refers to "... The Victoria Fusiliers which later distinguished itself as the 7th Infantry Battalion CEF."

There is no doubt that all members of the 7th Batt. distinguished themselves. Indeed, in five years overseas the battalion lost 64 officers and 1,335 NCOs and men. It was demobilized in Vancouver May 5, 1919, without a single one of its original officers and less than a dozen of its original NCOs and men. But, in the interests of historical accuracy, it must be said that the 7th was recruited from all parts of the province.

Major T. V. Scudamore, VD, in his Short History of the 7th Batt. CEF writes:

"The hot, sticky days of August, 1914, saw riflemen form the Duke of Connaught's Own (6th Regt. DCOR, Vancouver) Fusiliers from the Irish Fusiliers of Canada (Vancouver), the Victoria Fusiliers and the Westminster Fusiliers, together with detachments from the Rocky Mountain Rangers from around Kamloops and a splendid draft from the Kootenays, sinking their old identity to form a homogeneous whole in the 7th Batt., CEF — the 1st British Columbia Regiment."—B.H.E.G.

How to Range Nations Against the U.S.

Lippmann

THE outlook for the new year would be brighter if in talking about the Vietnam war the United States could get rid of the idea that the country is confronted with the sharp choice between winning or losing the war, between unconditional and immediate withdrawal and the unconditional surrender of the enemy. These absolute choices are easy to talk about. But they represent a failure to think at all. They hide the real problem and make it unmanageable.

The real problem is to find some middle ground between a South Vietnam which must remain indefinitely under American occupation, and a South Vietnam under the direct domination of North Vietnam. There is no hope that the activists in the north and in the south of Vietnam can ever agree to the permanence of the American military presence in South Vietnam. The North Vietnamese on the other hand can have no hope that the United States will withdraw its forces and throw the regime in South Vietnam to its enemies. There is hope only in a negotiated compromise.

The compromise can not, however, be negotiated so long as the President is placed in the false dilemma of victory or defeat. Win or no-win, go up or get out, withdrawal or knock-them-out. To be asked to choose between these absolute and extreme policies is to have to choose the impossible, the unreal — among various forms of nonsense.

There is on one extreme the notion that the American forces can be forced to withdraw, either because they are defeated in battle or because the American people grow weary of the battle. M. Jean Sainteny, who has known Ho Chi Minh longer and has seen him more recently than any Westerner, says that North Vietnam may be suffering from the illusion that American forces in Indochina, though stronger than the French forces were in the '50s, will follow the same course down to defeat.

Dangerous Illusion

If Ho Chi Minh thinks this, he is entertaining a very dangerous illusion. The American military power cannot be defeated by any Asian army that can be mobilized and equipped. The American army can stay in South Vietnam until it is deliberately withdrawn under a negotiated settlement.

But while the Americans cannot be defeated, it does not follow that they can win. Those who are able to wreck a house completely and effectively are not often the same men who can build a new house. The extremist hawks are well represented by the chairman of the House armed services committee, Mr. Mendel Rivers, who wants us "to flatten Hanoi and let world opinion go fly a kite." If men like him prevail — and unfortunately they have been increasingly on the ascendant since 1965 — we shall be in worse trouble than we are in now.

The Mendel Rivers view, which is the theory of the air force, is important because the President, though protesting and resisting, has again and again yielded to it. We can afford no illusions about the consequences of taking this absolute course. If the country presents itself as uniquely and unilaterally entitled to use unlimited military force in Vietnam, it will isolate itself among the nations of the world.

Historical Impact

Chairman Rivers thinks that all that this will mean is that the other nations will make speeches and write editorials and march in demonstrations. He knows little of the world. Once the strongest military power on earth had identified itself as willing and ready to use unlimited force for its own ends, there begins, as we see in history, the formation of a coalition to contain its militancy. That is where things have been pointing since 1965; that is where they will go if we think that we can use our weapons and ignore world opinion.

The self-righteous use of military power will be just as dangerous to the United States as it has proved to be before in the history of nations. The out and out militarist power will unite other nations against it. The tough guys among us who cannot find words scornful enough to express their contempt for those who ask for a decent respect to the opinions of mankind, are foolish and ignorant men. They know no history and they know little of the world they are talking about.

If they have their way we too, like the militarists of the past, shall find that fear of our power and distrust of our purposes will bring about an alignment of the nations against us.

"I GIVE UP! I DON'T UNDERSTAND HOW PEOPLE EAT ROUND PEAS!"

Looking Back

From The Times of Jan. 4, 1906:

"There is no greater menace to the prosperity of British Columbia at the present time than the wholesale acquisition of fine mining lands and other districts in the interior by foreign and home capitalists and speculators who will hold them until the influx of immigrants over the Grand Trunk Pacific. Then they will feed on this tide of settlers by asking their own price."

The above statement was made to a Times reporter by H. Helgesen, Dominion fishery inspector.

Economic Integration Goal Far Off for Latin America

By JOHN M. GOSHKO

LIMA — Students of Latin American affairs probably will remember 1967 as the year when "economic integration" became the rallying cry of those seeking to change the area's wretched state of under-development.

Its theses — that Latin America's progress depends on tying the economies of its individual countries together in some common instrument of concerted planning and trade expansion — has had an especially seductive effect on hemispheric leaders.

From Lyndon B. Johnson on down through the entire list of Latin presidents, it is virtually impossible to find anyone who does not speak of the idea as holy writ. And if the hemispheric chiefs of state stage their expected get-together later this year, their first order of business undoubtedly will be to bless the concept of integration with a treaty or some other formal instrument.

Stirring Slogan

At the same time, however, there will be those who remember an even more stirring slogan — the call sounded six years ago by the late President Kennedy for an Alliance for Progress — and who accordingly will take a more restrained view about the potential benefits to flow from integration.

These are people who concede that integration has limited advantages to offer Latin America. But, they are dependent on the achievement of far more basic economic goals — goals that Latin America is still several light years away from.

For the hard fact is that five years after the formal launching of the Alliance for Progress, the fundamental economic, social and political structure of Latin America remains very much as it was. Essentially, the area remains a collection of raw material producers, each dependent on one or two exports whose prices are subject to wide fluctuation on world markets.

In their dealings with industrialized nations, the countries of Latin America inevitably must sell cheap and buy dear. This keeps them chronically hard up and without adequate resources to attack their internal problems of grinding poverty and backwardness.

Most Latin countries have made their situations even more difficult through their unwillingness to tackle the really hard reforms called for by the Alliance. These needed reforms are land distribution, increased education, an equitable tax structure and measures to stem the flight of capital.

Even the lengthy strides toward industrial development, especially those in Mexico, Brazil and Argentina, have shown little promise of a real solution to Latin economic problems. Almost exclusively, they involve inefficient, import-substitute industries that require extensive tariff protection and make no contribution toward creation of a new export base able to lessen the dependence on raw material exports.

For all these reasons, the great hopes being pinned on integration strike observers as wistful and premature. It can perform an important function, such as in Central America whose tiny, contiguous countries have been able to forge ahead by pooling their individually meagre resources.

But on a wider scale, it is naive to expect that integration will do for Latin America what the Common Market did for Europe. When President Johnson proclaims that "widened markets . . . lead to increased trade, to more efficient production and to greater prosperity," he is forgetting that the countries involved first must have something to sell each other.

PICCARD

Without Gulf Stream Britain Like Labrador

By DAVID ENGLAND

The Gulf Stream Drift, one of the most important influences on the life of much of Europe, is soon to have its first undersea exploration, a mystery-delving venture by mesoscaph by Jacques Piccard. The findings, assembled over several weeks, are expected to add significantly to knowledge about this vast current.

LONDON — Dr. Jacques Piccard, son of the famous Belgian pioneer Auguste Piccard, who penetrated the stratosphere by balloon and descended far into the oceans to study deep-sea life, is planning to uncover some mysteries of that legendary Atlantic "river," the Gulf Stream Drift.

He is working on the design of a mesoscaph, or medium-depth underwater vessel, in which he plans a survey of the Gulf Stream, drifting with the current for several weeks.

The Gulf Stream, which profoundly affects the climate and food supply of Europe, is one of the greatest manifestations of Nature's might. Every hour nearly 100 billion tons of water pour through the Florida Strait, and by comparison the majestic Mississippi is a mere dribble; even the vast discharge of the Amazon does not reach one five-hundredth of this volume and 2,000,000 tons of coal burned every minute would not equal the heat the Gulf Stream transfers in its Atlantic crossing.

Gift of Warmth

Without its gift of warmth, Britain's lush green landscape would be as stark and inhospitable as that of Labrador, which is no farther north.

But for the Gulf Stream Britain's ports would be ice-locked every winter, and if the Gulf Stream were cooled by 15 degrees Fahrenheit the British Isles, Scandinavia, northern France and Germany would probably become lands fit for Eskimos since the conditions of the last Ice Age would return.

Perhaps the most remarkable example of the Gulf Stream's amelioration of climate is seen on Norway. The current pours from 140-170 million cubic feet of warm water per second into the sea around that country and raises the temperature above average for the latitude.

Shoals of Herring

It brings shoals of herring and cod into the fishing grounds, and the accompanying warm current of air flows over the west coast, making possible the cultivation of potatoes and barley.

Away up northern Norway, deep inside the Arctic Circle and almost adjacent to North Cape, Hammerfest, the great fishing port which is the most northerly town in Europe, also enjoys the Gulf Stream's beneficent influence.

Though its latitude is that of the extreme north of Alaska, Hammerfest harbor is ice-free. In contrast, Riga on the Baltic, 800 miles farther south, is frozen, on average for 127 days every year.

It is accepted that the friendlier climate enjoyed by northwest Europe compared with Labrador must be related to the difference in temperature between the cold and south-flowing Labrador Current and that of its neighbor, the Gulf Stream.

The importance of the Gulf Stream to Europe explains Dr. Piccard's motive for research. He plans to use the mesoscaph as a freely drifting submersible, taking advantage of one of its special features — vertical stability.

Stable Platform

At a depth of some hundreds of feet the scientists will have a stable platform from which to observe marine life and environment.

These investigations will be scientifically significant and have practical interest for meteorologists in forecasting weather conditions for aircraft and shipping.

Marine zoologists will be provided with new data for their study of fish migrations and much will be learned about submarine naviagtion, which is becoming increasingly important. The dive, which will last many weeks, will probably begin in the Bahamas.

While Dr. Piccard's venture will be the first undersea exploration of the Gulf Stream, during the past decade far closer attention has been paid to it than ever before by authors and scientists.

Near Switzerland's Lake Constance, Hans Leip sniffed the moist spring air, "warmed by that mysterious current which comes to Europe from the cauldrons of the West Indies."

This inhalation disposed him to make an exhaustive study of the Gulf Stream, its physical nature, its serpentine meandering from its equatorial source to its ultimate dissipation under the polar ice, and its quickening and sometimes sinister effect upon western people whom, directly or indirectly, it acclimatizes.

The Gulf Stream is said to have promoted in western Europeans a restless energy expressing itself in voyages of discovery, in the perfection of navigation and in the great migrations that have followed naturally these pioneer accomplishments. But it may also have induced a ruthless brutality in the fulfilment of these urges.

Trip Took Longer

The effect of the Gulf Stream on exploration and navigation is well illustrated by an incident about 1770. The Lords of the Treasury in London received a communication stating that for reasons unknown English packers sailing from Falmouth to New York were regularly two weeks longer crossing than the Rhode Island merchant ships sailing from London to Providence.

That genius Benjamin Franklin was called in, and he went to see a Nantucket whaling captain. To Franklin's astonishment the captain asserted that the Gulf Stream was the reason.

He had seen the packets laboring in the current and had advised them to get out of it. But the English, he commented were "too wise to be counselled by simple American fishermen," with the result that the misguided mariners often lost 80 miles a day. The outcome was that Franklin had the Gulf Stream marked on the chart and the English vessels benefited accordingly.

Survey in 1950

Detailed scientific knowledge began with a survey carried out by six ships during 1950 under the U.S. Navy Hydrographic Office. British scientists of the National Institute of Oceanography evolved techniques for taking measurements of deep ocean currents. More recently in 1960, a Soviet expedition carried out investigations to assess the Gulf's effect on climate.

Viet Cong to Determine Future Pattern of War

By MICHAEL WALL

SAIGON — "As you see, nothing, but nothing, has changed," an American reporter whispered during the first of the daily briefings I attended on my return to Saigon after an absence of nine months.

The briefing officers stepped out from behind the screen one after the other to announce in clipped, cold phrases the events of the past 24 hours of war, the numbers of air strikes, the tonnage of bombs dropped, the acts of "terrorism," the numbers of the enemy killed, captured, and wounded, and then to parry the questions in even shorter, sharper phrases, facing incredulous laughter with the unconcern of long, long practice.

Outside the city steamed as always, but the air is bluer and fouler with fuel smoke than before. The traffic, the most congested in the world, augmented by thousands of new Lambretta and Honda motor-scooters, defies control by the police, who now dress in pale, crumpled grey rather than white.

In the purely military field the American, Vietnamese, Korean, and Australian forces can mark up 1966 as a year of remarkable success. General Westmoreland's strategy of concentrating the military effort on going out after the Viet Cong's main forces and destroying them has paid off. The main units of the North Vietnamese and the National Liberation Front have taken fearful punishment.

Every time that the Viet Cong forces have prepared to launch their own major attacks on American or South Vietnamese government forces or to cut lines of communication or to capture an important town they have been spotted, hammered ruthlessly from the air, and attacked in strength by Westmoreland's air mobile forces.

The Viet Cong's main units are not defeated in spite of their punishment. One highly-placed observer estimates that half of the 110,000 main force troops, of which up to 50,000 are North Vietnamese regulars, are at present in safe base camps over the Cambodian border.

•

The Americans hope that they will appear again and again, for, although they have inflicted and will inflict high casualties on the American forces, they can never prevail against the American air power or counter American mobility. The successes of the Viet Cong's main forces have been limited to wiping out small American and Vietnamese units either when they have been ambushed or when outposts have been surrounded.

It is here that the Vietnamese regional and popular forces have taken severe losses. The Viet Cong continue to reinforce their main units with replacements from the North in spite of the constant American air attacks on the Ho Chi Minh trail through Laos, and their equipment and supplies appear to have improved rather than deteriorated.

Today the question the Americans anxiously ask is whether there are signs that the Viet Cong are preparing to abandon their attempts to fight a conventional war with a regular army organized on a divisional basis and revert, in Chinese Communists jargon, to the second stage of the revolutionary struggle, guerrilla warfare. It would seem the logical path for Hanoi to follow, but although the experts who pore over every word that comes out of Hanoi and every statement made by prisoners and defectors are not unanimous, the opinion of the majority is that this will not happen.

They argue that the North Vietnamese army units have not been trained for guerrilla warfare and will not find it easy in a strange country; that effective guerrilla warfare depends on the cooperation of the people of the countryside and this is fast being drained away because of the harsh methods the Viet Cong have been using over the past year to recruit manpower and extort money and food; and that it would imply the defeat of the main units which would undermine the whole Communist infrastructure built up throughout the countryside.

Early in 1965 the Viet Cong were within sight of complete victory. The South Vietnamese government and its forces were in disarray, and it appeared impossible for the Americans to arrive in sufficient strength to turn the tide, North Vietnamese units came south, more, American experts believe, to be there to ensure that Hanoi had control of the South when victory came than to fight the Americans.

In a final effort the Viet Cong threw caution and Mao's dictums to the winds, and coerced the peasants by threats, promises, and where necessary terrorism to hand over the sons, rice, and money for the final push. Can they now, the Americans argue, admit it was in vain, that there will be no sudden or early victory, that the war will stretch on and on?

This may be wishful argument, for the tremendous American fire-power will be all but useless against small squads of well-trained men attacking selected targets throughout the country, concentrating on assassinations, sabotage, and terrorism. On the other hand will it be easier to quieten opinion in the world and in the United States if the war is scaled down in this way?

Thus the patterns of the military operations for the future will be dictated by the Viet Cong and ultimately by the North Vietnamese government. But however they develop, it seems logical to assume that Westmoreland will continue to expand outwards from the bases along the coastal plain, bringing under government control more of the main road, Route 1, which runs from the demilitarized zone down to Saigon and the more populated rice-growing areas alongside, while at the same time holding strong forces ready to go out and attack the Viet Cong's main forces when they show their presence.

But the main emphasis in 1967 (assuming that the war goes on) will be on draining away the water in which the revolutionary fishes swim—in fact on separating the people from the Viet Cong. To this end the role of the South Vietnamese Army is being changed, the entire American civil effort is being reorganized, and millions more dollars are being spent. The Americans have a name for it—Revoultionary Development. Nineteen sixty-seven will be RD Year in Vietnam.

Gov't Hunts Strongman To Put the CBC in Shape

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — What the CBC needs, Secretary of State Judy LaMarsh told me, is a tough-minded administrator as its new operational head, a man who can clean up the feather-bedding in the corporation while at the same time allowing the maximum creative freedom to production people.

Waring

The government hasn't yet found this man. Meanwhile the CBC pitches and yaws from crisis to crisis under the undirection of its lame-duck president, Alphonse Ouimet. Administratively it's in a mess. Those nominally in authority no longer have firm control over the lower echelons, and insiders report that the flouting of directives is commonplace.

* * *

Parliament itself experiences a backlash from the to-hell-with-it attitude that permeates the CBC. Questions asked by the parliamentary opposition are passed on to the CBC to be answered — and are ignored. The Commons never did get the names of the 17 members of the last Parliament who accepted fees from the CBC. Even Opposition Leader Diefenbaker was refused a script of the Quentin Durgens show, on the specious ground that it is copyrighted.

The tendency is to blame Mr. Ouimet, whose resignation left the government out on a limb and created the lame-duck situation while the government seeks a suitable successor. But there is more to it than that.

The government produced a white paper in 1966 out-lining a new broadcasting policy based on the findings of the Fowler royal commission. Some of Fowler's main findings, and consequently some aspects of the new policy, are contrary to views strongly held by Ouimet. The government might have foreseen the possibility, perhaps even the probability, that Mr. Ouimet would consider the new policy as vote of lack of confidence in his administration, and resign.

* * *

But when Ouimet asked for an appointment to see Prime Minister Pearson early in the autumn, and advised the PM that he would like to step down as soon as the government could appoint his successor, he caught Mr. Pearson wholly by surprise. Mr. Pearson and his ministers not only didn't know where to turn for a new CBC president, but they didn't even foresee the collapse of authority within the corporation brought on by Ouimet's lame-duck tenure.

The government would like nothing better than to get Ouimet out and the new man in. But the new man, whoever he may be, is unlikely to buy a pig in a poke. Until the legislation to effectuate the new policy is enacted, no appointee could be sure of the conditions under which he would have to function in one of the most difficult jobs in the country.

First Step on the Gangway To Voyages Through Books

By ART STOTT

The small redhead, whose grin seems to be half an inch wider at each side than his face, looked up from his pillow this morning with a gleam of anticipation. He has returned to kindergarten and this, it appears, is the year for him.

Stott

"I'm going to learn to read today," he announced, and the grin grew broader with special delight.

"It might take a day or two," I told him, "but you'll make it."

He didn't contradict me on the length of time this simple process of learning would require, but I could see he wasn't convinced.

I'm too familiar now with instant coffee, instant mashed potatoes, instant towns, and, at Simon Fraser, instant tradition, to be dogmatic on the point. Maybe this is the stage in history that will produce instant erudition, with time slightly shorter than an instant to pick up such essential tools as reading and writing.

At all events, the small redhead, who is five-going-on-six, will be the man of Canada's second century as a nation for much longer than I expect to be. Granted years of grace, he'll be the one who's teaching me, if I'm teachable.

But right now I find a certain satisfaction in noting the enthusuasm with which he looks forward to being able to recognize letters and word and to derive from them the sense the authors occasionally make with the combination.

* * *

And it is particularly gratifying to see that he already has a small store of simple books waiting to be read.

It should be pleasing to see his eyes transfered from the fantasies of Batman on the small screen to the type of "Peter Rabbit" on a page. I hope the transfer is successful. Peter Rabbit and his friends were close to me as a child. Their violence was less pronounced, their characters less metallic.

For his sake — and I guess for mine — it will be a happy period of his existence if he can find delight in these creatures from a gentler children's literature — and if he steps his way up through Thornton Burgess into Ernest Seton Thompson, through G. A. Henty and Sabatini, perhaps even through Tom Brown and Lorna Doone. I'd like to see him join Robin Hood and his merry men rather than the bazooka-carrying heroes of "Combat" because I think the stories that take a child close to nature and up to the adventure books of an earlier day help to build a sympathy in growing minds.

It will be quite to my liking if he doesn't reach D. H. Lawrence, Ferdinand Celine, Henry Miller and the four-letter-word moderns for another decade or so.

What he pursues through reading will be done by his own decision. Still, I think it of some value to help guide the youngster's adventures through print to give him at least some small appreciation for the reading background behind his elders.

* * *

Not that I think he should be subjected to a molding process which will give him a mental form fixed in the particular pattern of an age that is gone. He must adjust for tomorrow and the tomorrows after that in an age which spins faster than ever before into new orbits.

At the same time it is an age in which the modern young man, insatiably questing for new knowledge and new ways of doing things, doesn't seem to be matching advances in the scientific field without social evolutionary process he'll need to live with his kind.

Over the last few thousand years, the human animal hasn't accomplished this goal. Only in a relative sense has he given more than lip service to the Golden Rule or to the ethics which may check his atavistic tendency to fly at the throat of those who obstruct his path of self-interest.

Now, more than in earlier times, he needs an intensified social development which he may draw from reading some of the better thoughts of days gone by.

These considerations are not worrying the small redhead as he prepares to plunge into instant reading. But the material he will read could have an influence in persuading him to lay aside his plastic imitation of a lethal gun and its companion death-ray pistol.

Peter Rabbit, when he reaches it, won't provide a design for living for him, though it could introduce him to a delightful gentleness — and may even encourage him to eat his carrots. There has to be some value in the book.

Ailing B.C. Skipper of Trimaran Rescued by U.S. Navy in Pacific

HONOLULU (AP) — A U.S. navy vessel, the Lenawee, took aboard the ailing skipper of the Canadian trimaran Limelight in the central Pacific Tuesday.

The coast guard reported that skipper Bruce Campbell, 26, of Vancouver, was suffering from severe constipation and malnutrition but described his condition as good. Earlier, appendicitis had been suspected.

Three Australian crew members on the Limelight said they would sail the triple-hulled vessel to Honolulu, 600 miles to the southwest, arriving about Sunday.

The crew members, Peter S. Wiliams, John S. F. Young and Andrew J. Wardrop, said Campbell had been confined to his bunk almost three weeks and had eaten nothing for the past six days.

The trimaran was on a voyage from Vancouver to Australia via Honolulu and California when the skipper became ill. Williams said Campbell was the only person aboard who could navigate. A coast guard plane was guiding the Limelight to Honolulu.

A coast guard plane dropped a radio and medical supplies to the Limelight, which was flying a distress signal.

The Limelight, with owner-builder-skipper Campbell at the helm, sailed from Vancouver in August.

One-Month Term For Coat Theft

Magistrate William Ostler told Ervin Spill, no fixed address, that he was "a recalcitrant thief."

"Nothing can be done for you."

Court was told Spill, who pleaded guilty, stole the coat Dec. 27 at the Johnson Street hostel.

Japan Rejects 12-Mile Limit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Japan has refused to concede that the U.S. has the right to extend its jurisdiction over foreign fishing operations to a line 12 miles off the U.S. shore, the state department reported Tuesday.

The department said preliminary discussions between Japanese and U.S. representatives which began here Wednesday ended in disagreement. However, it said the talks had been "most useful" and were expected to resume Feb. 6.

Fire, Blasts Ravage Tanker, 7 Hurt

SOUTHAMPTON, England (Reuters) — Fire ravaged the 10,720-ton oil tanker Esso Glasgow early today after two explosions ripped through the vessel as it loaded gasoline at an oil refinery here.

Seven firemen were injured fighting the blaze which forced the closing of Southampton port to all shipping for four hours. Three other oil tankers berthed near the Esso Glasgow were moved out for safety.

The fire started just before midnight after the first explosion.

Five firemen were injured in the second blast at 1:15 a.m.

The blaze was reported under control shortly after the second blast, but flared up again later and was not extinguished until 3:45 a.m.

A fire department spokesman said the fire could resume because the metal aboard the ship was white-hot.

An Esso spokesman said the captain and a crew of 40 were on board when the fire started. None were injured.

A ship's officer said most of the crew were below decks when the first blast came. By the time the crew reached the top deck flames were shooting 50 feet into the air.

'One Hand Tied Behind Backs'

DUNCAN—Opposition Leader Robert Strachan Tuesday expressed concern at the number of municipal bylaws being defeated throughout the province.

Speaking at the installation of Duncan city aldermen and school trustees he said: "I have a great deal of concern for the people being sworn in here tonight.

"They are being asked to do a job with one hand tied behind their backs."

Mr. Strachan said the provincial government is making considerable contributions to such items as schools and hospitals yet decisions are left in local ratepayers' hands through money bylaws.

He said: "These elected representatives find out what is required and then bylaws are voted down for the skimpiest of reasons despite the great need."

"I'm concerned that we're trying to weigh the value of health and education against a dollar bill.

"If there are people against money bulaws because they may make the taxes too high they must attack the taxation system and not the bylaws."

BUDGET INCREASED

Duncan Hopes To Hold Rate

DUNCAN—Mayor Jack Dobson said Tuesday the city hopes to hold the general mill rate at last year's figure of 53 mills.

He expressed the hope despite an increase in the provisional budget from $492,841 to $564,705.

Mayor Dobson told a capacity audience at council installation ceremonies: "We are ready to start a new development plan.

"We are meeting later this month with a team of professional planners and intend applying for an urban renewal scheme to upgrade one or two blocks of the commercial area."

He said the cost would be borne 50 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent each by the provincial government and the city.

Mayor Dobson said: "I hope there will be a third railroad crossing in the city by the end of the year.

"Duncan is fast becoming a commercial city and council is ready to meet this trend."

Anglican Nun Plans 5-Day Duncan Visit

DUNCAN — Sister Rosemary Anne, an Anglican nun from the Convent of St. John the Divine in Willowdale, Ont., will visit Duncan for five days starting Jan. 19.

Sister Rosemary Anne will be guest of St, Peter's, Quamichan, where the rector, Rev. Neil Robinson, is a priest-associate of the sisterhood.

She will be speaking to different groups in the parish and to children after school.

Sister Rosemary Anne will also speak at Queen Margarets, Strathcona and Shawnigan Lake private schools.

She will preach at St. Andrew's, Cowichan Station, and St. Peter's on Sunday, Jan. 22 in the morning and at St. John's, Duncan, in the evening.

She will address Duncan Rotary Club Monday, Jan. 23.

St. John's convent was established in 1884 and is the only Anglican convent of Canadian origin in the country.

Sister Rosemary Anne says more young Canadian women are becoming interested in dedicating their lives to the church.

She says: "Like the priesthood there is a crying need for more sisters."

Tax Rate Hike Called Unlikely In N. Cowichan

NORTH COWICHAN — No mill rate increase is likely in the municipality in 1967, even though the provisional budget shows a rise of $168,711.

Reeve Donald Morton said Tuesday the $2,527,567 budget can probably be balanced by use of surplus funds and reduction of certain expenditures.

The budget shows increases of $40,050 in public works; $31,710 in recreation; and $18,200 in police protection.

A. Vandecasteyen, clerk, said: "No attempt was made to determine increased costs for education."

MORE PRESSURE

Reeve Morton told council it can look forward to increasing pressure of work.

He said: "We must find a solution, quickly, to the sewer problem in the area around Duncan.

"It doesn't appear financially that there is an easy answer in amalgamation with the city of Duncan.

"We have a number of urgent requests to put the original bylaw again with, if possible, some modifications in costs."

The reeve said council must also find a solution to the "vexing" problem of an ice arena for the north end of the muncipality.

EXTRA COST

He said: "The people voted strongly for recreation facilities and we have not acted on their demand because of legal complications (the bylaw is being challenged in the courts).

"We may have to repeat the bylaw at a large additional cost to north end ratepayers."

Reeve Morton said the return of the three incumbent councillors in the December elections was a vote of confidence in council.

"It would seem we should not delay erection of a new municipal hall."

The reeve said that with the engagement of a supervisory engineer, council hopes to make headway this year with more flood control measures; improvements in Chemainus water system reserves; and in long-term road improvement.

FLOOD STUDY UPDATED

LAKE COWICHAN — Provincial government officials are working to update plans and estimates for a flood control program in the Cowichan Valley.

A Water Rights branch team was in the Lake Cowichan area for two days before Christmas checking lake levels and taking aerial photographs.

V. Raudsepp, chief engineer of the water rights branch, said today: "We have studied the problem in the past and are now reviewing our past studies and updating them, particularly regarding costs.

"It is an attempt to produce a preliminary engineering report which will be passed to the affected municipal authorities and the Indian Affairs department to think about."

READY IN MARCH

Mr. Raudsepp said the engineering report might be available to the parties in March.

"If a project develops I can see no other way except through joint participation of the several municipal authorities, the Indian department and perhaps the provincial and federal governments."

Mr. Raudsepp said the federal government might be willing to make a financial contribution through another agency as well as the Indian Affairs department.

MEETING NEXT WEEK

Meanwhile, Ross Scott, president of Lake Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, said a meeting will be held next week to consider promoting a local petition urging central government action on flood control.

The chamber is still awaiting in reply to a letter sent in December to Colin Cameron, MP, Cowichan-Newcastle.

The village and parts of Duncan were seriously flooded following heavy rains before Christmas.

FIVE CLING TO OVERTURNED BOAT

TV Weatherman Rescued

BOAT HARBOR — For nearly an hour Monday five people clung to the bottom of their overturned pleasure boat in the storm-tossed channel east of here.

Exhausted and almost on the point of collapse, skipper Bob Fortune managed to send up three distress signals while clinging to his precarious perch.

Although the signals lasted no more than a few seconds, the last one was spotted by the owner of Boat Harbor, A. R. Kendall.

Pausing only long enough to grab a bottle of rum, he headed for the signals in his 40-foot boat Kenary.

He found Mr. Fortune, CBC's Vancouver weather telecaster, and his four passengers clinging desperately to the bottom of their boat.

"Every wave was going over them" said Mr. Kendall.

"They were so cold they could hardly climb aboard."

The rum soon warmed them up and none of the party had to be sent to hospital.

However one man was put to bed suffering apparent shock.

In Vancouver, Mr. Fortune criticized the flare which saved his life.

"It's no more than a firecracker," he said. "Look away for a blink and it's gone."

Mr. Fortune said he will ask for a ban on sale of the flare guns which are about the size of a large pen.

"You don't discover how inadequate they are until you need them," he said.

DRIVER JAILED FOR 44 DAYS

George Hall Morgan, 36, of Brentwood was jailed for a total of 44 days Tuesday when convicted in Sidney court of impaired driving and driving while his licence was under suspension.

He was stopped by Sidney RCMP officers Monday night when his car was seen weaving on Mills Cross Road.

Morgan was sentenced to a 30-day term for impaired driving and an additional 14 days on the suspension charge.

Nanaimo Rate Unchanged

NANAIMO—This city's mil rate is expected to remain unchanged in the coming year.

This seems certain following the release Tuesday of the provisional budget which is lower than last year.

The budget calls for a total of $4,190,556.

Largest single expenditure is for education—$800,000. Other expenditures include social welfare, $378,700; public works, $154,455, and sanitation, $96,850.

Woman Charged After Fracas

Police said a woman was evicted from a cafe after she assaulted the wife of the proprietor and brandished a pistol.

EX-ALDERMEN NAMED TO CITY POSTS

Ex-aldermen Clyde Savage and Michael J. Griffin have accepted positions on two Victoria city committees.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said Tuesday he was happy to announce that Mr. Griffin had agreed to serve on the recreation and community services committee.

In so doing he switches places with newly elected Ald. Hugh Ramsey. Prior to the election Mr. Ramsay sat on the committee as a private citizen, while Ald. Griffin represented council.

On the new committee Ald. Ramsay will represent council and be committee chairman, while Mr. Griffin will represent the community at large.

Mr. Savage will continue to serve as chairman of the special committee on convention facilities.

HOME GARDEN

Some Little Bulbs Bloom in Winter

By HILDA BEASTALL

The little bulbs which bloom in winter repay the gardener's choice of the sunniest site.

Four or five weeks before the new year arrives, the golden buttercup-like flowers of the Winter-aconite will begin to gleam among their dark green collars, if the spot catches all available sunshine.

Hilda

In shadier spots they may wait until well along into January, for these little bulbs are true sun-lovers, though quite unaffected by cold.

The aconites belong in the genus eranthis and are members of the vast Buttercup family as is also the tall herbaceous perennial named aconitum.

The obvious common features of these plants are fondness for sunshine, and the fleshy tuberous roots.

Eranthis flowers usually open when their tiny stems are no more than a half-inch above soil level, and because they are surrounded by the bright green leafy bract-like collar, we do not notice the absence of leaves.

They appear later as the flowers fade, and continue to grow for many weeks while they feed the tuberous root. Before dropping to the ground by late May, the stems may reach to five or six inches and the leaves almost two inches broad. They resemble the buttercup's.

The tubers should be planted in fall but patience may be needed, for flowers do not always appear the first winter.

However, once a few flowers bloom, increase is assured for the seed will drop and germinate in the soil around the original plant if not too frequently disturbed.

A few of these bright golden aconites close beside a path, or a colony established on the sunny side of a shrub will give the gardener gay greetings on winter days.

'Province Should Show More Courage in Municipal Aid'

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

The provincial government should show more courage in its approach to municipal financing problems, Mayor Hugh Stephen said Tuesday in his inaugural address.

The mayor sharply criticized the provincial ruling that municipal assessments must be limited to a maximum boost of 5 per cent in any 12-month period.

He termed the order arbitrary and inequitable.

He said that such limitations were "at best contrary to any sound taxing principles. At their worst they become devices to force junior and, therefore, helpless levels of government to incur the odium of tax increases which should more properly and more courageously have been shouldered by their senior partner."

Mayor Stephen said that along with other municipal leaders he will continue to demand a complete re-appraisal of municipal-provincial cost-sharing.

He added that the 5 per cent ceiling had cost Victoria "some million dollars" during the year.

Debt Checked

In reviewing the debt structure of the city Mayor Stephen said he was happy to report a great deal had been accomplished in the past 10 years "for a rise of only some $2 in the net debt per capita, from $158 in 1957 to $160 in 1966."

"The city's debt position is exceedingly favorable," he said. "During 1966 principal repayments on debenture debt outstanding amounted to $789,600 leaving an authorized net debenture debt as at Dec. 31 of $9,017,532.

"New debt totalling $609,000 was created in 1966, covering the third year of our capital budget and certain local improvement work. An even more realistic appraisal may be obtained by comparison of the net debt with the taxable assessments. In 1960 this ratio stood at $66 per $1,000 of assessed values. In 1966 it was $63 per $1,000 of assessed values."

The mayor said that the debt picture provided guidelines which should sustain council during the coming year.

Use City's Credit

"No community which has faith in its future should hesitate to pledge its credit for needed improvements," he said.

"The tactical and timely infusion of public funds attracts deployment of private capital far beyond the reaches of the original investment."

Touching briefly on the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme (still awaiting the official signatures of Ottawa and the provincial government) the mayor said the city had made great strides in its beautification projects during the year.

"It is not too much to hope that within a few years the whole waterfront from Bastion Square around the Fishermen's Wharf will change beyond all recognition," he said.

On intermunicipal relations Mayor Stephen hoped 1967 will bring continued co-operation between all parts of the Greter Victoria area which must "be genuinely dedicated to the principles of give-and-take."

He cited the transfer of Gorge Park from the city to Saanich as an example of municipal co-operation.

Precedent Set?

"In the last days of 1966 the deeds to Gorge Park were handed over to Saanich and I like to think that this unselfish but nonetheless sensible action by our city may represent a standard to which all municipalities will adhere as they seek in the coming year to adjust and regulate their relationships one with the other," the mayor said.

But, the mayor warned, though he would urge Victoria council to play a continuing role as community leader "there are some limits to this process."

"As our sister municipalities evolve towards full maturity, they and their taxpayers must be ready to assume a larger and more equitable share in the solution of those problems which bear upon us all with equal weight."

Mayor Stephen appealed to his council members not to underestimate their responsibilities during the coming year.

"It is my hope that as we wrestle with the multitude of detail which comprises the never-ending agenda before us, we shall yet recognize the outlines of the larger challenge that confronts us," he said.

"For in the last analysis it is in man's success or failure, as he responds to the imperatives of urban life, that the future of our free society resides.

"Whatever advances may be won in the larger field of international association, all and more can be lost forever in the streets, homes and neighborhoods which comprise the background of our daily lives.

"Here, in truth, is the historic battleground where the struggle for man's allegiance will be finally determined."

Blaze Blamed On Butt

A Saanich woman returned home early Tuesday afternoon to be greeted by a firey blast of heat and smoke as she opened her front door.

The fire in the home of Mrs. Jean Canfield, 1140 Palmer Rd., was the fourth major blaze since the new year. Two people died in fires New Year's day.

Saanich firemen said Tuesday the blaze at the Canfield home was likely started by a cigarette butt which set a chesterfield chair smouldering.

Two chesterfield chairs were destroyed and flames swept up the walls into the attic, causing extensive smoke damage throughout the house. Loss was estimated at $2,500.

Minors Pay Fines

Fined $35 each Tuesday in central court when they pleaded guilty to charges of being minors in possession of alcohol were: Steve White, 2828 Tudor; Marvin Ridsdale, HMCS McKenzie; Robert English, 4010 Wiseton; James Bath, 351 Kerr.

Swinger Fined $50

An 18-year-old Sooke logger was fined $50 when he pleaded guilty Tuesday in central court to a charge of obstructing a police officer.

Court was told David Crooks "took a swing" at city police constable Douglas Sleaver Christmas Eve, but missed.

Aldermen Privileged To Help Build City

Victoria aldermen are fortunate to be able to help set the city's future course, the mayor and members of council were told Tuesday by Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton.

Judge Wootton administered oaths of office to four new aldermen in a ceremony at Victoria Law Courts while other members of council looked on.

"I wish them all well in their work in service for the city of Victoria . . . they also are fortunate to be able to help determine the future, the design of the city," he said.

The judge's first words were in memory of the late Mayor A. W. Toone, "an able, sincere and gentle man . . . whose qualities are well known."

ENCOURAGEMENT

He said Mayor Hugh Stephen would conduct the city's affairs commendably in Canada's 100th year, and to each newly elected alderman — Cecil Parrott, Percy Fampton, Hugh Ramsay and Lloyd Clarkson — he gave words of of encouragement.

Mayor Stephen thanked Mr. Wootton for taking time to conduct the ceremony.

He said council would do its work this year with far more solemnity as a result of the ceremony.

CANADA

Happy Centennial!

And it will be a wonderful year for you—and for all of us.
Because it's Canada's Centennial year.
One hundred years of Confederation.
Of opportunity.
Of historic growth into a strong, important nation.
To celebrate, all kinds of exciting projects are beginning.
Today, for example,
the Confederation Train is starting its journey across Canada.

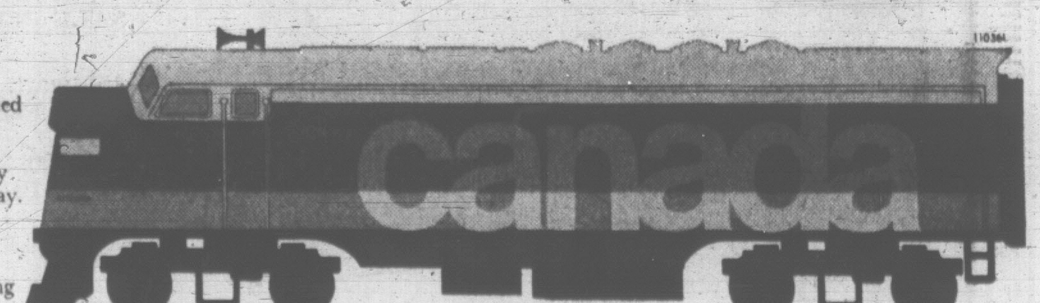
Let's have a wonderful year

Festival Canada

Festival Canada is the largest entertainment package ever offered Canadians. Virtually all of our most important entertainers plus attractions from outside our country will travel to communities—large and small—to help celebrate Centennial. There will be something for everyone: western music, opera, ballet, comedies, musical shows, drama, variety shows, symphonies, and popular music. And you'll find tickets to all entertainment at unbelievably economical prices!

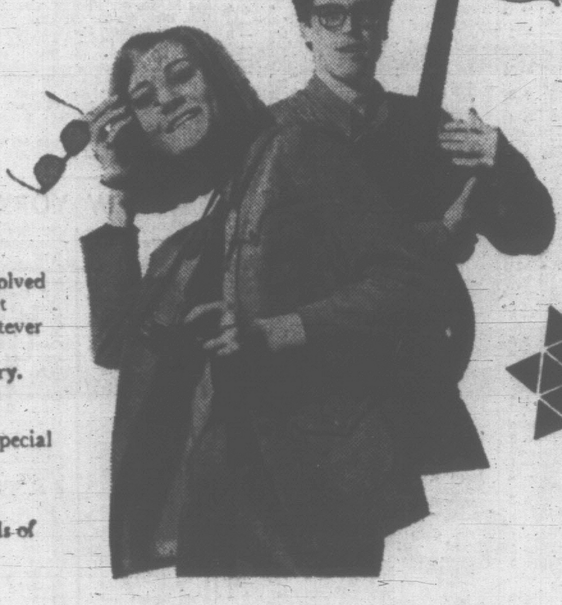
The most exciting train you've ever seen.

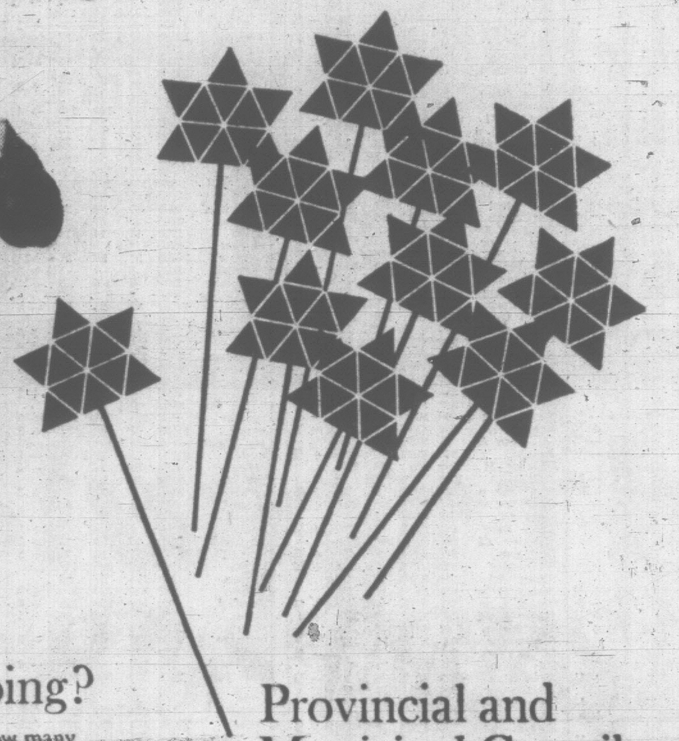
This is the train you've heard about. The one that will visit 63 cities, bringing Canada to Canadians right across the country. The Confederation Caravans are the Train's colourful and exciting counterpart and will visit 657 communities the Train won't reach. Why the Train and Caravans? To bring Canada to you. Whichever you visit, you'll see Canada as you've never seen it before. You literally re-live the growth of Canada. You walk through a primeval forest. You 'live' in the hold of an immigrant ship. You experience the hardships and adventures of our pioneer settlers. You're part of the creation of Confederation. Then, you see how the new leadership gave Canada the strength it needed to develop . . . expand . . . and to help other nations fight for peace and independence. And you suddenly discover the magnificently essential role Canada plays in the world today. The most exciting train in history. At this very moment, it is hurrying from Ottawa to Victoria, where on January 9th, it will begin its cross country journey to bring all this to you!



Youth Travel

Since 1964, thousands of young Canadians have been travelling across Canada under the Youth Travel program. Imagine how a group of youngsters must feel when they visit the Yukon. They see the old Klondike River Boats ... go panning for gold ... visit towns and cities rich in history and meet fellow Canadians whose way of life is much different from their own. By the end of the year, 40 thousand high school students will have participated in this exciting and enriching program.



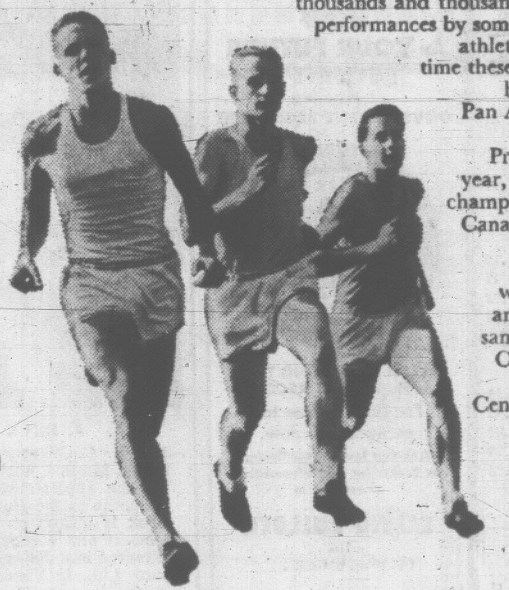


Centennial offers something for all of us.

And almost everyone in the country will participate in some Centennial celebration before the year is over. Already, the Community Improvement project has involved cities, towns, villages and farm areas from coast to coast in an ambitious clean-up and beautify campaign. Whatever your place of worship, in 1967, you will see a startling growth of unity among religious faiths across the country. To date, 32 faiths have joined the Inter-Faith program to foster a greater awareness across Canada of their common objectives and beliefs. The RCMP will stage special performances of their famous Musical Ride . . Naval Reviews will be held on both the East and West coasts . . . we will see exciting exhibitions of Folk Art from the Ethnic groups in Canada . . . and, in thousands of schools across the country, children have taken part in Centennial Tree Planting Ceremonies.

Military Tattoo

This will be a spectacular show performed by two companies, each with 350 men from the Canadian Armed Forces and will visit 40 communities throughout the year. Here in one magnificently colourful and exciting show are 300 years of military history. The costumes, manoeuvres and music will recreate the pageantry, ceremony and historical events from the past three centuries. In cities with arenas large enough, two companies will combine and, with local troops, put on a performance of up to 1,700 men! See it.



Pan-American Games

Of a variety of athletic events held throughout the year, the Pan American Games is certainly the most outstanding. As host in 1967, Winnipeg is expecting thousands and thousands of visitors to witness performances by some of the world's greatest athletes. This will be the first time these Games have ever been held in Canada. But the Pan Am Games are only one aspect of the Athletics Program. Throughout the year, numerous international championships will be held in Canada—including colourful events such as fencing, Commonwealth golf, waterskiing, ski-jumping, and figure skating. At the same time, about 6 million Canadian school children will be striving to earn Centennial Athletic Awards in games, competitions and events to be staged in every school in the country.

Voyageur Canoe Pageant

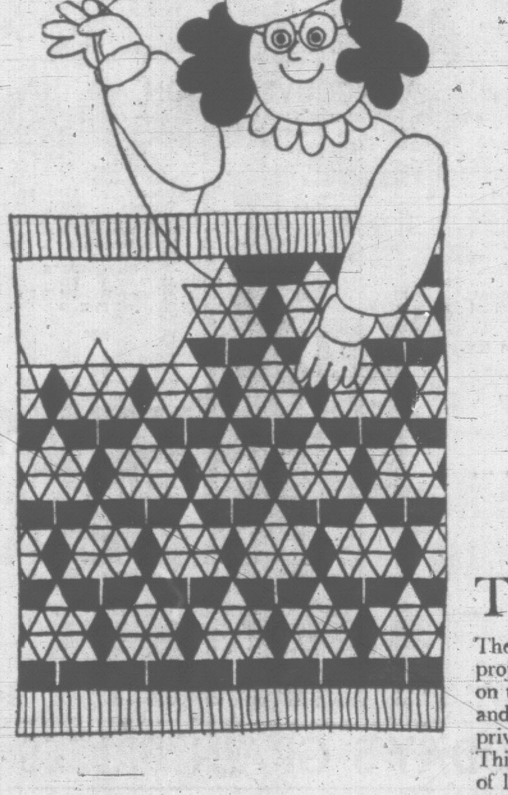
To recapture the colour and excitement of Canada's past, a 100-day Canoe Pageant will be staged. The Voyageur Canoes will retrace the treacherous routes of the Voyageurs from Rocky Mountain House to Montreal, a water distance of over 3,500 miles! The Pageant will operate in such a way that a variety of Centennial celebrations will take place along the way. Historic, colourful and exciting.

Expo '67

One of the most outstanding projects for Centennial year is Expo, the first official world exhibition ever held in the Americas. Over 70 nations are participating, featuring hundreds of spectacular examples of their achievements, their way of life, their finest cuisine and their entertainment for us to enjoy. Ten million people are expected to see the spectacle of "Man and His World."

What's your neighbour doing?

You'd truly be amazed at how many Canadians have taken Centennial to themselves. Each in his or her own way has contributed to the 100th anniversary of Confederation with their own individual project—from the lady who hooked a bright and colourful Centennial rug to the little 12-year old who planted two Maple trees in her front yard.

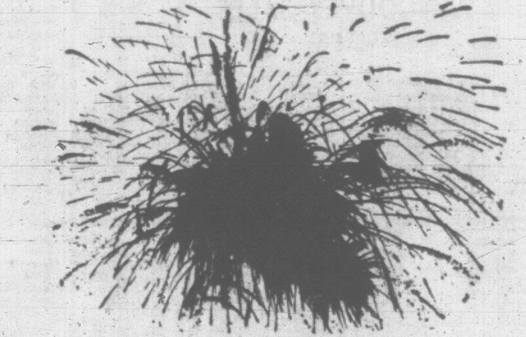


Provincial and Municipal Contributions

Every province in Canada has made outstanding contributions for 1967—and the future. In municipalities right across Canada, parks, recreation centres, new libraries, auditoriums, laboratories, medical buildings, arenas, art centres, and hundreds of other projects will carry out the meaning of Centennial—both now and for years to come.

Industrial Projects

Industries in Canada have poured millions of dollars into exciting and stimulating Centennial projects of their own. Every one is based on the meaning of Canada's history, her future, and on the hope of furthering unity among Canadians everywhere.



The Celebration Begins

These are some of the magnificent Centennial celebrations and projects going on right now and coming in the future. While those on the Federal, Provincial and Municipal levels are exciting and stimulating, more important are the projects developed by private groups and individual Canadians like yourself. This is direct participation in Centennial. And, at the end of 1967, it is this kind of participation that can help you and every living Canadian to realize one very solid truth: "Canada is a great country. And I'm proud to be a Canadian."

"Happy Centennial! Let's have a wonderful year."

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and corn overcame an early weakness and advanced slightly in closing dealings on the Chicago board of trade today.

Soybeans showed some strength in the deferred deliveries but the nearby contracts were weak.

Dry weather in the cattle and U.S. grain-producing areas served as a stimulant to prices in the wheat and corn pits.

WINIPEG (CP) — Prices on the Winnipeg grain exchange today held to a narrow range in dull dealings. Trade reports indicated 1,000 tons of Canadian rapeseed sold to Italy.

There was some activity in rapeseed, but small trade in flax with minor fluctuations recorded.

Oats and barley trade was mostly domestic associated with feed supply and prices were steady.

Some irregularities were reported in the rye market, influenced by declines in Chicago rye and wheat. A firmer tendency developed near the close.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat were all down ⅛ cent.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Domestic Gas Customers On Island Show Decline

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Domestic gas customers are declining on Vancouver Island, according to figures supplied to Victoria Chamber of Commerce year-end statistical bulletin.

Co-existent with this is a drop in the amount of gas produced for the Island by B.C. Hydro for the year 1966 as compared with 1965.

Such a state of affairs adds fuel to a campaign by major commercial users of natural gas for lower rates on the Island.

Groups like the Fish Fryers' Association, Coin Launderers, and the Victoria and Island branch of Canadian Restaurant Association have a legitimate complaint that gas rates are exorbitant, often more than twice those for equivalent consumption on the lower mainland.

And when Hydro cut domestic gas rates about a year ago, commercial rates remained unchanged.

Add to that the fact that domestic rates on Vancouver Island are higher than the mainland to begin with, and there is good reason for a decline in consumption.

Hydro figures show 8,084 gas customers last year compared with 8,347 in 1965. In the same 12 months, Hydro made 3.6 million therms (a unit of measurement) against 3.7 million therms in 1965.

ISLANDERS SUFFER

Vancouver Islanders are being denied one of the most efficient, easy to use and versatile forms of energy by virtue of the price Hydro seems compelled to charge.

Granted, the type of domestic gas used here is different from the natural gas burned by mainland users, costing a bit more to produce and transport than natural gas.

But if a single electric rate can be imposed throughout the province, even though costs per area vary, why can't there be one gas rate?

Areas where production costs are low and volume high could satisfactorily subsidize the high-cost areas.

It is a paradox in a country where demand for natural has is increasing at unprecedented rate and will continue at least until 1995, according to the Canadian Gas Association, that gas growth on Vancouver Island should be deliberately suppressed.

In the same review are some other sad figures, showing that urban buses in Greater Victoria last year carred 8.5 million passengers compared with 9.2 million the year before. There were three fewer buses (at 103) and they travelled about 4,000 miles less for a total 2.826 million miles.

★ ★ ★

We may take the bus less often, but we talk a lot more.

B.C. Telephones reports 3,646 additional telephones since Jan. 1, 1966, for a total 86,068 in Victoria district.

Two big problems facing the Canadian housing industry this year will be the high cost of housing itself and the availability of mortgage money, says Grant Duff, president of the Urban Development Institute (Ontario division).

Most approved money lenders have taken a "wait and see" stance as a result of the increase in National Housing Act lending rate to 7¼ per cent.

More money may be available for housing if a drop in total capital spending occurs this year as expected, he said.

But the demand for housing will be as high — around 150,000 starts anticipated — with no hope of meeting requirements.

Meanwhile, not only is the cost of building mounting, the price of land escalates as more

Bennett Shops For Big Loan In New York

Premier Bennett was among post-Christmas bargain hunters thronging downtown New York today.

But he's shopping for a $50 million loan from Wall Street at discount (relatively speaking) interest rates.

The money is needed to help pay for B.C. Hydro's progressive bills totalling some $325 million this fiscal year from dam-building contractors and undoubtedly he would be jubilant to pay 6 per cent or slightly less for the latest borrowing.

Last June, after a similar trip to Wall Street, the premier was able to raise $50 million at a cost of 5.78 per cent.

But this deal was attacked by the financial paper Barron's and the underwriting syndicate was able to dispose of only $40 million in the initial offering.

Since then B.C. government bond sales on the Canadian market have sold with some reported difficulty at yields of up to 6.39 per cent.

AUTO SAFETY STANDARDS

Some Easing Seen On U.S. Proposals

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stage is set for some give-and-take between the automobile industry and the U.S. government over safety features to be included in 1968 model cars.

The four major U.S. producers and many foreign manufactureres notified the commerce department Tuesday of their inability to meet all 23 safety standards proposed for next year's cars.

They indicated some could be met immediately, but requested a modification of some proposals and a delay in putting others into effect to allow for design and production changes.

Dr. William Haddon Jr., administrator of the national highway safety agency, withheld judgment on the thousands of pages of comments he received from manufacturers and suppliers.

But there already were indications the differences would be negotiated.

Haddon said it will take two weeks just to evaluate the industry comments. He said he won't know until that time whether negotiations will be held on possible modification of the 23 proposed standards.

Under law, his agency must publish by Jan. 31 its final standards for 1968 model cars, a time schedule Haddon said he intends to keep.

The domestic manufacturers asked Tuesday for a meeting with Haddon. They will likely get it since it's been the agency's policy to keep an open door.

Ford and General Motors said they could comply immediately with 10 of the 23 points. Ford listed seven others it could meet if minor changes were made in the proposed standards. GM listed eight of these.

American Motors said it could meet 16 almost immediately while Chrysler said it could meet eight immediately and five more if minor changes were made.

Volkswagen, the West German manufacturer, said the proposed standards came as a shock and if finally adopted would mean an end of its U.S. market.

Rolls Royce, the British firm, said it could meet 10 standards immediately but incorporating all 23 of them into 1968 cars now would disrupt production because of the need to redesign and retool for them.

NEW TAXATION TABLES READY IN FEBRUARY

OTTAWA (CP)—New payroll tax deduction tables reflecting Finance Minister Sharp's pre-Christmas mini-budget income tax increase, which took effect January 1, will not be ready for distribution to employers until mid-February, a revenue department source said Tuesday.

This means that most employers will continue making payroll deductions at rates which have prevailed since last June 1, and employees will have to make up the difference when they pay their 1967 taxes in the spring of 1968.

Saanich to Oppose Truck Rates Boost

Saanich will protest the proposed truck freight increases to Vancouver Island to the Public Utilities Commission.

Council agreed Tuesday night to present a brief to the PUC opposing the proposed increases and also to protest any prohibition of trucks aboard B.C. Ferries.

Council also decided to write and tell neighbors of a house at 5191 Jersey Road that it isn't contravening zoning regulations.

Two letters were received, one of them saying it was understood the house was being used for mentally-disturbed children and Sevenoaks was closed.

James Mair, treatment director at Sevenoaks, said the home was "merely our attempt to care for children for the interim when they don't need treatment but their families are not ready for them."

Foster homes were hard to find and this was one of the ways to meet the problem.

He also denied that Sevenoaks is closing.

Council heard more reports of the never-ending roving dogs problem, and decided to have a general discussion on this at the next meeting of the finance-legislative-commerce committee.

It agreed to pay A. P. Cummins, 365 Ivor, $25 each for seven ewes killed by dogs.

The huge indoor recreational report was mentioned briefly, and Reeve Hugh Curtis said one evening will be devoted to a discussion about it.

Outside Control Feared By Canadians Poll Shows

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says a poll of Canadians shows that six of 10 believe foreign control of a large part of Canadian industry "endangers or could endanger our political independence" and fear the government does not show enough independence of United States foreign policy.

The poll is described as "the most extensive survey ever taken of Canadian attitudes towards U.S. control of our industry and the threat to political independence it represents." It was taken for the paper by Canadian Facts, a marketing and opinion research organization.

The Star says the findings include:

- Almost seven of 10 Canadians believe the government should take steps to reduce foreign control.
- Slightly more than one-quarter of Canadians favor Canada joining the United States some day.

790 WERE ASKED

The Star says 790 interviews were conducted in the survey, in urban centres of 10,000 population and over across the country.

The percentage of those saying the Canadian government should act to reduce foreign control was 67, while 23 per cent said no. Ten per cent had no opinion.

Those favoring eventual union with U.S. numbered 27 per cent, with 70 against and 3 non-committal.

On the question of whether Canada shows enough independence of the U.S., 63 per cent said that it does not while 29 per cent said it does. Eight did not know.

Forty-seven per cent considered that the U.S. government influences affairs in Canada greatly; 40 per cent, moderately; 10 per cent, little, and 2 per cent, not at all. One per cent had no opinion.

In another poll the Star says 75 per cent of the population in the U.S. would favor government action to place more ownership in U.S. hands if more than half the industry in the U.S. came under control of foreigners.

The poll took in 708 persons from Maine to California.

Jackie's Big Line Puts Canada in First Place

Cusson, Dineen, MacMillan Carve Up Czechs, Yankees

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's national hockey team is alone in first place in the Centennial world invitational hockey tournament and coach Jackie McLeod can list three good reasons — Jean Cusson, Gary Dineen and Billy MacMillan.

The trio's skillful goal-scoring was the stimulant Tuesday night as Canada throttled the United States 7-1.

With Dineen dropping off perfect passes from centre, Cusson scored three goals and MacMillan one as Canada moved away from Russia into first place in the round-robin tournament.

The line struck for three goals Sunday as Canada opened the tournament with a 5-3 triumph over Czechoslovakia. The Soviet Union, defending world champions, did more than keep pace by shelling the Americans 7-1 Monday.

The Russians test their highly-regarded passing against the Czechs at 7:30 CST tonight.

"I guess we play well together," said Dineen, in trying to explain his line's 15 points on seven goals and eight assists.

"With him (Dineen), I can really work well," said Cusson, who now has five tournament goals. "I can cut in and know how he will drop the puck to me."

Finally Learns Tricks of Checking

Cusson, said McLeod, has improved "at least 200 per cent. The key is that he has finally learned the tricks of checking."

Marshall Johnston, Fran Huck and defenceman Terry O'Malley scored the other Canadian goals. The Americans couldn't muster many threats, their goal coming from captain Bill Masterton off a power-play scramble in the second period.

The most impressive American was goaltender Carl Wetzel, who made 37 saves. Wetzel made two big stops in the first five minutes, robbing Roger Bourbonnais and Carl Brewer.

CAN'T CLICK

Then Cusson's line hit the ice before 7,600 fans. MacMillan's lob from the side of the U.S. net hit Wetzel's pads and bounced in front. Cusson flicked it into the open net.

After two minutes had elapsed, Dineen carried the puck behind the American goal. MacMillan took up a position on Wetzel's doorstep and pumped home Dineen's passout.

The U.S., making futile probes at Canada's forechecking, got a break late in the period but couldn't do anything with it. O'Malley and defenceman Barry MacKenzie of Canada spent 92 seconds in the penalty box, but Bourbonnais, Paul Conlin and Gary Begg, with Johnston relieving, limited the Americans to one shot.

Brewer's slap shot bounced off Huck's leg to Johnston, who put Canada ahead 3-0 early in the second. Masterton slipped away from a scramble three minutes later, grabbed a loose puck and flipped it over Canadian goaltender Wayne Stephenson while MacKenzie was off for tripping.

Tonight's hockey game between Russia and Czechoslovakia will be televised by Channel 8, beginning at 5:30 p.m.

Huck took Conlin's shot from the blueline off his leg and tucked it behind Wetzel to make it 4-1 and 60 seconds later Cusson took Dineen's relay and left Wetzel helpless with a shot high to the right corner.

O'Malley made it 6-1 with a screened shot midway through the third period. Then Dineen dropped a pass and enticed the American defence out of the way for Cusson's perfect shot that wrapped up scoring with 80 seconds left to play.

The U.S. managed 18 shots on Stephenson and replacement Ken Broderick. Pulled from action after permitting two easy goals in the first five minutes against Czechoslovakia, Broderick stopped dangerous third-period shots by Masterton, Don Ross and Herb Brooks.

DALLAS — Vince Lombardi, who is of Roman lineage and holds firm sway over the Green Bay Packers as if they were his personal captives, now is football's mightiest Caesar of them all.

Two National Football League championships in a row, four in his eight years as head coach of the Packers, tell of Lombardi's domination over football's best-known world, the NFL.

There is yet a challenge for Lombardi and his Packers. "Report at Los Angeles Coliseum Jan. 15 and bring toga," is the gaudy defiance sounded by the Kansas City Chiefs, who made it into the Super Bowl by beating Buffalo Sunday for the American Football League title. This happened just a few hours before Lombardi's Packers dealt Dallas out of the Super Bowl pot, with its $15,000 for each winning player.

Lombardi was twice blessed here. His Packers made off with the NFL title and at the same time made his coaching job for the Super Bowl a bit easier. Thanks to the prolonged scare the Cowboys threw into them. The Packers discovered that they could be pushed around and won't be inclined to take Kansas City lightly.

Stram Serves Psychological Ammo

Before the Packers took the field here, their clubhouse television sets had been telling them that at least a couple of AFL teams play pretty good football, particularly Kansas City.

The Chiefs were actually indistinguishable from a good NFL team in the manner of their play. They looked efficient, big and fast.

Lucky Lombardi was the recipient also of a special bit of psychological ammunition coming up to the Super Bowl contest. Hank Stram, coach of Kansas City, unwittingly played into Lombardi's hands while being doused with the victory champagne by his athletes.

"We'll rip up the NFL champs, too," Stram boasted. This was sheer and pardonable exuberance, but hardly in the light that Lombardi represented to his athletes.

Kansas City won its game as a good football team should, seizing the lead quickly and pouring it on. Quarterback Len Dawson demonstrated that he is big league and flanker Otis Taylor was unmatched by any of his counterparts in the NFL game. Halfback Mike Garrett's scrambling and the pass-catching moves of tight end Fred Arbanas equalled anything in the NFL game.

Dallas Stole Green Bay's Game

Here at the Cotton Bowl, the Packers and Cowboys reversed their usual roles. Dallas forsook its accustomed long-bomb attack in the first half and brashly punched two touchdowns through the big Packer line to wipe out the 14-0 lead the Packers gained in the early minutes. It was Dallas stealing Green Bay's running game.

The Cowboys jolted the Packers out of their staid patterns and quickly gave Bart Starr notice that he could not afford to ease up with a 14-point lead in either half. Starr, who likes to deal in handoffs and cautious swing passes, was, relatively, the riverboat gambler with long downfield pitches.

All season Green Bay has been specializing in the short-yardage touchdown, but against Dallas the Packers went for the jackpot all afternoon. Of Starr's four touchdown passes, the shortest was for 16 yards to Boyd Dowler.

Neither Coach Qualifies as Seer

There was evidence, too, that the Packers are growing older, especially in their defensive line, which Dallas' young bucks up front handled easily. Don Meredith was rarely under a pass rush until the final quarter, when the Packers suddenly became a blitzing team.

At the finish, neither Lombardi nor Dallas coach Tom Landry had qualified as a seer. Both were positive it would be a close game without much scoring. Lombardi said he thought 21 points would win it. Landry said, "I think it will wind up something like 21-17."

He would have hit the score on the nose if the two teams had called it a day at the end of the first half.

BIGGEST BEAR OF THEM ALL

At six feet and 224 pounds Russia's Alexander Ragulin, 25, is the largest player in the Centennial World Hockey tournament at Winnipeg. Ragulin's size is apparent as he stands in team box, viewing with some disbelief lone United States goal in Russia's 7-1 conquest of the Americans.

'Hesitation Waltz' Has Been Killing Mariomen

BILL SAUNDERS
. . . has 20 goals

"He who hesitates is lost," goes the old saying, which suggests that when 16 guys hesitate it adds up to a lot of losing.

Losing is what Victoria Maple Leafs have been doing in the Western Hockey League with much more regularity than expected and coach Frank Mario believes the malady can be cured by eliminating indecision and uncertainty.

The Leafs go gunning against Portland Buckaroos tonight at Memorial Arena and Mario is confident his boys can knock over the league leaders if they go to work with a "do it quick" attitude.

"I thought we should have won at Portland Sunday," Mario said today. "We outplayed them but we weren't putting the puck in the net. That's the way it has been going in a lot of our games. We're not capitalizing on our chances.

"I think we have been a little hesitant in our shooting and it has been costing us goals. In fact, we have been taking a little too much time on all our plays.

'CAN BEAT ANY CLUB'

"Actually," added Mario, "it all centres around skating and checking. When we are skating we can beat the Buckaroos or any other club in the league."

As it has been most of the season, having an edge in shooting didn't help the Leafs much in a "three games in three days weekend.

They outshot San Diego Gulls 56-28 Saturday at Memorial Arena and had to settle for a 3-3 tie. At Portland Sunday they owned a 32-19 margin in shots on goal and suffered a 4-1 defeat. Leg-weary for a Monday game at Seattle, the Victorians were on the wrong end of the shooting count (31-36) and on the wrong end of an 8-3 score.

After the Leafs had dropped behind 6-0 in the tussle at Seattle, Maio juggled his forward lines. The club responded by outscoring the Totems 3-2 in the final period and the switches will apparently carry over into tonight's game.

CHANGES PLANNED

"We have to do something and there will definitely be some changes for tonight," Mario said. "We will decide on our starting lines at a pre-game meeting."

Against the Buckaroos, the Leafs will be up against a club that has parlayed a "quick on the trigger" attitude and precision shooting into a whopping 13-point lead over the second-place Vancouver Canucks.

Coach Hal Laycoe's Bucks have taken more shots on goal than any other club in the circuit (1,120) and they had connected for the most goals (144).

Surprisingly enough for a leading club, the Buckaroos are also setting the pace in the business of collecting penalties. Topping the list in minors, majors and misconduct penalties, the Bucks have accumulated 503 minutes in penalties, more than double the Victoria total of 232 minutes.

Not surprisingly, the Bucks have the league-leading point-collector in Art Jones, who has earned 21 goals and 27 assists for 48 points although picking up only one assist in the past week.

When action starts tonight at 8:15, the Leafs will also have to contend with the likes of Bill Saunders, Alain Caron, Len Lunde, Gerry Goyer and Cliff Schmautz, who have fired 20, 18, 16, 15 and 15 goals.

MILLIE LEADS THEM

Centre Milan Marcetta contines to lead the Victora scoring parade with 33 points but he is now only one point ahead of winger Bruce Carmichael.

Here are the Victoria point totals:

Milan Marcetta	18	15	33
Bruce Carmichael	16	16	32
Andy Hebenton	12	16	28
Lou Jankowski	8	14	20
Aut Erickson	6	14	20

Steve Witiuk	2	6	8
Bill Shvetz	1	7	8

Mike Labadie	3	0	3

SENT TO ROCHESTER by Victoria Maple Leafs T rsday was veteran winger Gordie Redahl, who will join Americans to fill vacancy caused by injury to Gerry Ehman. After opening Western Hockey League season with two goals in first game, Redahl has added only four more for Leafs and has been on bench for last four games.

If Punch's Boys Foul It Up They'll Pay to Get in Rink

TORONTO (CP) — The next time Toronto Maple Leafs play poorly at home, they will have to pay their way into the rink.

"Botch up another one here and it will cost you $5 each, the price of a blue seat," coach Punch Imlach warned his players after practice Tuesday.

Imlach, recovering from a mild case of food poisoning he picked up on the weekend in New York, was referring to the Leafs' performance Saturday night against Chicago Black Hawks in a National Hockey League game at Maple Leaf Gardens. Chicago won 5-1.

"They're lucky they didn't have to pay their way into that game," Imlach said. "I was even thinking of making them pay to see the film."

RELENTS ON FILM

But Imlach, who intended to make the players sit through a showing of the Saturday game film, relented and did not show it.

The Leafs are at home tonight to New York Rangers and Imlach plans to have defenceman Bobby Baun in the lineup. Baun missed three games becase of a sprained elbow. To make room for him, defenceman Allan Stanley will sit out.

The Leafs will continue with their realigned forward units used in a 2-1 victory Sunday night in New York. Red Kelly will centre Frank Mahovlich and Ron Ellis, Dave Keon will centre Larry Jeffrey and Jim Pappin and Bob Pulford will centre Brian Conacher and George Armstrong.

Bruce Gamble, who stopped 42 shots Sunday, will start in goal for the Leafs.

KURTENBACH'S BACK

Orland Kurtenbach, out of action with a pinched nerve in his back, will rejoin the Rangers for tonight's game. The Rangers returned Jim Johnson to Omaha Knights of the Central Professional Hockey League. He was with New York for five games while Kurtenbach was out.

In seven meetings between the two clubs this year, the Rangers have won three and tied two.

In tonight's other game, the Montreal Canadiens will be at Chicago against Black Hawks.

A Chicago victory, coupled with a New York loss, would give the Hawks sole possession of first place. New York and Chicago are tied at the top with 40 points each. The Rangers have played four more games than the Hawks.

KERNER PUTS HOOP HAWKS ON THE BLOCK

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Owner Ben Kerner has anounced that St. Louis Hawks of the National Basketball Association are for sale.

Kerner, who has owned the club for 12 years, anounced he had received no offers and would like to see a St. Louis ownership of the team.

One reason cited for the sale was Kerner's arthritic condition.

Kerner is sole owner of the Hawks. He said the NBA team had a profit of $243,975 last year.

Calcutta Fans Quiet As Test Play Resumes

CALCUTTA, India (Reuters) —India made a strong reply Tuesday to the West Indies total of 320 when the second cricket test resumed here free from any repetition of Sunday's riots.

By the close, India was 89 for one, losing B. K. Kunderam who was bowled by fast bowler Wes Hall for 39. He and M. L. Jaisimha had put on 60 for the first wicket.

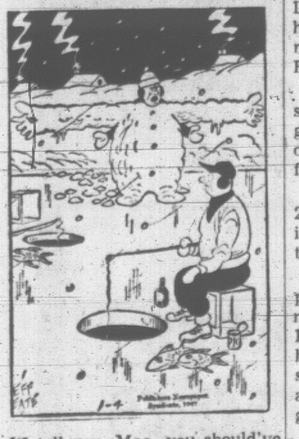
The crowd of 57,000 behaved normally although strictly controlled by the police.

The West Indies resumed at 212 for four and chased the runs. Three wickets fell to the new ball, including Rohan Kanhai who missed a century by 10 runs.

Sunday, rioting fans set fire to Eden Gardens Stadium, India's biggest cricket stadium, and cancelled the day's play.

Special Night Planned For Rangers' Howell

TIME OUT By JEFF KEATE



"I tell you, Mac, you should've seen the one that got away!"

NEW YORK (CP)—The Rangers, currently tied for first place in the National Hockey League, will hold a special night here Jan. 25 for veteran defence man Harry Howell when the Rangers play Boston Bruins.

Howell 34, is in his 15th NHL season and has played in more games than anyone else, active or retired, in a Ranger uniform.

On Saturday afternoon, Jan. 21, Howell is scheduled to play in his 1,000th NHL game when the Rangers play in Boston.

Howell will be the fifth active player to reach the 1,000-game mark. Of the others, only Gordie Howe, 38, of Detroit, has spent his entire NHL career with the same club. Howe has played in a record 1,361 regular-schedule games.

Others with 1,000 games behind them are Marcel Pronovost, 36, Red Kelly, 39, and Allan Stanley, 40, all of whom now play for Toronto Maple Leafs.

Soccer Seeks Top Mexicans

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Al Kazmarek, president of the North American Soccer League, is in Mexico hoping to sign up between 150 and 200 Mexican players for the blossoming U.S. league.

The U.S. league would begin action in February with about 10 teams — New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, San Francisco, St. Louis, Atlanta and Toronto.

Kazmarek is scheduled to confer with directors of Mexican soccer teams to announce his plans.

SOLD TO REDS . . . . . . HE WON'T REPORT

Harvey Still Balks at Shift

BALTIMORE (AP)—Doug Harvey, former NHL great sold by Baltimore Clippers last month, so far has refused to report to Providence Reds of the American Hockey League.

Terry Reardon, coach and general manager of the Clippers, also an NHL team, said Tuesday night as far as he is concerned the 42-year-old Harvey belongs to Providence.

"Providence is trying to get Harvey to report," Reardon said. "If he doesn't report, he becomes my property again."

Harvey argues he owns his own contract under a prior agreement. He said last month he became a free agent as soon as Baltimore put him on the block.

The defenceman, who played for New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens in the NHL, played 24 games for Baltimore this year.

He worked out on Civic Centre ice Tuesday after the Clippers finished their practice. He has moved from his apartment and could not be reached for comment.

Buster Clegg, Providence general manager, said last month he was trying to get Harvey to report.

"He would be a terrific asset to our team," he said.

De-Planked Ski Coach Picks Canadian Team

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Coach John Platt has announced from his hospital bed here the makeup of Canada's national men's and women's ski teams.

A newcomer is Judy Lienweber, 16, of Kimberley who will help fill the gaps in the women's team which has been hard hit with injuries. Barbie Walker of Montreal suffered a broken leg in a bus accident, while Andree Crepeau suffered a broken leg during practice.

Platt suffered broken ribs and a bruised kidney last Thursday when he was hit by a skier on a hill here. He will not accompany the team on its European tour and will be replaced by fromer coach Dave Jacobs.

Other members of the women's team are Karen Dokka, 20, Vancouver; Nancy Greene, 23, Rossland; Garrie Matheson, 19, Montreal, and Stephanie Townsend, 18, Banff.

The men's team includes Peter Duncan, 22, of Mont Tremblant, Que., brothers Scott Henderson, 23, and Wayne Henderson, 22, both of Banff; Rod Hebron, 23, of Vernon; Gerry Rinaldi, 21, of Kimberley and Ken Shepphard, 19, of Lake Louise.

South Africa Follows On

CAPETOWN (Reuters) — A superb double century innings by Graeme Pollock failed to save host South Africa from following on in the second test against Australia Tuesday.

Pollock thrashed 209 off the Australian attack, but South Africa was all out for 353 in reply to Australia's first innings total of 542. Following on, the South Africans were 13 for no wicket in their second innings at the close of the third day's play—still 176 runs behind.

Maye, Landis Key Figures In Ball Swap

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians of the American Baseball League traded outfielder Jim Landis to Houston Astros of the National League for outfielder Lee Maye today in a deal involving three other players.

Houston transferred catcher Ken Retzer from its Oklahoma City team to the Indians' Portland farm in exchange for catcher Doc Edwards and pitcher Jim Weaver from Portland.

Maye, 32, a left-handed batter, had a .288 average in 115 games with the Astros last season. Landis, also 32, had a .222 batting average in 82 games for the Indians.

All Penalties Go to Miners

STOCKHOLM (CP)—Drumheller Miners absorbed a 3-1 defeat Tuesday from a Swedish squad described by team manager Jim Fisher as no better than an average Western Canada team. A Canadian official said poor refereeing was a decisive factor.

The defeat by Brynas consigned the defending Allan Cup champions to the basement in Group 2 of the annual Bunny Ahearne championship.

Drumheller wraps up its tournament commitments today with a game against Russia. Leksand, winner of Group 2, meets Soedertaelje, winner of Group 1, for the championship.

Art Potter of Edmonton, past-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, gave Drumheller coach Roy Kelly permission to pull his team from the ice during the game Tuesday.

The disgusted Potter said there was no way the Miners would be permitted to win the tournament. He described officiating as disgraceful.

SERVE ALL PENALTIES

The Miners served all 11 penalties assessed in the game. Near the middle of the third period, as Brynas nursed a 2-1 margin, Drumheller was assessed five penalties in a two-minute stretch.

A possible riot was averted when an official leaped over the boards to avoid a charge by Bud Syverson, a former pro who joined Drumheller a few weeks before the trip. The crowd later shoved the official back to the ice.

Goaltender Ron Mathers of Drumheller turned aside 35 shots compared with 15 saves by the Swedish netminder.

The only Drumheller goal was fired by Harold Fleming, a former Edmonton Oil King junior. Ernie Braithwaite set up the play.

The Miners functioned without ace forwards Ron Leopold and Tony Kollman. Fisher said business commitments forced them to return home.

JIM GENTILE

Phillies Grab Jim Gentile

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies acquired Tuesday veteran first baseman Jim Gentile from Cleveland Indians' Portland farm club as a backup man for the injured Bill White.

Gentile, 32, often as explosive with his temper as with his bat, was acquired by the National League Phillies because of "the need to go into spring training with an experienced first baseman," said general manager John Quinn.

Davey Tells All He's on the Job

TORONTO (CP)—The office of the commissioner of the Canadian Football League was officially moved here from Winnipeg Tuesday when Senator Keith Davey opened the doors for business.

Davey officially took over as commissioner from G. Sydney Halter of Winnipeg Jan. 1, but the office remained closed through the holiday period.

The only familiar face here was that of Dorothy Lee, who retired last year after 18 years as Halter's secretary but agreed to come east from Winnipeg for two weeks to help set up the commissioner's files.

While transition of Halter's files to Davey's office was smooth, some still had not arrived and Mrs. Lee was busy helping Trudy Hanson, Davey's new secretary, create order out of a moderately chaotic situation.

Part of the chaos was caused by the fact that none of the furniture in the office in the Montreal Trust tower, still under construction, is permanent.

Davey spent the day on the telephone.

"I'm calling every CFL club to let them know we're open."

On his permanent staff with Miss Hanson are former CBC freelance broadcaster Fred Sgambati of Toronto and Greg Fulton of Calgary.

Davey said Sgambati's primary duties will be in the area of public relations.

Oak Bay Eyes Old Problems

By GLEN ALLEN

A homes-and-gardens community in a jet-set world, Oak Bay looks to 1967 with both a set jaw and an inquiring eye.

"Our municipality," said Reeve Allan Cox in his inaugural address Tuesday, "is still confronted with the difficult problem of trying to preserve its amenities as a predominantly single-family residential area, while trying to pay some regard to the pressures of economics and the changing patterns of living.

"The major problem this year," said the reeve, "will be an endeavor to maintain our existing high level of service, improve them in certain fields, and still keep the tax burden on our taxpayers within reason."

The reeve said the same problems face council this year as in other years.

These problems may be insoluble until there is "a major reconsideration of the whole question of service responsibility and taxation as between the municipal governments and the senior governments.

MORE SERVICES

"Municipal governments are being called upon to provide services which are not properly related to their sources of tax revenues."

He said the municipalities of Greater Victoria would press the provincial cabinet for a full and independent study of taxation and service responsibility.

Reeve Cox said specific areas to be dealt with by the 1967 council are:

- Zoning (Study of, and public hearing pertaining to the forthcoming zoning study of the municipality);
- Recreation ("It is no reflection of previous councils in Oak Bay to say that the municipality is not providing its citizens with sufficient recreational facilities");
- Public health ("Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have been paying a disproportionately large percentage of the cost of the Metropolitan Board of Health");
- Hospital financing;
- Library service ("I believe we can look forwared with fairly sure conviction to a branch library in our municipality within the next year to 18 monnths").

OTHER BUSINESS

In other business at the meeting council:

- Unanimously endorsed the appointment of newly elected Coun. Lance Whittaker to "A" Committee, and the Metropolitan Board of Health;
- Considered an SPCA representation to the Intermunicipal Committee that basis of payment to the society be changed to a grant in place of the present system based on number of collections and dog licences;
- Approved a 1967 provisional municipal budget of $1,697,160;
- Voted to apply for up to $950,000 credit from a bank should it be needed for current expenses;
- Extended for yet another year an agreement with the council of Port Alberni, who would assume government of Oak Bay if Oak Bay suffers war disaster.

At a brief ceremony before council convened, Fred Hawes, J. D. Watts and Lance Whittaker were sworn in as councillors.

Cow Men Arrested

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — More than 700 cow worshippers, led by Hindu holy men, were arrested Monday in scattered demonstrations in support of fasting Hindu leader Jagadguru Shankaracharya of Puri.

Astronomers Sight New Satellite

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)— Astronomers have discovered a 10th satellite circling the planet Saturn just outside the rings that are its trademark.

The satellite apparently is the closest to the planet and the rings—collections of particles that reflect light.

The Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, a clearing house for information about celestial discoveries, confirmed the discovery Tuesday night.

A spokesman said the satellite is between 100 and 200 miles in diameter but not visible to the naked eye on earth.

Saturn, about 71,500 miles in diameter, is some 880,700,000 miles from the earth. Its largest ring is 170,000 miles in diameter.

Dr. Audoin Dollfus of the Paris observatory reported to the Smithsonian Tuesday that he had discovered the satellite Dec. 15, but confirmation was withheld until a second sighting was reported.

That came from R. L. Walker at the U.S. naval observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz., who said he spotted the satellite on a photographic plate taken Dec. 18.

The satellite is the first to be found circling Saturn since 1898.

Driver Fined

Peter Walker, 30, of 2790 Kingswood Avenue in Colwood, was fined $350 in central court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to having care and control of an auto while impaired.

Saanich police testified they found the accused slumped over the wheel of his car early in the morning of Dec. 27. The car, engine roaring, was almost in the centre of Ridgeway-Tulsa intersection.

Curtis Aims For Harmony In District

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said Tuesday night he wants to place "particular emphasis" this year on relationships between municipalities on southern Vancouver Island.

And he urged "each member of council to work diligently towards further improving the generally harmonious atmosphere which exists between each component of the capital city region."

With Saanich confirmed by census as the most populous of the municipalites, "I am sure all of us realize the increased responsibilities which go hand in hand with our size.

"Our goals should be the same—improvement of the community as a whole. Our problems are common. Our attitude should be one of mutual trust and respect."

NO PETTINESS

He hoped for discussions 'in a cordial and respectful atmosphere, refraining from pettiness or pointless disagreement.

"United, we can all work for the betterment of the entire region. Divided, we only strengthen the bargaining position of the provincial government and we do a disservice to our common cause."

Reeve Curtis said negogtiations with the city "on two or three questions will be particularly delicate this year. If they are to be successful then a calm and reasoned approach is the only logical course to follow."

He said Saanich's acquisition last week of another city-owned property in the municipality, Gorge Park, offers "hope for similarly successful discussions" with Mount Douglas and Elk-Beaver Lake parks.

"On the basis of a preliminary talk with Mayor Stephen I am quite hopeful that a reasonable proposal will be forthcoming during the course of the year.

"In this regard, however, I would ask that this question be left in my care to work on quietly and when appropriate.

DON'T ROCK BOAT

"It would be unfortunate if any individual action was to disturb what I feel can be called steady progress toward a mutually-agreeable conclusion."

The reeve also referred to several "vital issues" facing Greater Victoria municipalities including:

- Hospital facilities and local responsibilities;
- Early implementation of the regional sewerage report;
- The one-year breathing spell to resolve transit problems with B.C. Hydro;
- Municipal-provincial relations, in which he called for a full-scale financial conference urging Saanich to take the lead "in reactivating this long-standing request;"
- The regional district, with a forecast that the chairmanship (now held by Reeve Curtis) will become a full-time job.

Reeve Curtis recommended that council initiate a once-only Saanich Canadian Centennial Scholarship of $500 to be awarded early in the summer to a Grade 12 student at any secondary school in the municipality to assist in any school of higher learning.

Coun. Lum Off Parks

Saanich appointed its main and subsidiary committees Tuesday night with little change from 1966.

But Coun. Edward Lum was not re-appointed to the Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee. His two-year term has just expired.

He recently recommended Saanich pull out of the joint committee, which liiks after Elk-Beaver Lake and Mount Douglas Park, and spend the money on purely Saanich parks.

Elk-Beaver Lake and Mount Douglas are owned by Victoria although within the boundaries of Saanich.

UP TO REEVE

Asked for his reaction, Coun. Lum said "it is the reeve's prerogative to appoint whoever he wants to the various committees."

He also said he didn't think hs lack of re-appointment was connected with his earlier remarks.

Saanich members of this joint committee for 1967 are Couns. William Campbell, Edith Gunning, Digby Kier and William Noel.

Coun. Lum was, however, re-appointed chairman of the municipal parks and recreation committee.

Chairmen of the other important committees are: Fire, Coun. Alan Newberry; civil defence, Coun. Kier; health and welfare, Coun. Gunning; finance-legislative-commerce, Reeve Curtis; Lands and planning, Coun. Campbell; public works, Coun. Leslie Passmore; personnel, Reeve Curtis.

Coun. Passmore was also re-appointed acting reeve.

Appointment were also made to 26 other committees and groups, from the Advisory Planning Commission to the Zoning Board of Appeal.

U.S. WOMAN SAYS:

'I Feel Dirty In Viet'

MOSCOW (AP) — An American woman inspecting war damage in North Vietnam said Sunday, "I feel dirty. I'm ashamed of my government."

Grace Newman, one of four American women representing the U.S. Peace Movement on the tour of North Vietnam, added in a telephone interview:

"We've seen many children wounded by fragmentation bombs. We've seen many churches destroyed. We learned about families that have been just completely wiped out."

Mrs. Newman, 39, of New York City, said the group learned Sunday about two small boys who were tending a water buffalo in a big open field near a place she identified as Vinh Phuc. She said both were killed by U.S. fragmentation bombs.

"Their brother, who was also wounded, told us the story. He cried and cried."

INVITED TO HANOI

The women reached Hanoi Dec. 21 at the invitation of the North Vietnamese Women's Union.

Mrs. Newman said they have been visiting Hanoi and other cities and meeting with officials of the union and the ministries of education and health.

She said they have not yet seen any high government officials, but were told they may see President Ho Chi Minh before they leave.

She said they have seen many wounded children in hospitals who were suffering from bomb fragments in their backs and stomachs and others from severe burns.

The women said in an earlier telephone interview that U.S. bombing raids maimed civilians with weapons that were not designed for use against military targets.

The other women are Diane Bevel, 24, of Chicago; Mrs. Joe Griffith, 32, of Ithaca, N.Y., and Barbara Deming, 49, a writer for the movement's magazine, Liberation, from Wellfleet, Mass.

They expect U.S. authorities to confiscate their passports when they return home. They made the trip without U.S. government authorization, violating a ban on Americans going to North Vietnam without permission.

Man Charged With Murder Of Girl, 19

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norman Arnold Poole, 21, an unemployed office-machine operator, was charged Sunday with capital murder in the strangulation death of Vicky Spinder, 19.

The girl's nude body, a nylon stocking wrapped around her throat, was discovered in her West-End apartment Friday morning. Police said she had apparently been raped.

Poole was charged after he had been picked up and charged with the rape of a 17-year-old girl.

Detectives said they found Miss Spinder's apartment tidy with no signs of a struggle. She had been strangled sometime between midnight and 4 a.m., they said.

'No Threat Of Strike By Guards'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bev Sherman, regional representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, reports there is no threat of a strike by federal prison guards in British Columbia.

Mr. Sherman was commenting on earlier statements by R. A. Jones, national vice-president of the prison officers' section of the Public Service Alliance.

Mr. Jones had said the guards may walk out to press their demands for a federal reward for the capture of the person who sent a bomb through the mail to a New Westminster guard.

The explosion blew off the hands of Frank Newton, a guard at the B.C. federal penitentiary, and severely injured his 10-year-old son Norman.

Mr. Sherman said federal prison guards are disappointed that Ottawa has not yet replied to a request for the posting of a reward but he said the walkout threat is a misunderstanding and there is no organized intent not to show up for work.

How To Handle A Personal Crisis

Why does a critical turning point in life send one person into a tailspin? And make another one change for the better? Why does a self-assured housewife suffer a breakdown, while a disorderly, childish young woman turns out to be a splendid mother? A reliable worker may go to pieces at his job. A rebellious teen-ager may become a civilized young man. Why? In January Reader's Digest learn the new information psychiatrists have discovered in studying personal crises. And how it isn't necessarily the "strong" who cope with them best. Get January Reader's Digest, now on sale.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1967—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

It would be fine indeed if individual and community problems were to dissolve in the warmth of our December festivities. However, January finds them still with us; and in these aftermath days of empty pockets and turkey a la king, they once more poke their heads into view.

One of them is the tedious, thankless, costly, but essential business of ensuring that our young get sound schooling.

To guarantee them this right, it isn't enough that we merely grant an occasional raise to their teachers.

Indeed, the teachers themselves have not been backward in making it plain that much more is needed; and the chief present requirement is a drastically increased school construction program.

Greater Victoria, like very many other areas, is in the position of having too many children for the classroom space available.

★

If your child happens to be one of the approximate 1,600 crowded into classes that run more than 40 pupils to a teacher, he, and you, are direct victims of this bad situation.

Should he be one of the 8,000 presently in classes numbering between 35 and 40, his condition is very far from ideal.

And if he and you find yourselves committed—condemned would be a better word—to the villainous shift system, you have every right to descend on your MLA with a bluntly-worded demand for remedial action.

In this connection, don't be fooled by razzle-dazzle, sweet talk, or cogent-seeming arguments. The child on shift is not getting the education that you're paying for in taxes, nor is his teacher receiving a fair shake.

I am emphasizing this matter of shifts because it is more likely than not that youngsters in at least six of our elementary schools are going to have the shift system dropped on them when this year's summer vacation ends.

This not through Greater Victoria School Board heel-dragging. The board, in fact, has repeatedly sought B.C. government permission to accept contractors' bids that would make many more elementary classrooms available.

The refusal comes from the provincial government.

One of the schools proposed would have served the Christie Point area.

In fairness, it should be noted that in addition to the fiscal freeze, a sewage disposal headache exists which has not yet been cured.

But there is no such obstacle to prevent immediate action on the projected Newton elementary school of 16 classrooms.

★

The freeze is on—and has been for a number of months in fact—and for an indeterminate future, we can expect only what the government is pleased to approve as essential classroom building.

In this context, "essential" appears to be a weasel word. Are we to wait until overcrowded student and teacher populations have actually been forced to adopt shift procedures before a go-ahead is given for new and badly-needed elementary schools?

If this is the case, as it seems to be, the question is automatic:

Why?

Despite its long-term reluctance to give education its due, why this extreme nigardliness on the part of government?

Federal tightening up may bear on the question, but does not satisfactorily explain it.

Before the coming legislative session ends, we may be wiser. Until then, we can only surmise.

My own guess, in which I am by no means alone, is that Premier Bennett's government is in precisely the state in which many a voter finds himself today.

Over-spent, and over-committed.

In any case, if governmental economy is to be the new watchword, let it be practised last, not first, on British Columbia's children!

B.C. Drivers Hit the Brakes Too Late

B.C. motorists slammed the brakes on their fatal accident rate in the last half of 1966 but sheer momentum prevented them from avoiding a record.

A total of 516 persons died on the roads of the province by midnight, Dec. 31 but the books are being kept open for another month in case any of several critically injured persons succumb, a Motor Vehicles Branch spokesman said today.

The 1965 death toll was an even 500 which set a record.

With 7 per cent more motor vehicles registered last year, expectations were that the 1966 toll would go much higher than it did.

By mid-year, the death toll rate was running 40 per cent over the 1965 figures and MVB officials think this scared motorists sufficiently to produce the considerable improvement which saw the overall increase held to 3 per cent by the year's end.

Forty-one persons died during the last month, compared with 67 during December, 1965.

Statisticians will be busy for some time compiling and analyzing all the traffic accident figures but it already is clear that passengers and pedestrians were the two main groups that went to their graves from accident scenes.

LANGFORD

Early Zoning Verdict

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will make an early decision on the proposed land use zoning plan for the Colwood-Langford Metchosin area.

A public meeting will be held tonight to wind up discussions on the plan, the minister said today.

It will take place in room 210 at Belmont School at 8 p.m.

"An early decision will be made on this matter as it has now been discussed for more than a year," he added. "Public meetings and hearings have been held throughout the year."

13,419 IN AREA

The proposed zoning regulations will affect a population of 13,419 living in a 36 square-mile area.

The plan was prepared by the district advisory commission assisted by the Capital Region Planning Board.

Its main purpose is to guide growth in an orderly way throughout the district. The population is slightly higher than Esquimalt's. Some areas already are suffering from urban growth problems, such as sewage and a need for recreational areas.

The plan designates the urban areas, rural residential, general commercial, extended commercial, motel, industrial, recreational and institutional and limited agricultural.

Langford and vicinity is chiefly affected as most of the district's industrial and commercial businesses are situated in the area.

CONTROL HOUSING

The plan will also control the development of housing, such as setbacks for dwellings. Industrial businesses will be required to provide for off-street parking.

At a public hearing held at Belmont School Tuesday the chief objection to the plan came from auto wreckers and car dealers.

John Deighton and R. Fleming, who operate a car sales business on Matson Road, opposite the Langford Elementary school, opposed a regulation which would make their business non-conforming.

But a brief from School District 62 trustees supported the regulations on the grounds a school for retarded chkldren would soon be built in the vicinity.

One auto wrecker on Millstream Road also objected to rezoning his land to non-conforming.

John Williams, Glen Lake Road, supported the plan as a whole, but said consideration should be given to creating more commercial and industrial zones.

"I support zoning," he said. "And I think the members of the commission have done a good job."

Ask The Times

Q. Why is it whenever I take the 9 p.m. or 10 p.m. ferry from Tsawassen, the upper deck is always closed off, no matter how crowded we are down below? J.B.

A. A B.C. Ferries public relations officer says the upper deck is closed to the public, normally on the day's last run, to clean and wax the floor. The night crew then cleans the rest of the vessel.

Q. As a Metchosin ratepayer I want to know if there is any assurance that the Centennial swimming pool we voted to build in our district won't cost more than the $220,000 we were told it would cost P.S.T.

A. The Regional District of the Capital of British Columbia has set a ceiling cost of $250,000 on the project. There is not, apparently any guarantee that the pool won't cost that much, however.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Pioneer Name Wins Medal For Warship

A trim little lady just five-years-old was one of the first in B.C. to be awarded a medal struck to honor pioneers.

But she wasn't honored for her age as much as for her name.

The honor went to HMCS Mackenzie, a destroyer-escort launched in May 1961. B.C. centennial chairman L. J. Wallace presented the medal today stating:

"Mackenzie the pioneer gave his name to Mackenzie, the river. Mackenzie the river gave its name to Mackenzie the ship.

"Thus the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of British Columbia presents to HMCS Mackenzie, and all who sail in her, the commemorative centennial pioneer medal."

The same medal will be presented this year in hundreds of ceremonies to thousands of living pioneers who were in Canada prior to 1892.

The medal bears a likeness of the explorer Alexander Mackenzie and is being issued to mark the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

CENTENNIAL TRAIN ROLLS WEST; NO PREVIEWS GIVEN EASTERNERS

The Centennial Train is rolling toward Victoria through waves of discontent.

The discontent has been registered by curious crowds in Eastern Canada who are not allowed a preview. Official opening of its historic displays takes place at Victoria Monday and until then, no peeking.

Federal Centennial representative in British Columbia, Jack Golding, reported today the train was west of Winnipeg Tuesday night and heading toward Calgary. It was sent off by Mme. Vanier, wife of the Governor-General, on New Year's Day. It should arrive in Victoria Friday. But over the weekend—no peeking.

Esquimalt to Vote On Fire Department, Regional Parks Move

Esquimalt voters will decide the fate of their joint fire-police department and at the same time vote on joining the regional parks board in a referendum later this year.

Reeve Ray Bryant disclosed that a vote will be held on both issues in a speech at the first council meeting of the year Tuesday night.

The municipality's fire-police problem should be solved as soon as possible to prepare for an eventual decrease in the back-up offered Esquimalt by navy fire-fighters, he said.

"Sweeping changes" in the department of national defence could reduce the support in the future, although the weekend closure of the Naden Fire Department does not affect Esquimalt, Reeve Bryant said.

Setting up separate fire and police forces for the municipality would occur if the change can be made without "a substantial increase in the costs," and if voters approve, he said.

PAID VOLUNTEERS

Reeve Bryant suggested the "paid volunteer' system as a solution to the problem, and referred it for study to one of two newly-formed council committees.

He added he is requesting "the complete co-operation of the various unions involved" to help present "an entirely accurate submission of the facts" to voters.

Council also will push the proposal for Esquimalt to join the Regional District for acquisition of parklands.

Esquimalt opted out of the regional plan last year mainly because it did not wish to be burdened with possible maintenance of park lands.

Reeve Bryant said previous objections had now been "disposed of" since the regional parks work had been limited to acquiring parkland.

Sworn in before the meeting were Coun. Ed DeCosta, who is also acting reeve in Reeve Bryant's absence, and Walter Lock, both re-elected last month, and newcomer Coun. James Bell.

Council also voted a letter of thanks to former Coun. James Bryant, who served 15 years on council, for his "long and faithful service."

Later in the meeting, council:

- Sent a protest letter to Greater Victoria school trustees about the "slowness of negotiation" for a running track at Esquimalt Sr. Secondary. Council also asked that the field area beside the school be cleaned up, graded and seeded.
- Set aside $3,500 for centennial street decorations for Esquimalt.

Two Charged With Raiding Camera Shop

Two men appeared in central court today on charges of breaking into a city business Tuesday and stealing goods and cash worth $435.

William Pick, 2122 Cook St. and Wilfred Humphreys, 1275 Pandora, were remanded to Tuesday for election and plea.

Pick was granted bail of $5,000 or one of two sureties and Humphrey, $3,000 or one or two sureties.

They were arrested following a break-in at Williamson's Camera Centre Ltd., 666 Fort.

Taken from the store was an Agfa camera worth $79, an Optina valued at $31.50, two Polaroids worth a total of $170, a $100 Kodak Retina, and two pairs of walkie-talkies valued at $16 a pair.

Also missing was about $25 in cash.

Entry to the building was gained by forcing a transom sometime after 5:45 when the store was locked up for the night.

Two Mishap Victims Improving

Two accident victims in critical condition before the holiday weekend have shown improvement, hospital spokesmen said Tuesday.

William Badenoch, 23, of 334 John St. was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital Thursday night after a two-ton plate slipped from a crane and crushed him at the Yarrows shipyard. He is in improved condition toeday.

Robert McGimpsey, 16, of 5026 Lochside suffered severe head injuries eight days ago when his motorcycle rammed a tree on Claremont after colliding with a dog.

He is reported in "fairly good" condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital and is no longer in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Gas Rates Hold While Dealers Take Hard Look

Retail gasoline prices remained unchanged today as service station dealers pondered wholesale price increases announced by two major oil companies.

There were dealer indications that Imperial and Shell outlets would sit tight for about a week, or until most had been resupplied at the new wholesale price before making a move.

ONE-CENT BOOST

Most are likely to raise the per gallon retail price by as much as one cent.

But two medium-heavy volume dealers Tuesday said they plan to absorb the added cost.

Shell Oil in Toronto announced its price increase Tuesday morning, the same .2 of a cent which Imperial raised its prices across the nation on Sunday.

The new wholesale price is to cover the 1 per cent increase in federal sales tax also effective Jan. 1.

It applies to all gasoline and other petroleum products except for fuel oil which is not taxed.

A heavy volume Imperial dealer said he is in a position to keep selling at the current rate.

A Shell operator who classed himself as a medium volume gasoline retailer said he would absorb the 1-5 cent higher cost.

Underclothes, Shoes Needed For Fire Victims

Underclothing and shoes for the Thrift family, whose house and belongings were destroyed Sunday in house fire, are still needed.

Captain Gareth Douglas of Esquimalt Salvation Army says in boy's size five and one-half and shoes for girls aged six and seven years are needed.

Capt. Douglas says he has received $35 in trust for the Thrift family, victims of a fire in which a 16-month-old baby lost its life.

The money will be added to $100 by Esquimalt Lions as the initial donation in a fund to be held in trust by the Esquimalt branch of the Bank of Montreal, 1250 Esquimalt.

Further donations will be accepted by the bank.

Experts Urge Auditorium Of 5,000 Seats

Estimated Outlay $2 to $5 Million

Victoria needs a multi-purpose auditorium-exhibit building capable of seating 5,000 persons.

That's the major recommendation released today by the Portland consultant firm of Lund, McCutcheon & McBride.

The firm made no suggestions as to the cost of such a facility nor did it make any recommendations as to location.

But convention committee members who received the report this morning estimated the cost at between $2 million and $5 million.

The committee, in disagreement with several facets of the report, decided to spend the next few weeks studying the various recommendations in detail prior to preparing written submissions on likes and dislikes.

Among the major recommendations in the $3,000 study are:

- A 5,000-seat auditorium.
- 40,000 square feet of display area for exhibits etc.
- A complex of nine small meeting rooms catering to groups ranging in numbers between 50 and 500.
- A catering kitchen capable of handling large banquets.
- Stage facilities capable of handling road shows and musicals plus movie screens, projectors and sound systems.
- Complete air conditioning.
- A car park capable of handling a minimum of 1,250 cars.

The report, several months in preparation, said the convention industry is growing into a major business and that if Victoria is to get its share it must start planning immediately.

DOUBLED HERE

Backing its convention potential claim with figures, the report revealed the convention business had more than doubled in Victoria over the past three years.

In 1963, the report states, there were 5,080 delegates in the city. In 1964 there were 6,850, in 1965 some 8,585 and last year the total hit an all time high of 13,040.

The report stated that with adequate convention centre facilities that total could be doubled bv 1971.

Estimated income from conventions last year was $1,434,000, a figure which, the consultants state, could easily be pushed to an annual income of $3 million if the city makes every effort to build a convention centre facility and push convention sales.

"It should be remembered," the report states, "that Victoria has not, to date, had an organized convention sales effort supported by manpower and promotional funds."

Several committee members expressed concern that if a centre was built according to the recommendations the Arena and the McPherson Playhouse would suffer.

City engineer James Garnett said he felt the Arena "wasn't too bad for many events when the ice is out."

'ABORTION'

"It isn't bad, it's an abortion," replied chairman Clyde Savage. "As an ice area it's fine, but for anything else it isn't very good in my book."

Mr. Garnett said the main thing bothering him about the 29-page report is that the consultants did not appear to substantiate many of their claims.

City treasurer James Bramley agreed.

"Maybe our next step should be to invite one of the consultants over to clarify some of the items in the report," he said.

CLARIFICATION

But the director of recreational facilities in the city, Jack Morgan, said he couldn't see the point in opening discussions with the consultants until committee members had clarified their own thinking.

"Right now all we agree on is that we need a convention centre," he said. "But obviously we all have reservations on some of the recommendations."

His suggestion that all committee members study the report and bring back written observations was accepted.

VICTIMS NAMED

Strong Winds Ruled Out Lowering Boat

A couple who perished after their pleasure boat sank in Georgia Strait Monday night have been identified as Mrs. Velma Moore and George Sauriol, both of 117 Finlayson Street, Nanaimo.

Mrs. Moore died of exposure without regaining consciousness after she was plucked from the water by the B.C. government ferry, Queen of Burnaby.

Mr. Sauriol slid out of his lifejacket and let go of a life ring when a heavy wave carried him away from the ferry as it manoeuvred to pick him up. His body has not been recovered.

Captain Tom Rayner, master of the Queen of Burnaby, said today that winds of between 35 and 40 m.p.h. were blowing during the rescue attempt.

WINDS TOO STRONG

He said the strong winds prevented the ferry from launching a boat to rescue the couple.

Both persons aboard the pleasure craft were thrown in the water when it swamped as the ferry was coming to its assistance. Mrs. Moore was about 45 minutes in the water before she was taken aboard the ferry.

Capt. Rayner said he did not bring his ferry to windward of the woman and lower a boat because of the heavy seas.

He said he attempted to keep the bow of the boat close to Mrs. Moore while crew members and passengers tried to grab hold of her and lift her out of the water.

INQUIRY

The exact ages of the dead are not available but police said both were in their fifties. A coroner's inquiry into the tragedy will be held in Vancouver.

Mr. Sauriol was an electrician at Harmac pulp mill. He and Mrs. Moore were common-law man-and-wife.

Education, Welfare Eat Up City Budget

Education and social welfare will again take the major slices out of Victoria's $14,991,250 budget for 1967.

Introducing his provisional budget Tuesday city treasurer James Bramley estimated that education would cost taxpayers $3,175,000 while social welfare services will cost $1,322,000.

Other major expenditures are forecast for the protection of persons and property with $2,698,500 earmarked in that category.

Included in the total is $1,038,500 for the police department, $175,000 for magistrate's court; $65,000 for the prosecutor's office; $85,000 for family and children's court; $60,000 for the juvenile detention home; $123,000 for protective inspections and $242,000 for street lighting.

The fire department's budget for the year is set provisionally at $910,000.

TIDES CITY OVER

The provisional budget is brought down in January each year as a requirement of the Municipal Act. It enables a municipality to provide funds for various services prior to the striking of the mill rate and the establishmennt of the tax levy.

Mr. Bramley stresses that the budget is only provisional.

"We can't establish a definite budget until we know just what grants we are getting from the senior government," he said.

SEW SIMPLE WITH Eunice Farmer

Dear Eunice:

Sleeves are still the most difficult part of my sewing. I just can't see why the patterns all have so much material to fit into the armhole. I can't get mine to be smooth without cutting off the top of the sleeve. Is this wrong?

Mrs. C. W.

Dear Mrs. C. W.:

To you, and all the others who have written me with the same idea about cutting off the cap of the sleeve to make it fit in would be the same as telling a doctor not to bother setting a broken bone; just cut off your arm, leg, or whatever.

The extra fabric that is to be eased into the armhole is there for a very definite purpose. It gives additional room in the sleeve so that you can move your arms comfortably. Instead of using the largest machine stitch to ease in this fullness at the cap of the sleeve, try using the same length stitch you are using for your regular seams. Then pull the bobbin threads together and pull enough to form a smooth, shallow cap to your sleeve.

Don't forget, the sleeve must be slightly larger than the armhole. Pin it into the armhole from the sleeve side, holding it over your fingers in an outer curve to resemble your shoulder. This will absorb the excess fullness. Your sleeve cap must be nice and round and perfectly smooth with no sign of puckers or gathers. This would be an excellent time to send for my detailed leaflet "All About Sleeves." Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Remedies for Underweights: Gain Pounds, Mild Exercise

Underweight women and girls have their problems just as their more generously padded sisters do. Naturally they are different problems!

A flat chest and pipestem legs are the two we think of first. However, prominent collar bones and hip bones are equally distressing. Today I bring you some remedial measures!

Lowman

Now let's consider the small bust and shapeless legs. All of the defects of the underweight which I have mentioned will be minimized by a gain in weight. So, really try for those extra pounds!

You can increase the bust measurement by enlarging the chest muscles which lie beneath it. You can do this if you will do special exercises regularly. You can also increase the contour of your legs with exercise.

Sometimes prominent collar bones and hip bones are due entirely to bony structure and underweight plays no part. However, women who are very thin usually have these defects in beauty.

Again the goal is — more pounds, along with exercise. The following motions will help cover those collar bones. Stand tall with your back straight and your chin parallel to the floor, arms hanging at sides. Raise your arms sideward-upward to overhead position with straight elbows. Clap hands overhead. Lower arms to sides and continue. Clap hands hard.

About the only thing you can do about the prominent hip bones is to build up the abdominal muscles with exercise. Often flabby, weak abdominal muscles cause the hip bones to stick out more.

For first aid while waiting for the results of exercise choose your clothes carefully. Prominent hip bones can be hidden by full skirts. The pleated ones which are so fashionable now are great for this. Materials should have body and clothes fullness.

Fullness over the collar bones is also in order. Stoles of the same material as dresses are helpful. Scarves are good.

If you would like to have my booklet "Your Bust" send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it. This booklet gives you exercises for increasing the bust measurement, directions for protecting your bustline during pregnancy and lactation, and other valuable information. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Start on Right Foot With Floor Savers

By Penny Saver

The Saver household is starting the year off on the right foot and in a new home. Moving days are hectic for anyone, but I'm sure our family will never survive another! The attic and basement storeroom were two scenes of wails of protest from the whole family when "ogre Penny" decided that the age-old treasures hidden in these rooms just had to go, and not to the new home, either. Despite a watchful eye, some of these items still managed to find their way to the new house.

Getting rid of these ancient dust-collectors was one resolution that "hit the dust" (if you'll pardon the cliche) already. That just proves that the rest of the family is craftier than I am.

There's one thing that I'm stubbornly enforcing in the new home. I'm training the family to use an item I found in one store that will help keep floors and carpets spotless. It's a boot tray that holds a family of muddy, wet boots. Place one just inside the door. These plastic trays have rims around them to keep the water inside the tray and not on your floors.

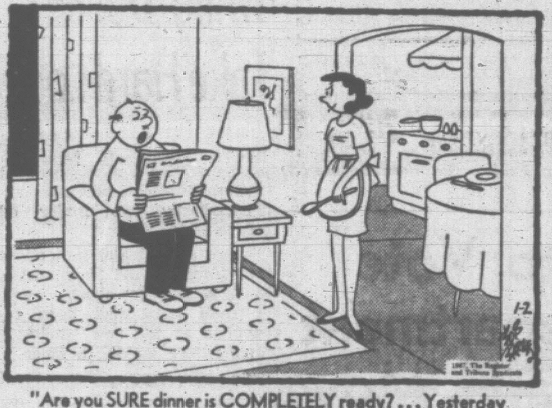
Colors are dark grey or black, and price is $1.98. Pick up one of these today.

Another item that's a boon to our household is a colorful mat. These door mats are in a rich cocoa shade, with patterns in blue or red down both sides and in the middle. Place one outside or inside. These sell for $1.29.

One rug-saver in this store is a roll of plastic that you place over your rug to catch mud and water. These rolls are about 27 inches wide, about the same width as a hall runner, and six feet long. They have a silk backing and the plastic top has a "waffle" pattern. Priced at $2.49, these rug covers come in shades of brown and white.

Keep floors free of wet-weather hazards. Give me a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where to find these items.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes



"Are you SURE dinner is COMPLETELY ready? . . . Yesterday you called me 30 seconds early and tricked me into filling the salt shaker."

TODAY'S RECIPE

MUSHROOM CAP CASSEROLE

One-third cup slivered almonds, ¼ cup bottled French dressing, 1 cup fine soft bread crumbs, 8 large mushrooms (about ½ lb.), ½ cup chopped onion, 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Combine almonds, dressing and crumbs in small skillet. Cook, stirring constantly over low heat 3 to 5 minutes until moist and golden brown. Remove from heat.

Wash mushrooms; break off stems. Trim and chop stems; mix with onion, tomato sauce and salt.

Place mushroom caps in shallow 1-quart casserole, spoon tomato mixture over, then sprinkle with almond mixture. Bake at 400 degrees 15 minutes or until bubbly. Makes four servings.

Golden Anniversary

Tuesday was a "red letter day" for Mr. and Mrs. Peter Tod, 787 Newport Avenue. The couple, married January 3, 1917 in Hong Kong, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Tod was born in Sunderland, Eng., and Mrs. Tod, the former Freda Sachy, was born in Hong Kong. DEAR ABBY . . .

Mother Not Being 'Fair' to Her Son

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My sister has a 12-year-old son who was born with one deaf ear and about one third hearing in the other ear. His doctors have informed my sister that in the very near future the boy will be totally deaf.

Don't you think the mother is being extremely unfair to hide the truth from her son? She is a college graduate and a prominent socialite and she seems almost ashamed of her son's handicap. She said she couldn't bear the thought of his wearing a hearing aid or studying lip-reading so young.

She thinks highly of your advice, Abby, so please answer.

DEVOTED AUNT

DEAR AUNT: That mother is doing her son a shocking disservice. The boy should start preparing immediately to live in a silent world. It will be much more difficult for him to learn after he has suffered a total hearing loss.

Urge your sister to talk to her son's doctors and to follow their recommendations. And I hope for the boy's sake she acts at once.

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 and a boy I know who is 14 asked me to be his girl and I said yes.

Then he asked me if he could kiss me on the lips. Abby, I told him that I had never let a boy kiss me on the lips and I wasn't going to let him either. Well, then he said he was sorry, that he guessed he was just a little bit more grown up than I was, and he would have to find someone more grown up to be his girl.

Well, I didn't really care that much about him, so there wasn't too much heartbreak. But, Abby, I am still confused. Should I have let him kiss me on the lips?

PRIVATE NAME

DEAR PRIVATE NAME: I think you used excellent judgment.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is dead and I had two enlarged pictures of him nicely framed and I keep them in my living room. The other day a neighbor came in and saw them and she said personal pictures did not belong in the living room.

Abby, I haven't had much education and I would appreciate it if you would tell me if I am wrong to keep his pictures there.

I get a lot of pleasure out of looking at his pictures in the living room, but if they really don't belong there I suppose I could put them somewhere else. Thank you.

JUST DUMB

DEAR JUST: Personal pictures should be enjoyed. And they "belong" wherever they afford the most pleasure.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WITS' END WIFE:" Yours is the curse of being married to a man who appears to be younger than his years and also younger than his wife. Don't, for goodness sakes, try to let people know in some "subtle" way that he is really older than you. It is bound to create the opposite impression.

How has the world been treating you? Unload your problems on Dear Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

For a personal, unpublished reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1.00 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

'THANK YOU'

A book entitled "Thank You Canada" will be one of the exhibits at the Dutch pavilion at Expo 67.

Written by people from all walks of life, its 20 pages of photographs, prose and poetry honor Canadians for liberating Holland and for giving refuge during the war to the Dutch royal family.

The entire population of Holland was invited to contribute and there were nearly 2,000 submissions.

One was a poem from a 17-year-old boy expressing his gratitude to Canadian troops for saving his parents and his homeland. It will occupy the central pages of the book.

WITCHES FLOURISH IN PORTUGAL—REPLACE THE TOWN DOCTORS

LISBON (AP)—Whenever everything has failed to solve a love affair or cure a sickness in Portugal, the best bet is to go see "the witch."

The witch lives in every town of Portugal. Sometimes she operates a flashy office in the heart of Lisbon. Other times she sets up a makeshift altar crowded with canes, crutches, statues and candles in her tiny country shack.

But whatever the formula, thousand flock to see the "wise woman" who prescribes everything from simple gymnastics to a yellow spider dipped in butter to solve a problem.

Lisbon's most famous witch, Dona Silvina, receives about 100 clients a day in her crowded bedroom.

Dona Silvina claims to reincarnate a famous Lisbon physician, Dr. Sousa Martins, who died 70 years ago after a life of good works amonng the poor.

Dona Silvina precedes her "incantations" with a set speech: "Let us thank our brother, Dr. Sousa Martins, for the cures he is about to give us." Then she goes into convulsions near her altar, covered with pictures and wax images.

"My best cure is gymnastics," Dona Silvina explains. "Lie on the floor," she orders. "Do what your body wants to do. Do gymnastics."

Pregnant women and crippled children in their stocking writhe on rustic rugs as Dona Silvina "incantates" the low voice of Dr. Martins, sitting on a low chair at the foot of a creaky iron bed.

"I miss the earth, I miss my sick patients," her voice says in a manly growl, supposedly reminiscent of Dr. Martins.

Dona Silvina shows proofs of her cures. Fourteen crutches hang on the wall, testimony of seven cripples who walked away alone. She shows dozens of letters from grateful patients.

From time to time a case like Dona Silvina is exposed in the Portuguese press after a plainclothes policeman has mingled with the clients in the waiting room. But the "witches" crop up in another spot and the clientele follows.

The advice is often strange.

A mother gives her baby a snakeskin to cure it of whooping cough. One Lisbon society matron boasts of being cured of an abscess by drawing a needle through a ball of worsted over which the witch uttered a spell.

If you want someone to become ill, you strew earth from the cemetery or coarse salt across his doorstep. Intestinal complaints are cured by eating a certain yellow spider dipped in butter. Enemies are banished by eating eggs from a black hen.

Blood from a black cat kills pneumonia and black sheepskin on a pillowcase wards off an earache.

To avenge herself on an unfaithful lover, the Portuguese peasant girl transfixes his photograph with a knife.

Occasionally an unsatisfied patient brings the witch to court on extortion charges.

City Works Department Praised by Mayor

Victoria's departmennt of public works won praise from Mayor Hugh Stephen Tuesday for its three major accomplishments during 1966.

The mayor listed the three big jobs as the widening of the Fort Street "Dardanelles", the redecking of Johnson Street bridge and the building of the new heliport "which will undoubtedly soon be the terminus of direct downtown-to-downtown air transportation between here and Vancouver."

But of equal importance said the mayor were the housekeeping chores perfomred by the department during the year

Chores which saw:

- 215 traffic order changes and the installation of seven additional traffic signals.
- The manufacture and installation of more than 500 new street signs and 680 miscellaneous directional signs.
- The painting of 126 miles of centre lines and 500 crosswalks.
- The collection and disposal of 25,000 tons of garbage.
- The replacement of 14,000 feet of water main and the laying of 3,000 feet of new mains to serve subdivisions.
- The construction of 7,000 feet of new storm drains and 4,000 feet of sanitary sewer.
- Completion of the placing of Bowker Creek underground.
- The issuance of permits involving close to $18 million in new construction.
- And the installation of more than 1,000 new street lamps and luminaires.

"Together with the never-ending task of street paving and improvement they give some idea of the services our public works department, without whose continuing care the economy of our city would rapidly stall to a halt," Mayor Stephen said.

Boy Kidnapped, Released

TORONTO (CP)—A six-year-old boy was picked up in a car on his way to school Tuesday and held for $5,000 ransom for several hours before being released, police said today.

Joseph Mendolia of suburban Etobicoke told police he was held for two and a half hours and then driven to within two blocks of his home and freed.

Two Toronto men, Antonio Mendolia, 20, a cousin of the boy, and Dale Burnett Muttart, 18, have been charged with kidnapping.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Association

Jim: "We are discussing experts at their worst. What hand did you butcher worst in the course of your career?"

Oswald: "You are asking me to cover a lot of territory, and I really have made some horrible mistakes. Once, in a rubber bridge game I let declarer make a doubled grand slam when I held the ace of trumps. I relaxed and revoked."

Jim: "That hand wouldn't interest our readers. How about something almost as spectacular?"

Oswald: "Here's one from the 1952 men's team. I was just back from the Korean War and a trifle out of practice, but I really goofed."

Jim: "It looks like a routine hand. South is in a normal four spade contract. He can make it if he picks up that singleton king of clubs but there will be no reason for him to make that play and he will finesse and go down one trick."

Oswald: "I sat West and opened the jack of hearts. My partner took his ace and queen and returned a diamond to my ace. I led a diamond back. South won, led a trump to dummy's jack and a second trump back to his king. Then he called for the queen of clubs from dummy. At this point someone said, 'You are in your own hand.' South had to lead a club from his hand. He played the ace and made his contract."

Jim: "Who was the someone?"

Oswald: "I was. Silence is golden. If I had just kept my mouth shut I would have made my king of clubs. Fortunately it didn't make any difference in the final result. We lost that board but my teammates managed to pull me through to first place anyway."

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

One of the fastest rising personalities on the west coast is a guy who labored in the vineyards of the old CHEK-TV, Chuck Davis.

Davis left Victoria for CBC-TV several seasons ago but was shunted between Vancouver and Prince Rupert in an announcer's role.

Stephen

Then during the past year he blossomed forth as an expert in the country and western music field. He handled a new live weekly show for CBC radio which was heard throughout the program.

Now, Chuck has divested himself of all such responsibilities for the more lucrative fields of freelance.

He has left CBC to work on his own in the announcing fields of both radio and television in Vancouver.

Another making big strides for himself is an old friend, Les Lye, in Ottawa.

Les like Fred Davis, Gordie Tapp, Bruce Marsh, Leslie Nielsen and myself was a graduate of Lorne Greene's Academy of Radio Arts back in 1947.

With Davis, Marsh and again, yours truly, he labored in the Ottawa market on CFRA as one of the brightest morning men in the radio business.

He was able to employ many character voices, while waking up the nation's capital. One of them was Abercrombie, who even today is doing yeoman's work through Lye's ability.

Les was also with Rick Little when the impersonator launched his career through successful imitations of John Diefenbaker.

Little went onto stardom in the U.S., but Les Lye stayed behind in Ottawa to become a popular actor, comedian, impersonator, radio announcer and TV personality.

Today, Les is making a big hit with viewers from coast-to-coast as host of CTV's new season of Fractured Phrases.

Viewers voice their opinion through letters like the one which labelled Les as cultured, gracious and owner of a delightful sense of humor.

I agree whole heartedly. His talent is boundless, his personality infectious.

. . . BUG PROBE

He said he had planned to have one more discussion with the lawyers about playing the tapes before any action was taken and he still planned to do this under the new terms of reference.

"There are certain parts that might be admissible and others not and we were to have a conference to decide if or how to winnow those out," he said.

He said the new commission will have to go through all the red tape of setting up a new hearing so it likely will not open until next week in Vancouver.

"Then it will take a day or so to shape up but there will be a shortcut because we won't have to go through all the evidence already given.

"Then, as to that (tape-playing question), there will have to be a conference between counsel and myself as to how we will do it."

LAWYER MUM

Mary Southin, the lawyer who represented the Canadian union in obtaining Chief Justice Wilson's declaration the original cabinet order was invalid, declined comment on whether the new order overcame the objections.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner this morning claimed the new order could result in B.C. becoming the first Canadian jurisdiction to establish legislation creating privacy as a civil right.

He said a Manitoba law prohibiting wire-tapping was not comparable to the scope of the B.C. proposal.

Judge Sargent said he did not know whether he would expand his staff with researchers as a result of the widened terms of reference. He said he would discuss this question with commission counsel George Murray, QC, at the earliest opportunity.

CRUCIAL QUESTION

The crucial section of the new order added this term of reference to the original:

"It is deemed expedient to cause inquiry to be made into and concerning the following matters connected with the good government of the province and the conduct of the public business thereof,

"Namely, the nature and extent of the use of electronic and other listening and recording devices and records thereof for the purpose of invading the privacy of persons or organizations,

"And in particular but without restricting the generality of the foregoing the nature and extent of the apparent use of such devices and records by persons carrying on the business of private detectives under the provisions of the private detectives' licensing act or their clients and the justification, if any, for and the background of such use, with a view to determining whether any legislative enactment or amendment or extension of substantive law is necessary for the presentation of privacy as a civil right . . ."

. . . CAMPBELL

say what caused the crash — a ripple, maybe, who knows."

Campbell appeared to have a premonition of death. Newsmen found him in a despondent mood Tuesday night.

Chief mechanic Leo Villa, who also headed the team for Campbell's father, said Campbell had turned up the ace of spades and then the queen of spades in a game of solitaire.

IN THE CARDS

"Mary Queen of Scots turned up the same combination of cards and knew from it that she was going to be beheaded," Villa quoted Campbell as saying.

Campbell had been waiting nearly nine weeks on the Coniston shore for weather conditions favorable enougugh to make his crack at the 300 m.p.h. water "barrier." He had set the land speed record of 403.1 m.p.h., since broken, and the water speed record of 276.33 m.p.h. in 1964.

As a child Campbell had suffered from rheumatic fever, which left his heart weak. Although he joined the Royal Air Force in the Second World War, he was invalided out because of his heart condition.

His father tried to keep him out of speed record attempts and got him a job with an insurance company. But when Sir Malcolm died in 1949, his son took over his daredevil career.

In 1960, Campbell walked away from a fantastic crash at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah. His 4,250-horsepower car — also named Bluebird — somersaulted three times, soared 680 feet through the air and then skidded 1¼ miles.

Campbell had his little teddy bear mascot "Mr. Whoppit" with him when he died.

Campbell's beautiful third wife Tonia, a former Beigian cabaret star, was at their London apartment when friends called to tell her of her husband's death.

"Oh, my Donald, not my Donald," she gasped and burst into tears.

She flew to Coniston by charter plane while skindivers and other experts were still trying to recover Campbell's body.

Acted Alone Ruby Stated On Death-Bed

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Ruby denied it to the edge of death.

But even his family couldn't help asking, because so many other people seemed to be asking, whether he really acted alone, and not as part of a conspiracy, to kill the accused assassin of president John F. Kennedy.

And so, near the end, Earl Ruby asked his brother again, as he had so many times before:

"Are you sure, Jack, there was nothing else?"

And Jack Ruby answered, says his brother:

"I'm not hiding anything. I'm not protecting anybody. There is nothing to hide, no one to protect. Believe me."

As he lay in his guarded room in Parkland Memorial Hospital, stricken with cancer, Jack Ruby often seemed to be begging the world to believe he would take no secrets to the grave.

He also was tormented by hallucinations in which he imagined that millions of American Jews were slain in a pogrom as punishment because he, a Jew, silenced the alleged killer of a president.

Ruby could be rational on certain levels and wholly irrational on others, according to those closest to him. For example, he might be watching a football game on television and something would touch him off—such as a penalty. Worse is being done to the Jews, he would say.

WITHOUT PLAN

Ruby insisted that he alone, without plan or prompting, shot Lee Harvey Oswald.

He swore also that rumors of secret meetings relating to the president's assassination, the killing of Dallas policeman J. D. Tippit and the slaying of Oswald, were lies invented by "momserem," a Yiddish epithet.

These details of Ruby's last days came from his brother, Earl, a Detroit businessman; Elmer Gertz, a Chicago lawyer prominent on the legal team which won reversal of the death sentence given to Ruby in 1964, and, through them, from other members of the family.

The Ruby murder trial and the Warren commission report supported conclusions that Ruby acted alone in shooting of Oswald—a shooting that was witnessed by a television audience of millions Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963.

But a broiling controversy about the Warren report has produced various theories of conspiracies — some of which give Ruby a hidden role. However, Gertz said:

"He simply could not conceive that people could not see that he not only acted alone but that they could take this and twist it into a premise for giving him a role in a plot against the president, a man he worshipped."

RUBY RECORDING TELLS OF IRONY

It All Started With an Illegal Turn

CHICAGO (AP)—Jack Ruby, who grew up on Chicago's tough west side, returned home in death today after gaining international notoriety as the slayer of President Kennedy's accused assassin. He will be buried beside his parents.

The plane carrying Ruby's body landed at O'Hare International Airport shortly after midnight following a flight from Dallas, where he died Tuesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital—the same hospital in which Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald died.

His death from a blood clot in the lungs forever clouded the doubts surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy. Until the end, Ruby insisted he acted alone in fatally shooting Oswald.

The 55-year-old Ruby had extensive cancer, but Dr. Carl Rose, the Dallas County medical examiner, said it was a massive clot that would probably have killed him even if he had not been weakened by cancer. Rose said, however, that cancer would be listed on the death certificate as a contributing cause.

Rose, who performed an autopsy, said the blood clot apparently formed in Ruby's leg Tuesday morning and travelled through the heart to the lungs.

GUARDED COFFIN

Ruby's coffin was taken from the plane here as soon as the doors were opened. Twenty policemen quickly placed the coffin in a hearse for the drive to a north side funeral home.

Ruby's brother, Earl Ruby of Detroit, and two sisters, Eileen Kaminsky of Chicago and Eva Grant of Dallas, accompanied the body on the plane.

They appeared composed as they walked uickly and silently past a waiting crowd of some 50 reporters.

Hershey Weinstein, president of the Original Weinstein and Sons Chapel, said services and burial would be held Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

Ruby's death prompted statements from various individuals connected with the case.

In New York, William Kunstler, one of Ruby's lawyers, said his death denied him the opportunity "to have a jury decide that he was guilty of nothing more than murder without malice, a crime that carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment."

Kunstler added in a statement that such a verdict—of murder without malice—"would have helped to establish that what Ruby did in Dallas on Nov. 24, 1963, was solely the result of spontaneous reaction to the president's assassination."

In Los Angeles, Joseph Ball, senior staff counsel to the Warren Commission, said he did not see how Ruby's death could have any effect on the validity of the commission's report on Kennedy's assassination.

Ball said he was sure that some persons who have been writing critical books about the report "will spread the word that there was something sinister about Ruby's death."

Ball said he saw no reason to reopen the Warren inquiry unless new evidence developed. He said he had received no communication from any commission officials about any such review.

Ruby had been moved to Parkland hospital Dec. 9 from the Dallas County jail, where he spent more than three years after killing Oswald before a television audience.

Doctors said Ruby woke up Tuesday in a "jovial" mood, had a bath, and ordered eggs for breakfast. He suffered a "generalized convulsive seizure" at 9:10 a.m. and was dead by 10:30, said Dr. Eugene Frenkel.

The autopsy performed by Dr. Rose revealed that Ruby suffered from "extensive tumor involvement in both lungs, the lymph nodes, and the liver."

CLOT KILLED HIM

Dr. Rose said the immediate cause of death was the blood clot, which in effect stopped sufficient oxygen from getting to the lungs.

Ruby had lost some 20 pounds in his 3½-week stay in the hospital, the doctors said. He died weighing 147 pounds.

Numerous books and articles were written that implied Ruby killed Oswald to silence him.

No law enforcement agency agreed, however, and the Warren Commission said there was no conspiracy, foreign or domestic. It said both Ruby and Oswald killed alone, for their own reasons.

Ruby made a clandestine recording at the hospital only days before his death in which he said it was an accident of timing that he had a chance to shoot Oswald as police officers were escorting the handcuffed, 24-year-old suspect to a waiting car in the basement of the city jail, in a routine transfer to the county jail.

Ruby said in the recording that he had understood that Oswald was to be transferred about 10 a.m.

The recording said, in Ruby's words:

"The ironic part of this business is that I made an illegal turn behind a bus at the parking lot. Had I gone the way I was supposed to go—straight down main street — I would never have met this fate because the difference of meeting this fate was 30 seconds one way or the other."

He said in the tape-recorded conversation with his brother, Earl, that the shooting of Oswald "happened in such a blur that before I knew it I was down on the ground . . . The officers had me on the ground."

Earl asked him if he knew Oswald before and Ruby replied:

"I never have known him or seen him before."

The conversation, recorded in Ruby's maximum - security room at Parkland sometime between Dec. 15 and 18, was made public for the first time Tuesday by Capitol Records at a press conference.

The three-minute conversation will be part of a long-playing record entitled, The Controversy: The Death and the Warren Report, being produced by the record firm.

A Dallas jury convicted Ruby of murder with malice March 14, 1964, and set the punishment at death. But the Texas court of criminal appeals overturned the conviction three months ago on the grounds that the trial should have been held outside of Dallas, and that the judge erred in allowing certain police testimony that implied malice.

A new trial was tentatively set for February or March in Wichita Falls, 135 miles north west of Dallas, but legal proceedings were suspended by Ruby's illness.

Celebrant Pays Penalty For Damages

A Vancouver electrician grabbed the wrong wire during a New Year's Eve taxi ride.

Milomir Markovic was fined $25 in central court Tuesday when convicted of wilfully damaging the cab's radio. He had pleaded not guilty.

The accused and four companions were riding in a taxi on Rose Street early New Year's day when the cab driver, irked by their singing, turned his radio volume up.

Markovic admitted he grabbed a cable under the dashboard and yanked, intending just to disconnect the radio's aerial.

Instead he pulled the microphone off the taxi's two-way radio. He was also ordered to pay the $18 repair bill.

Employees Row Out Of Dealings

Two moves are being made in Saanich following the assessment inquiry report made public last month.

Lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood, representing employees in the assessment department, said they will either drop their interests in Royal Oak Estates Limited or change the objects of the company.

This is in line with one of the recommendations of the inquiry's report.

Reeve Hugh Curtis told council Tuesday night that municipal lawyer D. A. M. Patterson is working on a draft bylaw in line with another inquiry recommendation — making it a condition of employment that employees do not deal in real estate for profit in their municipalities.

At the public inquiry, it was disclosed that assessment department employees bought and sold five properties in Saanich for a gross profit of $3,050.

However, the inquiry report absolved the employees of using confidential information for personal gain.

'O' BLOOD NEEDED

Group O Blood types are urgently needed by the Red Cross clinic to replenish dwindling supplies.

A Canadian Red Cross Society official said today both positive and negative types of Group O will be especially sought from donors at the three-day clinic this week.

The clinic opened today at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, between 2:30 and 4:30 and 6:30 and 9 p.m.

It will open at HMC Dockyard Thursday at 9 p.m. and will carry on until noon, and in the afternoon between 1 and 4 p.m. Friday at Work Point Barracks, 10 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Ottawa Assists Community Moves

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal grant of $1,046,105 to help pay for the relocation of three communities in British Columbia's regional district of East Kootenay was announced Tuesday by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.

CHMC said the residents of Natal, Middletown and Miche, communities subject to heavy dust and smoke from mining operations, had decided by referendum early last year to move to the nearby municipality of Sparwood.

SHAPING NEW TRUCKING CONTRACTS

Hoffa Busy as Jail Term Looms

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — James R. Hoffa, with time fast running out for his final legal efforts to stay out of prison, busies himself today in shaping nationwide trucking contract demands.

"I guess that's how he stays sane," said a close associate about the gruelling work pace maintained by the Teamsters Union president despite the eight-year jury tampering sentence hanging over him.

Hoffa kept aides working long hours wrapping up final details on wage demands he said will range from five to seven per cent for some 500,000 employees of 12,000 trucking firms.

Contract talks start in Washington Jan. 17, but unless he is successful in winning a new U.S. Supreme Court hearing or a new trial, Hoffa could be in prison before the March 31 contract deadline.

The Supreme Court has already rejected his appeal.

SOME WORRIED

Some union sources expressed concern that the trucking negotiations might bog down if Hoffa is not around to complete them, but the 53-year-old union chief expressed confidence that a settlement will be reached without a strike. But Hoffa added that some trucking firms might have to raise their rates to pay the new labor costs.

One union source, predicting possible difficulties if Hoffa went to prison before negotiations were completed, said "Hoffa has been a one-man show, not because he is autocratic, but because he has been dealing with these employers for so long."

JAMES R. HOFFA
. . . sees no strike

Hoffa told reporters he had talked to almost every carrier truck company in the country in preparing for the negotiations.

Union sources said no other Teamster official, including Hoffa's heir - apparent, Frank Fitzsimmons of Detroit, has that close a relationship with the trucking industry.

Hoffa has until Feb. 4 to file his application for a new Supreme Court hearing on his conviction.

DECLINES DETAILS

While Hoffa declined to reveal details of the trucking contract demands, he said they would be "between the elastic formula of five and seven per cent" that has been the pattern of other recent big labor settlements.

Truck drivers covered by the national contract now earn from $3.31 to $5 an hour, plus fringe benefits averaging another $1.10 an hour, Hoffa said.

In addition to the national trucking contract covering 450,000 drivers, Hoffa is working out details to bring another 5,000 garage and clerical trucking employees under the national contract within three years.

Hoffa said latest union figures showed 1,788,000 dues - paying members in November, the highest for that month in the union's history.

VISITING Canada next spring will be Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the Shah of Iran. His wife, the Empress Farah Pahlavi will accompany him to Ottawa June 7 and on a visit to Expo '67 on June 9, Iran's national holiday.

Borrowing Curb Faces Saanich

Tight Money 'Cause for Caution, Source of Concern' Says Curtis

Saanich was given a tight-money warning Tuesday night by Reeve Hugh Curtis in his annual address to council.

"From all appearances, the present tight money situation will continue well into the new year," he said.

"I am sure all of us agree that this factor will prove to be cause for caution, and a source of concern, as we move towards setting this year's policies and striking a final budget in the spring."

The reeve said Saanich will probably have to curtail works which require borrowing at least for the present. This would undoubtedly have an effect on paving, curbs, sidewalks, storm drains and street lights.

"I emphasize here that this restriction would apply to local improvements where borrowing is required and would hope that no one confuses this with the road construction, installation of storm drains and sidewalks which has been carried out at an accelerated pace out of annual revenue in the past several years. This work should continue as usual."

RESTRICT BORROWING

Saanich had expropriated the McRae Estate for recreation purposes, with the price still to be set by arbitration.

If this was concluded within a few months, Saanich would be required to find "a substantial sum of money" and in view of this "it is felt we should make every effort to restrict our borrowing for other purposes no matter how desirable they may be."

Reeve Cutis said tight money "will have a direct effect" on the early implementation of the massive indoor recreational report made public after Christmas.

He suggested council "maintain a flexible position and an open mind towards how and when this proposal can be referred for ratepayer approval."

One suggestion was constructing the first phases of recreational facilities as a second capital projects budget, presented to voters with the understanding that approval was sought to proceed with designated work "some time during a five-year period dating from the day of the bylaw being put to a vote.

"With this approval, then, council could move forward with construction as and when conditions appear most favorable. This approach would surely be preferable to the reverse, where we delay putting the bylaw to the electorate until market conditions have improved."

WIPE OUT SAVINGS

But the reeve also warned that a lengthy delay before construction starts "could present us with a circumstance where rising construction costs have more than wiped out any saving which might be gained through more favorable money availability."

The reeve referred to the effect of the provincial government's limit of 5 per cent in assessment increases in any one year.

Had the legislation not been enacted, Saanich could have expected its re-assessment program to continue and have a similar increase to that of the 1966 roll over 1965, or about $4.3 million.

Instead, the increase was $1.3 million — or a difference of $3 million.

$7.4 Million Budget Estimated in Saanich

A record provisional budget was presented to Saanich council Tuesday night.

It shows revenues (and expenditures) of $7.4 million compared with $7 million in 1966.

And comptroller-treasurer John Tribe indicated an increase of about 1.4 mills compared with last year's general rate.

"However, the assessment figures are not final and are subject to review with respect to complaints to the court of revision," he said.

"No indication, of course, is available as to what the school rates will be and this will not be known for some little time."

The provisional budget gives council the authority to spend pending preparation of the annual budget which must be passed not later than May 15.

"DESIRABLE"

However, in drawing up the provisional budget we have endeavored to represent what we would consider to be desirable expenditures for the year, subject of course to review by the council.

"The adoption of the provisional budget by council does not give blanket authority for expenditure of all items in the budget, as it has been a policy in the past that expenditures of special nature beyond ordinary operating costs are dealt with on an individual basis by council."

One of the more interesting parts of the provisional budget is a proposed increase of $150,000 for fire protection to include 24 new fire-fighters.

Mr. Tribe added that "we realize that no decision has been made by council as to what additional strength will be provided."

The 24 new men was based on Fire Chief Joseph Sutherland's report of last September suggesting a compromise on recommendations by an official of the fire marshall's office in a survey earlier in the year.

90 SUGGESTED

Saanich has 56 fire-fighters at present. The survey recommended 134 while Chief Sutherland suggested a compromise at 80.

Mr. Tribe said it is realized that whatever new men are hired will not be on staff for the full year so that if 24 men are hired later in the year this amount would naturally be reduced.

"However, it does give an indication of the effect of hiring 24 men for a full year on the present salary scale."

The provisional budget provides for $588,455 in expenditures on fire protection for 1967.

The Confederation Train is on its way to Victoria

It arrives in 1 week, January 9—Point Ellice Yards

1. In the first exhibit car, you go right back to the creation of the Continent—walk through a primeval forest and hear the sounds of life that existed millions of years ago. Then, you see how the ice age came crunching down to change and shape our country. This is how Canada was formed—and you'll see it happening!

2. Have you ever wondered how it must have been to be an early explorer of Canada? These men were real adventurers! Here, you realize, perhaps for the first time, the tremendous magnitude of their explorations. Then came the settlers, and you share their discomfort and dreams as they cross the ocean in the hold of an immigrant ship.

3. Now you discover, as the early settlers did, that life in the New World was not quite what you'd been led to believe. The difficulties were numerous. You begin to appreciate how much Confederation meant to Canadians as you move from the confusion of settlement life into the stillness of the Confederation Chamber.

4. 1867 to 1876—a time of temperamental outbursts, changing ideas and enormous progress. You share the excitement as Canada becomes a continent bordered by three oceans . . . live through the Riel Rebellion . . . the completion of the rail line to the Pacific . . . the Klondike rush . . . the often stormy elections of the five Prime Ministers of those times. Canada was growing up.

5. The coming of the twentieth century—the Boer War—a flood of immigrants from Eastern Europe—and you experience the frightening din of trench warfare as seen from a dugout in World War I. The twenties roar in with flappers, peep shows, player pianos and a Mack Sennett movie. Suddenly, the stock crash—the bleakness of the thirties ending, in 1939, with newspapers proclaiming "Canada at War with Germany!"

6. The second World War—Canada begins producing warplanes, tanks and ships while her heroes fight and die abroad. Prime Minister Mackenzie King announces the war's end. Now Canadians turn anew to science, politics, medicine, industry, the arts and international affairs. Our achievements in these fields give every indication that our greatest era is about to begin . . .

BISHOP REAFFIRMS GAG ON ANGLICAN CLERGY

VANCOUVER (CP)—Bishop Godfrey Gower of the New Westminster diocese Tuesday reiterated his stand that local clergy must get his permission for any public, press, radio or TV statements, and that all experimental services must be approved by him.

At a meeting of Anglican clergy, sparked by the bishop's confrontation with Rev. James McKibbon, the bishop clarified and expanded on these orders, which were first issued after an experimental "psychedelic" church service staged by Mr. McKibbon.

"It is the church's desire and the purpose of the directive to ensure that all experiments are ordered and have a firm objective," said a statement issued by the synod after the meeting.

Mr. McKibbon said after the meeting that he was given no opportunity to speak or present his explanations. "This is the way the bishop has always acted," he said.

The "psychedelic" service, which featured poetry readings, modern music and a go-go girl, was carried in part on the CBC television program Sunday.

'FANATIC CAMPBELLS'

He Was Driven On By Patriotic Zeal

By MILTON MARMOR

LONDON (AP)—Donald Malcolm Campbell's heart ticked with national pride. He lived for speed and through speed on land and water he expressed the patriotic zeal that surged through his body.

He was the son of Sir Malcolm Campbell who, like him, had held at one time the world records for the fastest time on land and water. Donald achieved this double in 1964.

The cry "The best of British luck, Donald," may have been a cliche, but it was music to Donald Campbell's soul.

Campbell inspired a messianic faith in his team of engineers and helpers.

"They work with me—not for me," he had said. "It's the cause that counts."

Campbell achieved 403.1 miles an hour on land in his gas turbine-engined car Bluebird and 276.33 miles per hour on watern in his jet hydroplane speedboat of the same name.

EXUDED ENERGY

Campbell, a short and dark man with Napoleonic energy and blue eyes, wore cream shirts with navy blue birds on the breasts.

Campbell took pride in the "fanatic Campbells" and he always was aware of the risk he ran. He was something of a mystic. He once said: "You get funny feelings. You'd be very unwise to ignore them."

He knew what danger he faced when he went for speed: "One's plenty apprehensive," he said. "Make no mistake about that."

The question almost everyone asked about Campbell was what drove him to speed.

The answer to many would be irrelevant and anachronistic. He was a pure red, white and blue patriot. He seethed with nationalistic fervor.

HAD DETRACTORS

Those who scoffed saw him a rank jingoist. He saw his scoffers as cardboard cutouts, betraying their British heritage.

Campbell came near death six years ago when his Bluebird car crashed at more than 300 miles an hour while he was trying to break the land speed record.

He later told how he gets scared — "but not because of the crash; because it made me realize how close to death we always are. While I am sitting here talking to you," he had said, "I can get frightened just thinking that I might have a heart attack or get lung cancer."

Donald Campbell always believed that with his Bluebird ventures he was playing a part in reasserting British nationalism and independence.

STATES AIM

Only recently he said:

"I want to show the rest of the world what we can do. The British are the salt of the earth. For 15 years we've been going to the dogs.

"'Get up and stop moping'—that's what I would say to my countrymen. We've had too much of the long-haired intelligenzia. It's been all pop and pleasure."

He had mused while waiting for his record attempt on water:

"They say we're half mad to do it. Perhaps they're right. We've never really grown up, any of us, you know. God help us, the day we do."

Pearson Asks Report On Young Canadians

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson has asked for a report on whether the Company of Young Canadians "as such" was involved in demonstrations at the United States consulate-general in Toronto against the war in Vietnam.

A spokesman for Mr. Pearson said Tuesday the prime minister has not ordered a full investigation but had "asked for a report of whether the company as such was involved."

About 150 demonstrators marched in front of the consulate office Monday carrying signs proclaiming peace on which they later painted "war and LBJ," trampling them underfoot.

TWO LEADERS

Two leaders of the protest said they were CYC organizers. The CYC is similar to the Peace Corps in the U.S.

David DePoe, 22, son of the broadcaster Norman DePoe, said he conceived the protest idea while at the Student Union for Peace Action convention at Waterloo, which ended Monday. He said he is CYC's organizer at Toronto.

Lynn Curtis, 24, who said he was a CYC organizer at Victoria, handed out literature saying the Vietnam war is clearly one of aggression.

WAS AT UVIC

Mr. Curtis, a former teacher and student at the University of Victoria, established the Social Education Centre at 1054 McGregor Street in September.

He has been associated with Victoria's Peace Action League, but is not a member.

Floodlights Stolen From City Warehouse

Two more New Year's weekend break-ins in the city came to light—or floodlight—Tuesday.

Green floodlights, valued at not more than $50, were found to be missing from a shed on the east side of Heaney's Cartage warehouse, 25 Montreal.

A mantel radio worth $20 was taken from the Blue and White Moving and Storage, 558 Hillside. The firm's offices were ransacked.

3 MONTHS TO GO

Labor Leaders Back in Jail

VANCOUVER (CP)—Thirteen days of freedom ended Tuesday for two B.C. labor leaders, who returned to jail amid cheers and handshakes from fellow trade unionists.

Paddy Neale, secretary treasurer of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, and Tom Clarke, a vice-president of the Vancouver Local of the International Woodworkers of America, left the Vancouver Labor Temple at 1 p.m. to re-enter Camp Thurston, near Chilliwack.

There, the two men will serve the remaining three months of six-month jail terms given them for contempt of court injunctions during a labor dispute last May in Burnaby.

Neale and Clarke were granted temporary paroles Dec. 22 to spend the Christmas and New Year holidays with their families. Both had to go back to jail as a condition of their parole.

Both men said they did not expect any last-minute commutation of the remainder of their sentences.

"I didn't think anything would happen," said Clarke as he stood with his wife and two children before leaving with Neale and his wife for the drive to Chilliwack.

Said Neale: "I expected to go back. I had the feeling the decision was made even before we got parole.

"But I'm hopeful the federal cabinet will exercise clemency at an early stage of this last three months."

Two other labor leaders involved in the same dispute were also released. Jeffrey Power, president of the boiler workers' union, was freed after serving almost all of a three-month jail sentence and Art O'Keefe, former business agent of the Vancouver Local of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, had been sentenced to four months.

Both men were freed at Christmas unconditionally by order of Solicitor-General Pennell.

Handicap Gives Win To Hanna

Rookie and experience skipper alike were in there pitching when the Turkey Head Sailing Association held a three-race series off the Oak Bay Marina coastline during the holiday weekend.

Using an unconventional form of handicapping, designed to allow newcomers to yacht racing an opportunity to compete on an equitable basis, the boats skimmed along in sou'easterly breezes of 12 to 15 knots.

In the first race, after handicaps had been worked out, John Damgaard proved to be the winner in his yacht Hanna.

ELEVEN OTHERS

Bishop To Address World Federalists

Most Rev. Remi De Roo, Roman Catholic Bishop of Victoria, has accepted an invitation to address the Victoria branch, World Federalists of Canada.

The meeting will be held in St. John Ambulance Hall early in February. The date will be announced later.

Peter Bunn Chairman Of Trustees

Trustee Peter Bunn was elected chairman of Greater Victoria school board at a short special meeting Tuesday.

He immediately announced that he intends to consult with department of education officials to clarify restrictions on school building.

The board has given top priority to construction of Christie Point and Newton schools but the government's construction cutback has prevented work on either project.

Mr. Bunn said, "An early meeting with the department is essential to find out where we stand."

Mr. Bunn, an outspoken campaigner, has been a trustee for five years and last year was vice-chairman of the board. He is a general contractor.

He was succeeded as vice-chairman by Dr. Donald Shorting, now beginning his second term as a trustee.

The new chairman of Saanich school board is Mrs. Nora Lindsay, a housewife, who has represented rural Saanich on the board for three years.

She too said school construction is the biggest job facing the board this year. New vice-chairman of Saanich school board is John Kennaird.

Record Defections

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. officials have announced that a record 20,242 Viet Cong defected in 1966 with the biggest surge coming in the final two months of the year. A U.S. spokesman said the 1966 total was nearly double the 11,124 who left the Communist ranks during 1965 and was the highest number in the four years since South Vietnam began the open arms program to win over Viet Cong adherents.

Sunday Movies Urged

Is Never on Sunday ever going to be shown on Sunday?

This is one of the concerns of the Fox Theatre's new manager Barney Simmons.

Mr. Simmons, who arrived here from Toronto five weeks ago, says Victoria is one of the few cities in Canada where films can be seen only six days a week.

"Those who don't agree with entertainment on Sunday, don't of course have to see it."

But Mr. Simmons, who hopes to "keep and even enhance the Fox's image" has few cavils about this city.

BIG FUTURE

"Victoria has a tremendous future," he said.

Mr. Simmons was for 10 years manager of the well-known Towne Cinema in Toronto and is part-owner, with Twentieth Century Theatres, of the Fox.

It was purchased last year from long-time owner Bert Nixon.

Mr. Simmons hopes to go on screening "unusual" films at the Fox.

His own favorite type of film is one like "Never on Sunday," or "A Taste of Honey."

"But I like any movie that's well-made."

Anthony Nowle, 4201 Glendenning, suffered minor head injuries following a two-car collision Tuesday afternoon at Cedar Hill and Hillside.

He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital and later transferred to CFB Esquimalt sick bay.

Power Sled Mishap

EDMONTON (CP) — Diane Brown, 12, of Edmonton, was killed Sunday when the toboggan she was riding on behind a power sled collided with a parked car. Police said the power sled was driven by the girl's father.

Wildlife Film To Be Shown At Oak Bay

An Audubon wildlife film on one of Canada's greatest outdoor natural history museums, will be shown at the Oak Bay Junior Secondary School Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m.

Producer Edgar T. Jones, photographer, naturalist, artist and former bush pilot, will present the film "Canada's Mountain Wilderness." The meetings are sponsored by the Victoria Natural History Society.

The film was made in the Rocky Mountain ranges of western Alberta and British Columbia where Rocky Mountain sheep, goat, moose, elk, deer and many smaller mammals are found in abundance.

Mr. Jones traveled by pack horse into the back country to film the animals, birds and flowers of the area.

Born in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, he has traveled many thousands of miles throughout the Canadian wilderness — into and beyond the Arctic coastal areas, studying and photographing wildlife.

BOMBER PILOT

As a bomber pilot in the Royal Canadian Air Force, Mr. Jones served overseas during the Second World War and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar.

ROYAL SCANDAL

Repeal Old Law Newspapers Urge

By RONALD THOMSON

LONDON (AP)—Three London newspapers today urged Parliament to repeal George III's royal marriage law so Queen Elizabeth won't have to decide whether her first cousin can marry the mother of his illegitimate son.

The Royal Marriages Act of 1772 was denounced on all sides as a museum piece of royal spite. It was brought to public attention again by the Earl of Harewood's announcement Monday that he is being divorced for adultery and wants to marry a former model who bore him a son 2½ years ago.

The 43-year-old earl is 18th in line of succession to the throne. His 40-year-old wife is expected to bring her divorce petition before the courts next month.

Under the ancient act, all members of the Royal Family descended from George II must have the monarch's permission to wed. This means that, technically at least, Harewood must seek the Queen's consent before marrying Patricia Tuckwell, a 39-year-old divorcee from Australia.

OULD FACE PRESSURE

As head of the Church of England, which opposes the remarriage of anyone whose partner is living, the Queen would face clerical pressure to refuse her consent.

The Conservative Daily Mail, the Labor Sun and The Evening Standard, a Beaverbrook newspaper which takes an independent line, all urged repeal of the 195-year-old act. So did Cyril Hankinson, former editor of Debrett's Peerage.

Calling the act a "frowsty frowzy piece of legislation pushed through parliament by George III," Hankinson said the king "was furious at secret marriages made by his brothers, the Dukes of Cumberland and Gloucester, to commoners. . . .

"Most people today think that the Royal Family should have the same rights as the Queen's other subjects when it comes to a personal matter like marriage."

STANDARD COMMENTS

The Evening Standard comments:

"There cannot be a good case for further perpetuating the spite of a dead king. . . .

"Lord Harewood has behaved perfectly reasonably since his marriage broke up. His restrained and frank statement shows his anxiety—which every parent will understand—to legitimize his young son, Mark."

SOLUTION FRIDAY

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 02-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Stephen ondray, age 16, of Cleveland, Oklahoma, for his question:

Is natural gas toxic?

The word toxin is coined from an older word for poison and toxin substances are poisonous to living tissues. The natural gas that comes from the ground is a mixture of different gases but none of them are toxic in the proper meaning of the word. However, most of the gases are flammable and some are trigger-happy explosives. For these reasons, the breezy mixture must be tamed and handled with care.

Natural gas forms underground with deposits of petroleum. The ratio of ingredients in the mixture varies in different deposits but as a rule the major ingredient is methane, or marsh gas. Methane gas may account for more than 90 per cent or as little as 25 per cent of the tricky brew. Propane and butane, ethane and octane are usually present in various proportions. Carbon dioxide and nitrogen, hydrogen sulphide and perhaps helium also may be present in the natural gas that comes from the ground.

Most of these gases are organic compounds of hydrogen and carbon. And the hydrocarbons are chemicals created by living things, either of the present or the past. The methane molecule is a package of one carbon atom locked in the centre of four hydrogen atoms. It forms when plants decay in stagnant water where oxygen is scarce. New supplies of methane rise from boggy swamps and often glow with eerie, dancing displays we call Will-o'-the-Wisp.

Highly Explosive Gas

Though the light, energetic gas is not toxic, it is combustible and highly explosive. When air contains more than 5.3 per cent of methane, we have a tinderbox mixture likely to burst apart with shattering force at any moment. For this reason, special safety measures are needed to control the methane mixture of natural gas used to heat the stove in the kitchen.

Methane burns with a hot, blue flame. But it has no odor and to detect a gas leakage, we need to be able to smell it. So special chemicals are added to give an odor to the natural gas used in the home. This helps us to smell a leakage before the home goes boom.

Natural gas is not a toxic poison, but if you breathe too much of it, it may be deadly. When it fills the lungs, it replaces the vital supply of oxygen and the patient perishes from asphyxiation. This, however, is true of any other non-breathable gas when it replaces the normal oxygen in the lungs.

Methane is a light gas, only a little more than half the weight of ordinary air. It boils at minus 164 degrees Centigrade and when reduced to this chilly temperature it becomes liquid. If the chilling drops to minus 184—Centigrade degrees, the trigger-happy gas freezes solid. The group of other hydrocarbons in natural gas are chemically similar to methane and behave more or less in the same way.

* * *

Andy sends a 14" World Book Globe to Dessa Sue Gilbert, age 8, of Monroe, Michigan, for her question:

What set the sun on fire?

Our dazzling sun does not blaze away like an ordinary fire. It is a monstrous atomic power plant somewhat like thousands of hydrogen bombs all going off at the same time. Nobody could start such a furnace with a match or put out the blaze with water from a fire hose. Our atomic bombs and atomic power plants need very special materials. Special things must be done to them and lots of special work must be done to make them work. And the huge atomic sun is like them but much, much bigger.

It has lots of the right materials to make an atomic furnace. And about five billion years ago, the right things happened to start the atomic furnace going. Its filmy gases were jam-packed tight together and whirled around and around in a heavy ball. The big ball became hot, hotter than you can imagine. These were the right things to make the atomic furnace start up by itself. And the monster furnace has enough of the right materials to go on blazing for at least 12 billion more years.

Nose Job Requires Expert Surgeon

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

A man who is going to fix up, remodel and reshape broken or deformed or congenitally ugly or oversized noses, must be not only a fine plastic surgeon, but also quite a bit of an artist. As Dr. J. T. Bickmore of Dayton, Ohio, wrote recently after a rhinoplasty (RHIN means nose, and PLASEIN means to form) an occasional patient may be upset by slight defects that he or she hadn't noticed before, while other patients will be delighted with the result, even when the surgeon feels a bit disappointed, and wishes he could have done better.

Alvarez

When rhinoplasty is successfully accomplished, the patient's gratitude if often boundless. And, as Dr. Bickmore says so truly, "Shy, reticent individuals may 'blossom out' after the operation, and their outlook on life may completely change."

I wish I could publish here a dozen of the many letters I get every few months, commonly from high school girls who say that they could no longer stand their ugly nose; it gave them such terrible feelings of inferiority. Many became ashamed to go out; they were afraid people did not like them; they were afraid they would never get a beau, or a husband, and they were utterly miserable. Most of them told me in their first letter that when they begged and begged their parents to let them have a plastic operation, permission was refused.

* * *

Recently, I got a remarkable letter from a young woman who said that instead of letting her have the needed nose operation, her parents sent her to a psychoanalyst. He only angered her by insisting, day after day, that early in life she must have had some sexual trauma. She kept saying that if he would only talk her parents into letting her have her nose fixed, she would be well.

When she told me about this, I wrote her parents, saying that if I had a child or a grandchild so unhappy because of an ugly nose, I would want to give her my last dollar to have her nose fixed. Fortunately, then the parents consented; the nose was reshaped, and immediately the girl was radiantly happy. Later, she wrote me that with the loss of her old shyness, she soon had a nice beau, and soon after she married.

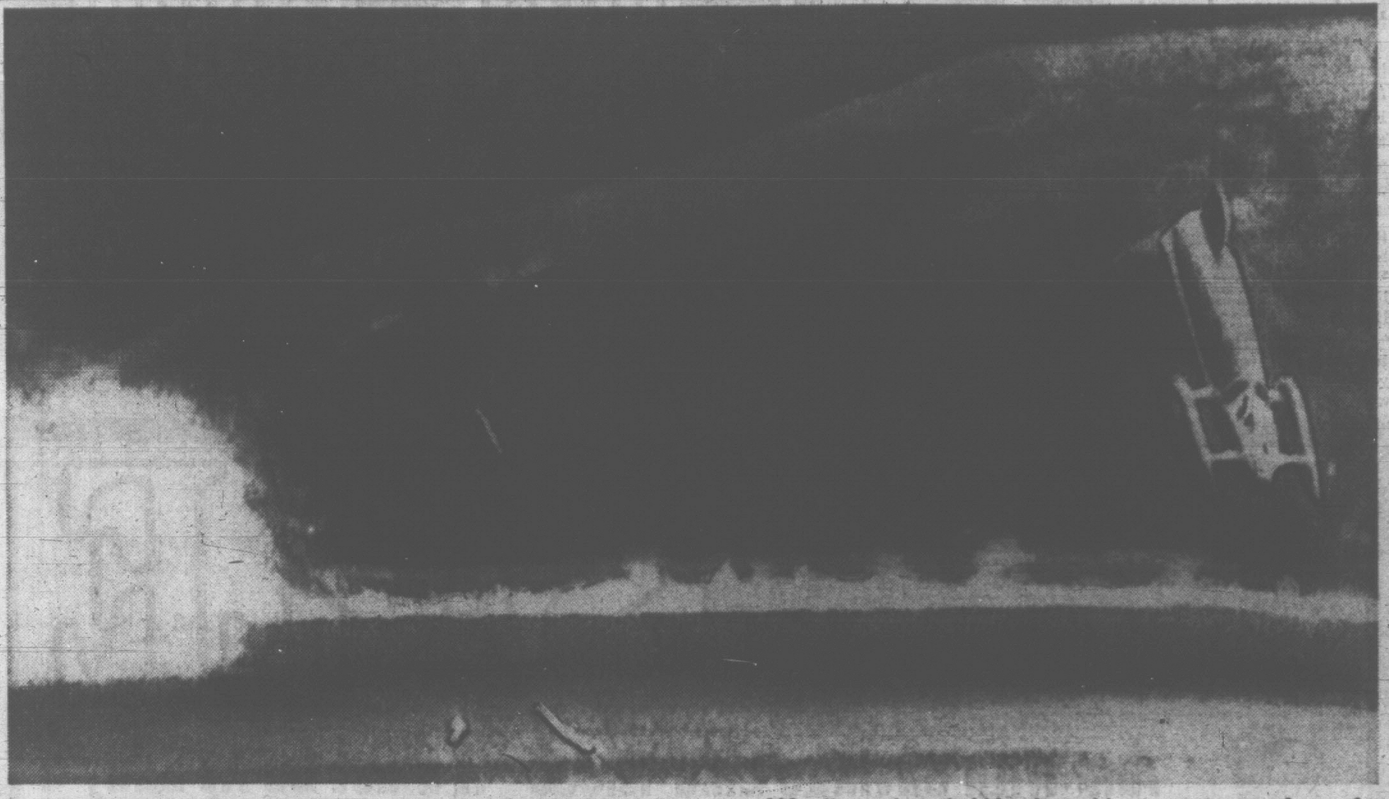
U.S. Missile Soars Over Cuba After Veering From Set Path

WASHINGTON — An unarmed U.S. Air Force missile fired in a test from Florida has veered off its scheduled course into the Gulf of Mexico and presumably soared over Cuba, the defence department said today.

The weapon, undergoing research and development tests, was launched from the air force proving ground at Elgin Air Force Base, Fla.

While the defence department did not go into any explanations, the quick announcement was obviously aimed to get in ahead of any propaganda blasts from the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba.

Donald Campbell Killed In Hydroplane Smashup



JET HYDROPLANE Bluebird, with speed king Donald Campbell at the controls, leaps from surface of Lake Coniston in England before exploding and sinking. Campbell was killed travelling over 300 miles an hour in bid to boost his own water speed record. Frogmen were hunting for his body. (AP Wirephoto.)

Flips Going 300 mph

CONISTON WATER, England (UPI)—The jet-powered hydroplane Bluebird carrying Donald Campbell at more than 300 miles an hour toward a new record flipped 60 feet into the air and smashed to pieces today, killing the British speed ace just short of his goal.

"She's going!" the 45-year-old racer cried over his cockpit radio. Some reports said the bullet-shaped craft appeared to explode as it hit the water and sank 150 feet to the bottom.

CAMPBELL
. . . after new record

Campbell failed by only 100th of a second of completing the course on the mirror-calm lake that would have shattered his previous record of 276.33 miles an hour.

Apparently, he had a premonition of death. But he tried anyway.

JUST TOOK OFF

"I think the explanation of the accident was that the boat was going so fast it just took off," said Norman Buckley, chief observer at the speed test.

Like his father, the late Sir Malcolm Campbell, the water speed king raced cars as well as boats. Sir Malcolm died a natural death in 1949, the year his son started his own racing career. (See story Page 38.)

Strapped into the Bluebird cockpit, Campbell was approaching the end of his return run over a measured kilometer on a lake in northwest England to try for a new speed record.

The craft leaped from the water, arched over and hit the water at a speed of five miles a minute.

Just before it rose, the right "sponson" (hydroplane leg) of the 5,000-horsepower craft lifted from the surface.

Campbell's timekeepers and mechanics heard him say over the radio:

"The water is not in good condition . . . she's tramping (bouncing) . . . I can't see much . . . she's going!"

FOUND MASK

Teamamtes who sped to the scene in small boats found only pieces of wreckage and Campbells' oxygen mask floating on the sufrace. The mask was Campbell's only hope of survival.

Campbell's timekeepers said his official time for the first run over the measured kilometer (about five-eighths of a mile) was 297 m.p.h. That meant he had to averate 303 m.p.h. on the return run to hit the 300 m.p.h target.

"He was travelling over 300 m.p.h. when the crash came and maybe as much as 320 m.p.h.," official observer Andrew Brown told newsmen.

"He was almost through the kilometer, the lake was very smooth," he added. "No one can

55 FT. WAVES DISABLED FREIGHTER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The 10,000-ton Liberian freighter Georgia was towed into Philadelphia today after six days of battling heavy seas in the Atlantic Ocean.

The Georgia's Greek crew told of waves up to "55 feet high" that ripped off hatch covers and poured sea water into the holds.

The freighter, of Second World War vintage, first radioed for help Friday while about 450 miles east southeast of Nantucket.

The freighter, with 29 men aboard, was carrying a load of manganese ore from India to Philadelphia.

JUDGE: 'CLAPTRAP'

New Challenge To Legality Of Bug Probe?

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

A second challenge to the revived royal commission on electronic "bugging" may come next week when it opens for its first hearings in Vancouver.

This possibility loomed today in the wake of a provincial cabinet order reappointing retired county court Judge R. A. Sargent as a one-man royal commissioner in a vastly widened probe.

The new order repeats the Nov. 10 terms of reference ruled as invalid by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson last week. They restricted it to an investigation of the Nov. 5 bugging of hotel rooms used by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and its late president Lloyd Craig.

But a second page has been added widening the investigation into the kinds and extent of "bugging" devices now being used in the province, under what conditions — if any — they should be permitted to private detectives and whether any legislation is needed to establish the civil right to privacy.

Vancouver private detective W. S. Graham testified before the now-qualified original commission that he "bugged" the Canadian union's hotel rooms in Vancouver for Pat O'Neal, an organizer of the rival International Pulp. Sulphite and Paper Workers Union.

IN PUBLIC?

Judge Sargent indicated just before the Christmas recess that the four hours of tapes produced by the bugging would be played in public when the commission resumed after the holidays and this led to the Canadian union's resort to the courts to have the commission declared illegal.

In interviews today, Judge Sargent indicated that he will proceed with his plan to discuss playing the tapes with the lawyers shortly after the new commission begins hearings, expected next week in Vancouver.

He suggested an expurgated version may still be made public.

However, John Laxton, lawyer representing the Canadian union at the commission hearings, told the Times his clients will continue to oppose playing any part of them as a direct invasion of privacy by the commission itself.

Mr. Laxton said the Canadian union had approved establishment of the original commission. But the union went to court against it "once the tape playing became a matter before it, because that changed the whole tenor of the inquiry.

'PRIVACY INVADED'

"We felt that from that point on, he (Judge Sargent) was not acting within his terms of reference which were intended to investigate an invasion of privacy."

Mr. Laxton said this was not the exclusive reason for the court case but was "one of the main ones that precipitated it.

"We oppose under any circumstances the playing of these tapes as a matter of principle that that would be an invasion of privacy.

"We say that no part of the tapes, expurgated or not, can possibly be relevant to this inquiry.

"In our view there was no possible justification for playing them by the old commission and there stil is no possible justification for playing them by the new commission."

Judge Sargent told the Times there had been a "lot of claptrap spoken about those tapes."

He said the question of playing them "was still under advisement when I had adjourned" and this was still the situation.

'Tailings in Buttle No Health Hazard'

The pollution of British Columbia's air and water is a major threat facing the province in the century ahead. The Times assigned reporter Gordon Ritchie to examine the many aspects of the problem in British Columbia and elsewhere. Here is his second report.

By GORDON RITCHIE

Last June the provincial government broke all precedent by allowing a mining company to establish in a provincial park.

Western Mines, Ltd., was allowed to construct a road, a townsite, a hydro-electric station and a 1,000-tons-per-day mining and concentrating operation in Vancouver Island's 100 - square - mile Strathcona Park.

Three months later the B.C. Pollution Control Board, handed the problem by a special cabinet order, granted the mining company a 5-year permit to dump daily some 750 tons of tailings — finely crushed unusable ore — into Buttle Lake, the pride of the park and the most important in a chain of lakes on Vancouver Island.

Buttle Lake is the source of drinking water for 16,000 residents of nearby Campbell River water district and is estimated to contain one-tenth of the fresh water on the Island and as much as 1 per cent of the world's total pure drinking-water supply.

Ruling Soon

The water district promptly took the mining company and the pollution control board to court. The B.C. Court of Appeal is shortly expected to hand down a ruling on an appeal by the water district against a Supreme Court decision upholding the board's action.

The mine began operations last month.

Buttle Lake has consequently been the biggest pollution story of 1966, an inescapable episode in any account of pollution in B.C.

The irony of this situation lies in the fact that the controversy is in large measure a brilliantly-conceived diversionary tactic by the politicians responsible for the far harder-to-defend decision to allow the mine to move into a provincial park in the first instance.

As a Times editorial noted on Sept. 24, shortly after the pollution control board decision was announced:

"Once the green light was given the company to operate a mine in the park it was a foregone conclusion that the means by which the operation could be carried on would also have to be provided.

"But this does not make the Social Credit policy and actions any more acceptable to the many people who consider that legally constituted parkland is a responsibility and a trust which should be honored."

All available evidence indicates the mine tailings will not constitute any public health hazard or even any immediate threat to marine life in the lake.

But all available evidence indicates the possibly highly dangerous long-run consequences of human intervention in the natural balance so carefully protected in a provincial park for the most farsighted and compelling reasons.

The mine is located at the southwestern end of the lake over an orebody of as much as 1.6 million tons of copper, zinc and lead, worth about $100 million and sufficient to keep the mine in operation for at least six and perhaps 20 years.

The annual payroll will probably exceed $2 million, according to general manager Charles Campbell, and annual operating expenditures will approach $4 million, a hefty injection into the economy of the area and the province.

The company expects annual profits of over $4 million on a total capital investment of about $11 million.

Of this $2 million represents the company's share of a 22-mile-long public road put into the park by the highways department, and $1 million — a 4,500 horsepower hydro station which will remain behind when Western Mines packs up its equipment and razes the wooden townsite 20 years from now.

During those 20 years the mine will add to Buttle Lake the treated sewage from the 1,000 residents of the campsite — and the mine tailings containing the fine rock-dust and traces of copper, hexavalent chromium, zinc and cyanide, all lethal to humans and to fish in high enough concentrations.

Holding Pond

Right now the tailings are being poured into a holding pond where final chemical analysis on the nature of the tailings are carried out before they are poured into Myra Creek which flows into the lake.

As soon as a tailings line — essentially a long pipe — is completed it will be called into service to carry the tailings borne along in 720,000 gallons of water per day to a point just over 100 feet below the surface of the lake.

"The lake is 180 feet deep in the centre," says Mr. Campbell, "and we have calculated that we will be able to run tailings into the lake for 100 years without them coming within 100 feet of the surface."

He adds: "As far as we're concerned we've done this as thoroughly as we can because we are aware the spotlight is on us.

"The steps we've taken have cost us money but as far as the whole operation is concerned the cost of disposing of these tailings safely, while significant, is minor in terms of the total operation and the company will not hesitate to see it is done properly.

"On the basis of extensive testing by highly responsible independent metallurgical people," Mr. Campbell says,

U.S. Draft Refugee Protected in Canada

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—A 23-year-old Hartford man who was featured in a recent magazine article on Americans who flee to Canada to avoid the draft has been charged by a federal grand jury with draft evasion.

Gregory R. Garach was pictured with another young American in Life magazine's Dec. 9 edition. The article said they were among 400 to 1,000 Americans now in Canada to avoid compulsory military service.

A bench warrant was issued for his arrest and his bail was set at $5,000. However, the warrant cannot be served in Canada.

Stolen Treasures Recovered

LONDON (AP) — Eight paintings worth $7,000,000 stolen five days ago in the world's biggest art theft, were reported today recovered intact.

Three of the old masters were found in what was believed a professional robbers' den and others in a parcel behind a clump of bushes not far from London's Dulwich College Gallery where they were stolen, police informants said.

Scotland Yard announced the recovery of the paintings but declined to give details. Detectives were still questioning some men in connection with the theft, the yard said.

The paintings — three Rembrandts, three Rubens and one each by Gerald Dou and Adam Elsheimer—were reported to be in good condition despite exposure to frosty air. Some of the paintings were damaged slightly, officials said.

FOUND IN CACHE

Scotland Yard insiders said three of the paintings were found Monday at a hideout which contained a hoard of other stolen property and some weapons.

They said an anonymous telephone call led detectives Tuesday night to Streatham Common, about four miles from Dulwich Gallery in south London, where the remaining five paintings were found in some bushes.

Hanoi Hints Reds Willing To Negotiate

NEW YORK (AP) — Premier Pham Van Dong of Communist North Vietnam says his government's four - point demands in the Vietnam war are not necessarily conditions for peace talks but rather a "basis of settlement of the Vietnam problem," the New York Times reports today from Hanoi.

The Hanoi premier's statement, in an interview with correspondent Harrison E. Salisbury, raised speculation that North Vietnam had shifted in some measure from a hard-line stand which blocked the path to a conference table.

Salisbury quotes Premier Dong as saying:

"The big question is to reach a settlement which can be enforced.

"The party which has to make the first steps is Washington. We have no doubt on this point. We cannot press history forward. If this does not come about today, it will come about tomorrow. It's no use to make haste. If we show haste, the question will be put wrongly and we will have to wait again. So let the situation ripen."

Hanoi's four - point demands have been these: Recognition of the rights of all Vietnamese to peace, independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity; pending peaceful reunification, strict adherence to the terms of the 1954 Geneva agreements which divided Vietnam after the French were expelled; settlement of the internal affairs of South Vietnam by the Vietnamese people "in accordance with the program" of the National Liberation Front which is the Viet Cong's political arm, and reunification without any foreign interference.

TALK AFTER WAR ENDS

In the interview, described by the correspondent as a detailed discussion of North Vietnam's views, the premier was represented as emphasizing that once hostilities were brought to a close, it would be possible to "speak of other things."

"The moment the United States puts an end to the war, we will respect each other and settle every question. Why don't you (the United States) think that way?" Dong was quoted as saying.

Some U.S. officials regarded the premier's remarks as hinting a significant shift in Hanoi's stand on peace talks, although some others said they believed the four-point demands never had been intended as conditions to peace talks.

Walter Gordon Returning To Cabinet, Report Says

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Walter Gordon and Prime Minister Pearson have met for the second time in two days amid strong reports that the former finance minister is about to re-enter the cabinet.

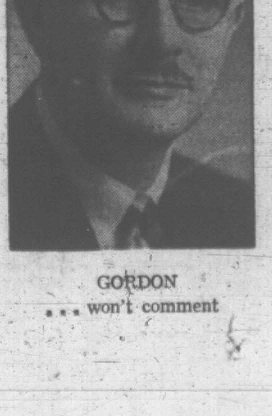
Mr. Gordon himself refused any comment on the speculation that has him becoming a minister without portfolio.

He was caght by newsmen leaving his Parliament Hill office in a rush at noon.

It turned out the big hurry was to skip over to the East Block for another meeting with the Prime Minister, the second in as many days.

Also, last Thrusday Mr. Gordon had lunch at the Prime Minister's Sussex Drive residence.

The speculation, which said the prime minister had offered Mr. Gordon a cabinet post Tuesday and was accepted, was a startling break from persistent reports that Mr. Gordon was on the verge of resigning his seat in the Commons.



GORDON
. . . won't comment

He left the cabinet in November, 1965, following the last federal election when the Liberals once again failed to gain a majority.

It has been no secret since then that Mr. Gordon has become increasingly unhappy with his role as an ordinary member of Parliament and has spent very little time in Ottawa in recent months.

Joe Greene, Minister of Agriculture commented today: "I think enough of us in the cabinet want Walter back, that he will be back. As far as I'm concerned Walter Gordon is very much needed in the cabinet."

"we are satisfied that any operational difficulties can be resolved and the tailings dropped into the lake without any danger to fish or other life in the area."

That was apparently good enough to satisfy the pollution control board which promptly gave Western Mines the three permits they required without allowing a public hearing on the matter.

Crucial Permit

While giving the company everything they asked the board specified upper limits to the chemical content of the tailings and tacked on to the crucial permit No. 163 seven special provisions covering monthly testings during the first year and remedial and emergency measures, and stipulating: "If, in the opinion of the board, the final means of disposal is unsatisfactory, remedial measures deemed necessary by the board at that time shall be undertaken immediately."

It was not good enough for the water district, the municipality of Campbell River or the 18,000-member B.C. Wildlife Federation which demanded a public hearing on the permits. The water district which gets its water from the far end of the lake some 20 miles away wanted the hearing delayed until they had received a report on the situation from the B.C. Research Council — an independent million-dollar research agency.

"We consider no tests or experiments can establish with any sufficient degree of certainty that our water supply will not be polluted," the water district stated.

The pollution control board vetoed the request under a provision of the Pollution Control Act giving the board sole discretion over whether a hearing would be held.

The board's executive engineer, Charles Keenan, explains: "On the basis of all the technical evidence it seemed superfluous to hold a hearing. No one had presented any concrete evidence that anything was amiss."

The board was at once accused of doing the government's dirty work.

"The Pollution Control Board is asked to do a whitewash job and that's what's been done," charged B.C. Wildlife executive director Howard Paish.

In fact, informed sources suggest the board was intentionally restricting its function to a purely technical level in order to toss the hot potato back into the laps of the politicians who originally made the highly political decision.

But not even all the technical evidence was in yet. The B.C. Research Council had not yet made its report.

The council dropped its bombshell Nov. 3 with a report to the water district blasting the control board's decision.

This report proclaimed Western Mines tailing system would not work efectively, if at all.

It warned of possible catastrophic consequences for marine life in the lake.

It blasted Western Mines application for containing innumerable errors and deficiencies and claimed there was no evidence the Pollution Control Board had examined these shortcomings in the Western Mines proposal.

It called for a re-examination of the proposals before Western Mines installed the equipment.

Unfortunately for the water district the bombshell proved to be a dud.

It turned out that the report had been based on an examination of an "Information Summary" prepared for public consumption by Western Mines before the design of the system was completed.

The summary outlined a quite different system from the one actually put before the control board by Western Mines.

And furthermore the B.C. Research Council's analysis of the summary contained technical errors including an error of 4,000 per cent in underestimating the dilution of the townsite sewage and the proposition that water would on its own flow upward out the top of a pipe several feet above the surface of the lake.

These superficial mistakes overshadowed the report's valid qualms about the possible toxic effect of the tailings on trout spawning in streams leading into the lake, the largest spawning bed in a stream within half a mile of the discharge point.

The report was immediately withdrawn before the press could obtain it, and then reissued after the correction of "minor errors," as one of the report's signers, Dr. Craig Walden, head of the council's applied biology division, put it to The Times.

The main change was the report's conclusion.

The revised report, issued under the name of the council's engineering head as well as the original two signers, concluded:

"Many questions have arisen from this study regarding the overall effectiveness of the waste discharge scheme proposed by Western Mines Ltd. and from the lack of sufficient technical information for adequate evaluation of the proposed scheme.

Serious Problems

"Its failure to function effectively could lead to serious problems regarding the drinking water quality, sports fishing potential and recreational value of the waters of Buttle Lake.

"It is suggested that to more clearly delineate these problems further study would be required. If such work could not be completed for incorporation of its findings into the design of the actual tailings disposal system, then the design should anticipate modifications that might possibly be required to make it effective and in addition, provision for emergency waste disposal should be considered as a standby in the event of serious pollution," the new report based on the original evidence concluded.

A new clause was inserted in the body of the report conceding:

"The Information Summary included with Western Mines' application was found to contain omissions and technical errors and as a result it is considered to be only of limited use as an overall summary of the technical problems involved in the disposal of the mine tailings."

Wrong Data

At the outset, then, the report in effect admitted it was based largely on wrong information, and in the conclusion, still ostensibly based on the original analysis, the original blast became a half-hearted slap on the wrist.

When even this watered-down report was seized upon by opponents of the control board action the head of the council, Dr. P. C. Trussell, under considerable pressure, in effect completely repudiated the original report.

"The principles upon which the tailing disposal system is based are considered to be sound," Dr. Trussell said, "and the council believes that a well-designed system based on these principles would maintain chemical contamination and turbidity well under control so that the purity of waters in and passing from Buttle Lake would not be impaired insofar as human health and fish life are concerned."

The apologetic noises made by the retreating council drowned out the warnings of serious students of the problem.

On the basis of two years' intensive study of Buttle Lake and the other lakes in the Buttle system, University of Victoria biologist Dr. Alan Austin warns the Western Mines action may have unforeseeable and immeasurable consequences.

"Has it occurred to the parties involved," asks Dr. Austin, "that the Buttle Lake-Campbell Lakes water system contains what is very probably some of the best quality water in the world.

"Its price per gallon in the year 2,000 is difficult to estimate, but I would place it at a figure much above that of the copper at the same time.

'Nature Park'

"And primarily Buttle Lake is a nature park," he points out, "a reserve of wild organisms both on land and in the water allowed to follow undisturbed their own path of natural development the result of which may be invaluable to us in the future apart from their present esthetic and social advantages.

"It is impossible to foresee the direction that our interests in living organisms will take.

"As our populations increase our demands on resources expand not just for recreation, tourism, sightseeing, sports, but solid economic demands for wild types from wilderness areas for plant and animal breeding.

"This is management for our very survival.

"Perhaps for all other unreserved waterways we just can't wait," Dr. Austin admits.

"But at least for the reserved waterways we must have an intelligent, far-sighted conservation plan.

"Our future may hinge on it."

On Thursday we will take a hard look at the Alberni Valley pollution problem.

Toothache Remedy 'Got to Him'

A man who told central court a rum-soaked "wad" used to ease a toothache pain "got to him" was fined $300 Tuesday for impaired driving.

Pleading guilty the the charge, James B. Noble, 1419 Harrison, said he had only had "a couple" of beers the evening of Jan. 1 when he began to drive home with the toothache remedy in his mouth.

"There must be better ways of taking care of a toothache," Magistrate William Ostler told him.

Esquimalt police arrested him after he hit another car.

Noble's licence was also suspended.

Jack Payne, 2070 Oak Bay, was fined $350 after he pleaded guilty to driving while impaired Monday evening.

Court was told he collided with a firebox on Government St. A breathalyzer test gave a reading of .26 per cent.

REPORT ASKED

Magistrate Ostler ordered a report on the question of Payne's retention of his licence.

In traffic court William Simpson, 1291 Denman was fined $300 and prohibited from driving for four months on an impaired driving offence Nov. 26.

He was also fined $40 on a careless driving charge.

War Declared on Hoodlumism

Violence and vandalism will get short shrift from Victoria's Chief Magistrate in 1967.

In his inaugural address Tuesday Mayor Hugh Stephen said he would encourage by every means possible "the removal of those causes of neglect and abuse which lead to . . . social disorder."

But he also warned that under his administration lawlessness would not be tolerated.

"We must not shrink from taking whatever steps are necessary to the swift arrest and punishment of the offenders," he said.

"No city can longer prosper unless its citizens can go about their business in a reasonable assurance of peace and safety.

"I feel it is my prime duty as Chief Magistrate of this city to serve notice now that the forces of lawlessness will not be tolerated in Victoria; and I shall not shrink from requesting of council the funds necessary to ensure that the Queen's Peace prevails within our boundaries."

Mayor Stephen said that although juvenile crime appeared to have levelled off in the city, he was alarmed by the growing incidence of violence and vandalism.

He cited vandalism in Centennial Square and Ross Bay cemetery as examples of the lawlessness the city would not tolerate.

Progress With Co-Operation

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF Mayor Hugh Stephen gives cause for satisfaction on two counts: he takes over a city whose affairs are generally in excellent shape as a result of the work of enlightened and dedicated predecessors, and he shows great promise of continuing Victoria's advancement through competent handling of internal affairs and forward-looking co-operation with the other municipalities which make up the capital region.

This is an auspicious start, and the people of Victoria will do well to support the leadership of the well-balanced council which will manage their affairs for the coming year.

As at every level of government these days, the necessary expenditures of the city press on revenue and each annual budget finds items being cut and pruned which could well have benefited the city. But the management of past councils has been good: the city enjoys a satisfactory debt position and the burden of taxation has been kept within reasonable bounds.

In this regard, however, Mayor Stephen issues two warnings, and they are such as any fair-minded person must accept. He says that he will "continue to demand a complete re-appraisal of the financial arrangements implicit in the changing nature of the provincial-municipal partnership". And he makes clear that while the capital city will "continue to exercise leadership in all matters involving the well-being of the area as a whole . . . there are some just limits to this process, and as our sister municipalities evolve towards full maturity they and their taxpayers must be ready to assume a larger and more equitable share in the solution of those problems which bear upon us all with equal weight".

In the first case the provincial government will be urged to enter upon the basic study of provincial-municipal financial relations which is long overdue; in the second, the adjacent municipalities will continue to be called on to accept the responsibilities of their growth and importance.

The day of the satellite dormitory municipality, living off the civic core provided by Victoria, is long gone: there is no place for such a phenomenon in this age of progressive development and regional philosophy. Mayor Stephen is admirably suited to the task of leadership in this field and he will be working with reeves who have demonstrated a high degree of regional statesmanship in their approach to the common problems of Greater Victoria.

Mr. Stephen touched on some of these aspects in his report: the successful achievement of a Greater Victoria Public Library Board operating in harmony, the commendable transfer of Gorge Park property from Victoria to Saanich, the joint actions through the regional authority in regard to park acquisition and the sewerage study, the greater realization of the need for common action to improve the hospital situation.

These are examples of the growing awareness that the region must act as an entity in its approach to many problems: its components have become too big in stature to be small in policy.

On internal matters, Mayor Stephen lists with approval the many advances recently made—the Dardanelles widening, the Johnson Street bridge improvement, the development of a heliport, the rehabilitation of Athletic Park, and the many benefits flowing from the Centennial Square and Bastion Square achievements. The Blanshard Street urban renewal will of course be the major improvement project in the coming year, but it is to be hoped that the unfinished business of the Broad Street Mall and similar downtown improvements will not be forgotten.

Mayor Stephen rightly stresses the importance of the civic scene as "the historic battleground where the struggle for mankind's allegiance will be finally determined". The grass-roots level of government is the one closest to the people, and the base on which a true democracy must be built. By this standard, the fortunes of Victoria appear to be in good hands for another year.

Encouragement Needed

IT CAN SCARCELY BE A MATter of surprise that there has been no rush of applicants seeking the first $300 Mungo Martin memorial scholarship open to Indians wishing to improve their qualifications in any of a number of educational fields.

Announcement that the scholarship was available was made at a busy season of the year. Moreover, a certain reticence might be expected from potential candidates. There are not so many young Indians taking advantage of training that they have wide experience in scholarship applications.

But since the award is now available, Indian students should be given every encouragement by teachers, Indian agents and band officials to apply. The total sum to be disbursed each year is modest, and may be shared by more than one applicant. But small grants may be very useful in setting a promising applicant on his way to self-improvement, and the honor of being a Mungo Martin scholarship winner should be no small part of his satisfaction.

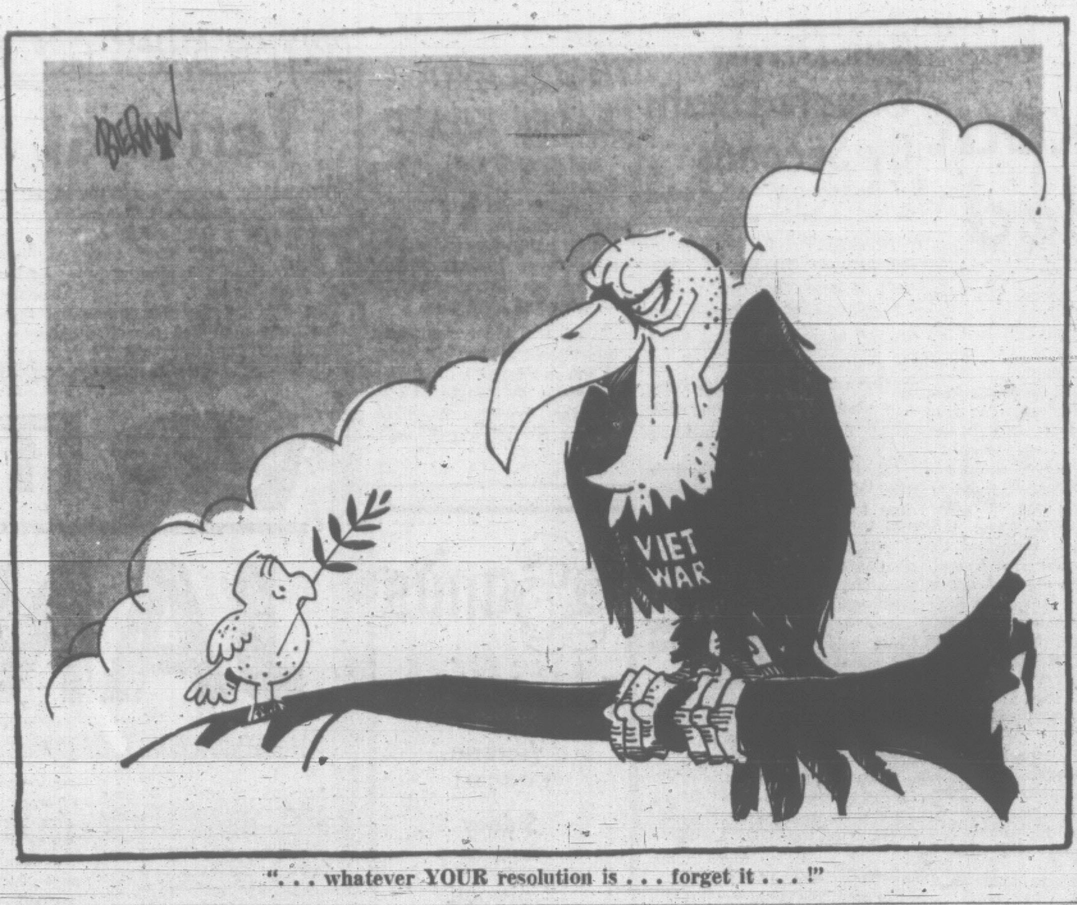
A Gleam of Hope

RED CHINA HAS DETONATED another nuclear test bomb, the United States is charged with killing civilians in Hanoi and has launched a new campaign in the Mekong Delta; an earthquake leveled a Chilean seaport; Britain struggles on the brink of economic disaster; the Middle East is smouldering on the edge of a bloody outbreak; almost every nation on the globe faces problems and fears, and worries about its situation in a world overhung by the nuclear bomb, financial bankruptcy and runaway moral problems.

Under such circumstances it is more than refreshing — it is rejuvenating, revivifying, restorative —to read that twenty Bohemian Waxwings are with us this winter; that 124 species of feathered visitors were observed here in the annual Christmas count and an estimated 55,000 birds are fluttering in our trees, swooping through our skies and feeding in our meadows.

It is beneficial for us to know that these ornaments of nature are fulfilling their migratory destinies in their age-old way, pursuing their lives as though man and his neurotic problems did not exist. But it is equally beneficial to know that there are people to whom these wonders of nature are still important—important enough to warrant a full day in the field making a count and deriving pleasure from the exercise.

The insanities of the wars and war preparations of the world are enough to unsettle any human being—and the hordes of unsettled human beings today are evidence of that. But there are twenty Bohemian Waxwings in our area this season—let us hold on to that one small speck of sanity and fulfilment, at least. It could yet prove to be our antidote and our salvation.



". . . whatever YOUR resolution is . . . forget it . . . !"

Wringing Hands, or Ringing Bells?

Western

THE prime minister, at his pre-New Year press conference, dealt somewhat philosophically with the no rejoicing centennial edict issued in Quebec City by Mr. Yves Gabias, the provincial secretary. From the information which has reached the East Block, Mr. Pearson sees the problem as essentially climatic rather than ideological. Quebec, with some other provinces, has contracted out of New Year's eve, which is likely to be somewhat frigid around the Citadel, but will participate with abandon in the observances when spring brings warmer breezes.

Mr. Gabias avoided climatic details in his public announcement. There may, however have been a practical reason for this reticence. It is only a matter of weeks until everyone in Quebec City will be out in the bracing February air participating, with their customary joie de vivre, in the annual winter carnival. The notion that joy should be confined because of a few degrees of frost is, understandably, not one that a Quebec government would wish to propagate.

On the other hand Mr. Gabias did justify his plan of participation without rejoicing by reference to political-historical arguments at some variance with the centennial theme. The general thought, though not entirely clear, seems to be that Quebec will cash in on whatever is going while averting its eyes from the sorry spectacle of Confederation after 100 years.

This austere approach is likely to present a stern challenge to the people of Quebec. They have suffered many criticisms but never, so far as I know, have they been reproached for puritanism. Champlain had barely unpacked his bags when he launched the Company of Good Cheer and from then on, through the days of the wintering partners, Quebeckers have outdistanced all others in uninhibited celebrations. Mr. Gabias's scheme for rationing joy promises to be a fascinating although scarcely a promising, experiment.

Louisiana Example

The minister's argument seems, in any event, to contain a hole large enough for any would-be merry-maker to drive through with a coach and six. Confederation may not, at the moment, be functioning to Quebec's satisfaction. But it does not follow that Quebec has no reason to celebrate the events of 100 years ago. Had they not occurred, Quebec (whether as province, state or nation) would probably have gone with Louisiana.

It is easy to forget that the main thrust of manifest destiny in the Americas and in the Pacific was felt after 1867. Without Confederation, which made possible railway links with both coasts, the West would undoubtedly have been absorbed by the United States. The English colonies would probably have slipped away too since their economic prospects would have been bleak and British statesmen of the period were by no means happy about defence burdens in North America. What then would have happened to Quebec?

We know what happened when the United States succumbed to the spell of Mr. Kipling and overseas empire later in the century. Mr. Hearst had little trouble in arousing public enthusiasm for a Spanish war offering such modest prizes as Cuba, Puerto Rico and The Philippines. In that premissile age few Americans can have regarded Cuba as a serious security risk. They could scarcely have regarded a Quebec republic in any other light. For much of their history it had been the major threat and it lay astride the St. Lawrence, a major outlet for American commerce.

There are no associate states in the United States and the ideas favored by Mr. Gabias and his party have been frowned on in Washington ever since South Carolina precipitated the nullification crisis early in the last century.

Out of Character

One would think, therefore, that Mr. Gabias — whatever his views on such matters as the constitution and tax-sharing — would have as much reason as anyone to celebrate Confederation. If his spirits have oozed as the temperature has sunk, he will certainly not lack for sympathy in this country. But there seems to be something distinctively out of character in his program of strength without joy.

He is, of course, absolutely within his rights in sternly refusing to fire cannon or carry torches. But it is asking a great deal of French-Canadians to expect them to wring their hands for 365 days when others are ringing bells.

Seeds of Distrust

Manchester Guardian Weekly

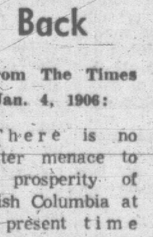
Two years ago most people in this country would have tended to blame any violations of the truce on the Communists. It is probably no longer so. Today the Americans are just as likely to be blamed for shooting first, for official American statements are no longer taken on trust here. That is one of the by-products of the war. In the United States, where the phenomenon is naturally causing even more concern, it is called the "credibility gap." We always used to be told that American bombing crews were both scrupulous and skilled in confining their aim to military targets. Mr. Harrison Salisbury has described what he has seen in North Vietnam — the "block upon block of ordinary housing" destroyed by repeated bombing raids. And on Tuesday the Defence Department admitted that civilian areas do get hit.

The Defence Department still insists that its policy is to bomb only military targets, "particularly those which have a direct impact on the movement of men and supplies in South Vietnam." Yet Mr. Salisbury tells of a repeatedly bombed town with none of those targets but only a textile mill and other factories. What cause has the Department given us to believe its own spokesman rather than Mr. Salisbury?

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMANN

How to Range Nations Against the U.S.



Lippmann

THE outlook for the new year would be brighter if in talking about the Vietnam war the United States could get rid of the idea that the country is confronted with the sharp choice between winning or losing the war, between unconditional and immediate withdrawal and the unconditional surrender of the enemy. These absolute choices are easy to talk about. But they represent a failure to think at all. They hide the real problem and make it unmanageable.

The real problem is to find some middle ground between a South Vietnam which must remain indefinitely under American occupation, and a South Vietnam under the direct domination of North Vietnam. There is no hope that the activists in the north and in the south of Vietnam can ever agree to the permanence of the American military presence in South Vietnam. The North Vietnamese on the other hand can have no hope that the United States will withdraw its forces and throw the regime in South Vietnam to its enemies. There is hope only in a negotiated compromise.

The compromise can not, however, be negotiated so long as the President is placed in the false dilemma of victory or defeat. Win or no-win, go up or get out, withdrawal or knock-them-out. To be asked to choose between these absolute and extreme policies is to have to choose the impossible, the unreal — among various forms of nonsense.

There is on one extreme the notion that the American forces can be forced to withdraw, either because they are defeated in battle or because the American people grow weary of the battle. M. Jean Sainteny, who has known Ho Chi Minh longer and has seen him more recently than any Westerner, says that North Vietnam may be suffering from the illusion that American forces in Indochina, though stronger than the French forces were in the '50s, will follow the same course down to defeat.

Dangerous Illusion

If Ho Chi Minh thinks this, he is entertaining a very dangerous illusion. The American military power cannot be defeated by any Asian army that can be mobilized and equipped. The American army can stay in South Vietnam until it is deliberately withdrawn under a negotiated settlement.

But while the Americans cannot be defeated, it does not follow that they can win. Those who are able to wreck a house completely and effectively are not often the same men who can build a new house. The extremist hawks are well represented by the chairman of the House armed services committee, Mr. Mendel Rivers, who wants us "to flatten Hanoi and let world opinion go fly a kite." If men like him prevail — and unfortunately they have been increasingly on the ascendant since 1965 — we shall be in worse trouble than we are in now.

The Mendel Rivers view, which is the theory of the air force, is important because the President, though protesting and resisting, has again and again yielded to it. We can afford no illusions about the consequences of taking this absolute course. If the country presents itself as uniquely and unilaterally entitled to use unlimited military force in Vietnam, it will isolate itself among the nations of the world.

Historical Impact

Chairman Rivers thinks that all that this will mean is that the other nations will make speeches and write editorials and march in demonstrations. He knows little of the world. Once the strongest military power on earth had identified itself as willing and ready to use unlimited force for its own ends, there begins, as we see in history, the formation of a coalition to contain its militancy. That is where things have been pointing since 1965; that is where they will go if we think that we can use our weapons and ignore world opinion.

The self-righteous use of military power will be just as dangerous to the United States as it has proved to be before in the history of nations. The out and out militarist power will unite other nations against it. The tough guys among us who cannot find words scornful enough to express their contempt for those who ask for a decent respect to the opinions of mankind, are foolish and ignorant men. They know no history and they know little of the world they are talking about.

If they have their way we too, like the militarists of the past, shall find that fear of our power and distrust of our purposes will bring about an alignment of the nations against us.

"I GIVE UP! I DON'T UNDERSTAND HOW PEOPLE EAT ROUND PEAS!"

Looking Back

From The Times of Jan. 4, 1906:

"There is no greater menace to the prosperity of British Columbia at the present time than the wholesale acquisition of fine mining lands and other districts in the interior by foreign and home capitalists and speculators who will hold them until the influx of immigrants over the Grand Trunk Pacific. Then they will feed on this tide of settlers by asking their own price."

The above statement was made to a Times reporter by H. Helgesen, Dominion fishery inspector.

Letters

In Deep Gratitude

The news that the latest Victoria Daily Times "Share with Asian Children" Fund has once again been immensely successful was one of my finest Christmas gifts. Thus, this message is written with deep gratitude in my heart on behalf of the children and adults in Korea, India and Hong Kong who will now be able to receive aid in a multitude of different ways, thanks to your readers' generosity. Laughter will replace tears of obsessing hunger; there will be medicines for those shaking with fever, and little ones will be lovingly cared for while their parents are at work, to provide at least one meal a day.

In the true spirit of this season your readers have shared and cared and I happily join your many friends in Asia who send to each one of you uncounted blessings and the very best wishes for a truly happy new year!—Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director, Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

The New Joan

Your Tuesday's "A New Joan on a Discredited Crusade" was read with great interest — especially when the alternative it suggested to Miss (Saint Joan) Southin's reported voice was really the one that saved Jonah the Prophet. (At least, so it seemed to imply.)

More about this Mary Southin and her ideas is called for by a reading of your most interesting article.

There may be certain misgivings about the implied need for Jonah's Whale again now — especially since it may not be a real whale.—C. Carlson, 3760 Saanich.

Old-Time Weather

Concerning the remarks on the weather at Victoria, on Page 1 of your Dec. 27 issue, I looked up some diaries which were kept in Victoria from 1887 to 1905 and which included daily weather notes.

For Dec. 25, 1899, I found the following comment: "This is one of the finest Christmas Days ever seen in B.C. Warm and lovely. Therm. stands at 60 outside the house."—A. B. McNeill, 1141 Hampshire.

7th Battalion

A news story in your issue of Dec. 27, 1966, refers to "... The Victoria Fusiliers which later distinguished itself as the 7th Infantry Battalion CEF."

There is no doubt that all members of the 7th Batt. distinguished themselves. Indeed, in five years overseas the battalion lost 64 officers and 1,335 NCOs and men. It was demobilized in Vancouver May 5, 1919, without a single one of its original officers and less than a dozen of its original NCOs and men. But, in the interests of historical accuracy, it must be said that the 7th was recruited from all parts of the province.

Major T. V. Scudamore, VD, in his Short History of the 7th Batt., CEF writes:

"The hot, sticky days of August, 1914, saw riflemen form the Duke of Connaught's Own (6th Regt. DCOR, Vancouver) Fusiliers from the Irish Fusiliers of Canada (Vancouver), the Victoria Fusiliers and the Westminster Fusiliers, together with detachments from the Rocky Mountain Rangers from around Kamloops and a splendid draft from the Kootenays, sinking their old identity to form a homogeneous whole in the 7th Batt., CEF — the 1st British Columbia Regiment."—B.H.E.G.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP) — Wheat and corn overcame an early weakness and advanced slightly in closing dealings on the Chicago board of trade today.

Soybeans showed some strength in the deferred deliveries but the nearby contracts were weak.

Dry weather in the cattle and U.S. grain-producing areas served as a stimulant to prices in the wheat and corn pits.

WINIPEG (CP) — Prices on the Winnipeg grain exchange today held to a narrow range in dull dealings. Trade reports indicated 1,000 tons of Canadian rapeseed sold to Italy.

There was some activity in rapeseed, but small trade in flax with minor fluctuations recorded.

Oats and barley trade was mostly domestic associated with feed supply and prices were steady.

Some irregularities were reported in the rye market, influenced by declines in Chicago rye and wheat. A firmer tendency developed near the close.

Lakehead prices for class two, IWA and domestic wheat were all down ⅛ cent.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Prices Suffer Drop At Toronto, N. York

After displaying strength in the first day of trading in the new year prices sagged today on both the Toronto and New York markets.

Brokers said the advance was of a technical nature and not stimulated by any new developments.

AT TORONTO Inco dropped 1¾ to 93, Falconbridge 1 to 87 and Moore Corp. and Great Lakes Power ¾ each to 86¼ and 21¾.

Among golds Dome was down 2 to 45 and Campbel Red Lake 1 to 21. Dome Petroleum slid 1⅛ to 30½ in western oils.

AT NEW YORK leading issues lost from fractions to 1 to 2 points.

Among wider declines, IBM dropped 5, Sprague Electric almost 4 and Continental Airlines nearly 3.

Down about 2 were Raytheon and Collins Radio.

Chrysler held a gain exceeding a point. General Motors was almost a point lower.

Boeing sagged more than a point, virtually wiping out Tuesday's gain on news it had been chosen to develop the U.S. supersonic air transport.

AT MONTREAL industrials led the market fractionally lower in light trading today.

Inco was off 1⅞ points to 92⅞. Alcan and CPR were each off ¼ to 29¾ and 55¾ respectively.

AT LONDON stocks were firmer today although trading was quiet. Gilt-edged shares were easier.

Wall Street's cautious improvement made dollar stocks look better, but with occasional dull spots which included International Nickel and Hollinger.

Canadian Pacific was two points higher and improvements elsewhere in Canadians were led by Noranda.

Canadian banks were firmer although initial gains were not always held.

AT VANCOUVER Silver Arrow was once again the volume leader in pre-noon trading.

The stock traded 77,000 shares and rose .02 to 52.

Magnum traded 24,550 shares to put on .03 to .60 and Brenmac was .05 better at .45.

Arctic and Bethex however, were both off .05 and Dynasty lost .20 of its recent gains.

In the industrials, Sun A gained .37 to $24 and both Capital Estates and Corporation Credit improved .25.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 4, 1967—PAGE 21

Second Section
Pages 21-40

Arthur Mayse

It would be fine indeed if individual and community problems were to dissolve in the warmth of our December festivities. However, January finds them still with us; and in these aftermath days of empty pockets and turkey a la king, they once more poke their heads into view.

One of them is the tedious, thankless, costly, but essential business of ensuring that our young get sound schooling.

To guarantee them this right, it isn't enough that we merely grant an occasional raise to their teachers.

Indeed, the teachers themselves have not been backward in making it plain that much more is needed; and the chief present requirement is a drastically increased school construction program.

Greater Victoria, like very many other areas, is in the position of having too many children for the classroom space available.

★

If your child happens to be one of the approximate 1,600 crowded into classes that run more than 40 pupils to a teacher, he, and you, are direct victims of this bad situation.

Should he be one of the 8,000 presently in classes numbering between 35 and 40, his condition is very far from ideal.

And if he and you find yourselves committed—condemned would be a better word—to the villainous shift system, you have every right to descend on your MLA with a bluntly-worded demand for remedial action.

In this connection, don't be fooled by razzle-dazzle, sweet talk, or cogent-seeming arguments. The child on shift is not getting the education that you're paying for in taxes, nor is his teacher receiving a fair shake.

I am emphasizing this matter of shifts because it is more likely than not that youngsters in at least six of our elementary schools are going to have the shift system dropped on them when this year's summer vacation ends.

This not through Greater Victoria School Board heel-dragging. The board, in fact, has repeatedly sought B.C. government permission to accept contractors' bids that would make many more elementary classrooms available.

The refusal comes from the provincial government.

One of the schools proposed would have served the Christie Point area.

In fairness, it should be noted that in addition to the fiscal freeze, a sewage disposal headache exists which has not yet been cured.

But there is no such obstacle to prevent immediate action on the projected Newton elementary school of 16 classrooms.

★

The freeze is on—and has been for a number of months in fact—and for an indeterminate future, we can expect only what the government is pleased to approve as essential classroom building.

In this context, "essential" appears to be a weasel word. Are we to wait until overcrowded student and teacher populations have actually been forced to adopt shift procedures before a go-ahead is given for new and badly-needed elementary schools?

If this is the case, as it seems to be, the question is automatic:

Why?

Despite its long-term reluctance to give education its due, why this extreme nigardliness on the part of government?

Federal tightening up may bear on the question, but does not satisfactorily explain it.

Before the coming legislative session ends, we may be wiser. Until then, we can only surmise.

My own guess, in which I am by no means alone, is that Premier Bennett's government is in precisely the state in which many a voter finds himself today.

Over-spent, and over-committed.

In any case, if governmental economy is to be the new watchword, let it be practised last, not first, on British Columbia's children!

B.C. Drivers Hit the Brakes Too Late

B.C. motorists slammed the brakes on their fatal accident rate in the last half of 1966 but sheer momentum prevented them from avoiding a record.

A total of 516 persons died on the roads of the province by midnight, Dec. 31 but the books are being kept open for another month in case any of several critically injured persons succumb, a Motor Vehicles Branch spokesman said today.

The 1965 death toll was an even 500 which set a record.

With 7 per cent more motor vehicles registered last year, expectations were that the 1966 toll would go much higher than it did.

By mid-year, the death toll rate was running 40 per cent over the 1965 figures and MVB officials think this scared motorists sufficiently to produce the considerable improvement which saw the overall increase held to 3 per cent by the year's end.

Forty-one persons died during the last month, compared with 67 during December, 1965.

Statisticians will be busy for some time compiling and analyzing all the traffic accident figures but it already is clear that passengers and pedestrians were the two main groups that went to their graves from accident scenes.

LANGFORD

Early Zoning Verdict

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell will make an early decision on the proposed land use zoning plan for the Colwood-Langford Metchosin area.

A public meeting will be held tonight to wind up discussions on the plan, the minister said today.

It will take place in room 210 at Belmont School at 8 p.m.

"An early decision will be made on this matter as it has now been discussed for more than a year," he added. "Public meetings and hearings have been held throughout the year."

13,419 IN AREA

The proposed zoning regulations will affect a population of 13,419 living in a 36 square-mile area.

The plan was prepared by the district advisory commission assisted by the Capital Region Planning Board.

Its main purpose is to guide growth in an orderly way throughout the district. The population is slightly higher than Esquimalt's. Some areas already are suffering from urban growth problems, such as sewage and a need for recreational areas.

The plan designates the urban areas, rural-residential, general commercial, extended commercial, motel, industrial, recreational and institutional and limited agricultural.

Langford and vicinity is chiefly affected as most of the district's industrial and commercial businesses are situated in the area.

CONTROL HOUSING

The plan will also control the development of housing, such as setbacks for dwellings. Industrial businesses will be required to provide for off-street parking.

At a public hearing held at Belmont School Tuesday the chief objection to the plan came from auto wreckers and car dealers.

John Deighton and R. Fleming, who operate a car sales business on Matson Road, opposite the Langford Elementary school, opposed a regulation which would make their business non-conforming.

But a brief from School District 62 trustees supported the regulations on the grounds a school for retarded chkldren would soon be built in the vicinity.

One auto wrecker on Millstream Road also objected to rezoning his land to non-conforming.

John Williams, Glen Lake Road, supported the plan as a whole, but said consideration should be given to creating more commercial and industrial zones.

"I support zoning," he said. "And I think the members of the commission have done a good job."

Ask The Times

Q. Why is it whenever I take the 9 p.m. or 10 p.m. ferry from Tsawassen, the upper deck is always closed off, no matter how crowded we are down below? J.B.

A. A B.C. Ferries public relations officer says the upper deck is closed to the public, normally on the day's last run, to clean and wax the floor. The night crew then cleans the rest of the vessel.

Q. As a Metchosin ratepayer I want to know if there is any assurance that the Centennial swimming pool we voted to build in our district won't cost more than the $220,000 we were told it would cost P.S.T.

A. The Regional District of the Capital of British Columbia has set a ceiling cost of $250,000 on the project. There is not, apparently any guarantee that the pool won't cost that much, however.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Pioneer Name Wins Medal For Warship

A trim little lady just five-years-old was one of the first in B.C. to be awarded a medal struck to honor pioneers.

But she wasn't honored for her age as much as for her name.

The honor went to HMCS Mackenzie, a destroyer-escort launched in May 1961. B.C. centennial chairman L. J. Wallace presented the medal today stating:

"Mackenzie the pioneer gave his name to Mackenzie, the river. Mackenzie the river gave its name to Mackenzie the ship.

"Thus the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of British Columbia presents to HMCS Mackenzie, and all who sail in her, the commemorative centennial pioneer medal."

The same medal will be presented this year in hundreds of ceremonies to thousands of living pioneers who were in Canada prior to 1892.

The medal bears a likeness of the explorer Alexander Mackenzie and is being issued to mark the 100th anniversary of Confederation.

CENTENNIAL TRAIN ROLLS WEST; NO PREVIEWS GIVEN EASTERNERS

The Centennial Train is rolling toward Victoria through waves of discontent.

The discontent has been registered by curious crowds in Eastern Canada who are not allowed a preview. Official opening of its historic displays takes place at Victoria Monday and until then, no peeking.

Federal Centennial representative in British Columbia, Jack Golding, reported today the train was west of Winnipeg Tuesday night and heading toward Calgary. It was sent off by Mme. Vanier, wife of the Governor-General, on New Year's Day. It should arrive in Victoria Friday. But over the weekend—no peeking.

Esquimalt to Vote On Fire Department, Regional Parks Move

Esquimalt voters will decide the fate of their joint fire-police department and at the same time vote on joining the regional parks board in a referendum later this year.

Reeve Ray Bryant disclosed that a vote will be held on both issues in a speech at the first council meeting of the year Tuesday night.

The municipality's fire-police problem should be solved as soon as possible to prepare for an eventual decrease in the back-up offered Esquimalt by navy fire-fighters, he said.

"Sweeping changes" in the department of national defence could reduce the support in the future, although the weekend closure of the Naden Fire Department does not affect Esquimalt, Reeve Bryant said.

Setting up separate fire and police forces for the municipality would occur if the change can be made without "a substantial increase in the costs," and if voters approve, he said.

PAID VOLUNTEERS

Reeve Bryant suggested the "paid volunteer' system as a solution to the problem, and referred it for study to one of two newly-formed council committees.

He added he is requesting "the complete co-operation of the various unions involved" to help present "an entirely accurate submission of the facts" to voters.

Council also will push the proposal for Esquimalt to join the Regional District for acquisition of parklands.

Esquimalt opted out of the regional plan last year mainly because it did not wish to be burdened with possible 'maintenance of park lands.

Reeve Bryant said previous objections had now been "disposed of" since the regional parks work had been limited to acquiring parkland.

Sworn in before the meeting were Coun. Ed DeCosta, who is also acting reeve in Reeve Bryant's absence, and Walter Lock, both re-elected last month, and newcomer Coun. James Bell.

Council also voted a letter of thanks to former Coun. James Bryant, who served 15 years on council, for his "long and faithful service."

Later in the meeting, council:

- Sent a protest letter to Greater Victoria school trustees about the "slowness of negotiation" for a running track at Esquimalt Sr. Secondary. Council also asked that the field area beside the school be cleaned up, graded and seeded.
- Set aside $3,500 for centennial street decorations for Esquimalt.

Two Charged With Raiding Camera Shop

Two men appeared in central court today on charges of breaking into a city business Tuesday and stealing goods and cash worth $435.

William Pick, 2122 Cook St. and Wilfred Humphreys, 1275 Pandora, were remanded to Tuesday for election and plea.

Pick was granted bail of $5,000 or one of two sureties and Humphrey, $3,000 or one or two sureties.

They were arrested following a break-in at Williamson's Camera Centre Ltd., 666 Fort.

Taken from the store was an Agfa camera worth $79, an Optina valued at $31.50, two Polaroids worth a total of $170, a $100 Kodak Retina, and two pairs of walkie-talkies valued at $16 a pair.

Also missing was about $25 in cash.

Entry to the building was gained by forcing a transom sometime after 5:45 when the store was locked up for the night.

Two Mishap Victims Improving

Two accident victims in critical condition before the holiday weekend have shown improvement, hospital spokesmen said Tuesday.

William Badenoch, 23, of 334 John St., was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital Thursday night after a two-ton plate slipped from a crane and crushed him at the Yarrows shipyard. He is in improved condition toeday.

Robert McGimpsey, 16, of 5026 Lochside suffered severe head injuries eight days ago when his motorcycle rammed a tree on Claremont after colliding with a dog.

He is reported in "fairly good" condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital and is no longer in the hispital's intensive care unit.

Tenders Called On Garbage Plan

Tenders are open in Saanich for the collection of garbage.

Deadline for bids to pick up and take garbage to the dump from about 17,500 premises is Tuesday March 14.

The present garbage collector in Saanich is Lorne MacNutt.

Gas Rates Hold While Dealers Take Hard Look

Retail gasoline prices remained unchanged today as service station dealers pondered wholesale price increases announced by two major oil companies.

There were dealer indications that Imperial and Shell outlets would sit tight for about a week, or until most had been resupplied at the new wholesale price before making a move.

ONE-CENT BOOST

Most are likely to raise the per gallon retail price by as much as one cent.

But two medium-heavy volume dealers Tuesday said they plan to absorb the added cost.

Shell Oil in Toronto announced its price increase Tuesday morning, the same .2 of a cent which Imperial raised its prices across the nation on Sunday.

The new wholesale price is to cover the 1 per cent increase in federal sales tax also effective Jan. 1.

It applies to all gasoline and other petroleum products except for fuel oil which is not taxed.

A heavy volume Imperial dealer said he is in a position to keep selling at the current rate.

A Shell operator who classed himself as a medium volume gasoline retailer said he would absorb the 1-5 cent higher cost.

Underclothes, Shoes Needed For Fire Victims

Underclothing and shoes for the Thrift family, whose house and belongings were destroyed Sunday in house fire, are still needed.

Captain Gareth Douglas of Esquimalt Salvation Army says in boy's size five and one-half and shoes for girls aged six and seven years are needed.

Capt. Douglas says he has received $35 in trust for the Thrift family, victims of a fire in which a 16-month-old baby lost its life.

The money will be added to $100 by Esquimalt Lions as the initial donation in a fund to be held in trust by the Esquimalt branch of the Bank of Montreal, 1250 Esquimalt.

Further donations will be accepted by the bank.

Experts Urge Auditorium Of 5,000 Seats

Estimated Outlay $2 to $5 Million

Victoria needs a multi-purpose auditorium-exhibit building capable of seating 5,000 persons.

That's the major recommendation released today by the Portland consultant firm of Lund, McCutcheon & McBride.

The firm made no suggestions as to the cost of such a facility nor did it make any recommendations as to location.

But convention committee members who received the report this morning estimated the cost at between $2 million and $5 million.

The committee, in disagreement with several facets of the report, decided to spend the next few weeks studying the various recommendations in detail prior to preparing written submissions on likes and dislikes.

Among the major recommendations in the $3,000 study are:

- A 5,000-seat auditorium.
- 40,000 square feet of display area for exhibits etc.
- A complex of nine small meeting rooms catering to groups ranging in numbers between 50 and 500.
- A catering kitchen capable of handling large banquets.
- Stage facilities capable of handling road shows and musicals plus movie screens, projectors and sound systems.
- Complete air conditioning.
- A car park capable of handling a minimum of 1,250 cars.

The report, several months in preparation, said the convention industry is growing into a major business and that if Victoria is to get its share it must start planning immediately.

DOUBLED HERE

Backing its convention potential claim with figures, the report revealed the convention business had more than doubled in Victoria over the past three years.

In 1963, the report states, there were 5,080 delegates in the city. In 1964 there were 6,850, in 1965 some 8,585 and last year the total hit an all time high of 13,040.

The report stated that with adequate convention centre facilities that total could be doubled by 1971.

Estimated income from conventions last year was $1,434,000, a figure which, the consultants state, could easily be pushed to an annual income of $3 million if the city makes every effort to build a convention centre facility and push convention sales.

"It should be remembered," the report states, "that Victoria has not, to date, had an organized convention sales effort supported by manpower and promotional funds."

Several committee members expressed concern that if a centre was built according to the recommendations the Arena and the McPherson Playhouse would suffer.

City engineer James Garnett said he felt the Arena "wasn't too bad for many events when the ice is out."

'ABORTION'

"It isn't bad, it's an abortion," replied chairman Clyde Savage. "As an ice area it's fine, but for anything else it isn't very good in my book."

Mr. Garnett said the main thing bothering him about the 29-page report is that the consultants did not appear to substantiate many of their claims.

City treasurer James Bramley agreed.

"Maybe our next step should be to invite one of the consultants over to clarify some of the items in the report," he said.

CLARIFICATION

But the director of recreational facilities in the city, Jack Morgan, said he couldn't see the point in opening discussions with the consultants until committee members had clarified their own thinking.

"Right now all we agree on is that we need a convention centre," he said. "But obviously we all have reservations on some of the recommendations."

His suggestion that all committee members study the report and bring back written observations was accepted.

VICTIMS NAMED

Strong Winds Ruled Out Lowering Boat

A couple who perished after their pleasure boat sank in Georgia Strait Monday night have been identified as Mrs. Velma Moore and George Sauriol, both of 117 Finlayson Street, Nanaimo.

Mrs. Moore died of exposure without regaining consciousness after she was plucked from the water by the B.C. government ferry, Queen of Burnaby.

Mr. Sauriol slid out of his lifejacket and let go of a life ring when a heavy wave carried him away from the ferry as it manoeuvred to pick him up. His body has not been recovered.

Captain Tom Rayner, master of the Queen of Burnaby, said today that winds of between 35 and 40 m.p.h. were blowing during the rescue attempt.

WINDS TOO STRONG

He said the strong winds prevented the ferry from launching a boat to rescue the couple.

Both persons aboard the pleasure craft were thrown in the water when it swamped as the ferry was coming to its assistance. Mrs. Moore was about 45 minutes in the water before she was taken aboard the ferry.

Capt. Rayner said he did not bring his ferry to windward of the woman and lower a boat because of the heavy seas.

He said he attempted to keep the bow of the boat close to Mrs. Moore while crew members and passengers tried to grab hold of her and lift her out of the water.

INQUIRY

The exact ages of the dead are not available but police said both were in their fifties. A coroner's inquiry into the tragedy will be held in Vancouver.

Mr. Sauriol was an electrician at Harmac pulp mill. He and Mrs. Moore were common-law man-and-wife.

Education, Welfare Eat Up City Budget

Education and social welfare will again take the major slices out of Victoria's $14,991,250 budget for 1967.

Introducing his provisional budget Tuesday city treasurer James Bramley estimated that education would cost taxpayers $3,175,000 while social welfare services will cost $1,322,000.

Other major expenditures are forecast for the protection of persons and property with $2,698,500 earmarked in that category.

Included in the total is $1,038,500 for the police department, $175,000 for magistrate's court; $65,000 for the prosecutor's office; $85,000 for family and children's court; $60,000 for the juvenile detention home; $123,000 for protective inspections and $242,000 for street lighting.

The fire department's budget for the year is set provisionally at $910,000.

TIDES CITY OVER

The provisional budget is brought down in January each year as a requirement of the Municipal Act. It enables a municipality to provide funds for various services prior to the striking of the mill rate and the establishmennt of the tax levy.

Mr. Bramley stresses that the budget is only provisional.

"We can't establish a definite budget until we know just what grants we are getting from the senior government," he said.

He said he had planned to have one more discussion with the lawyers about playing the tapes before any action was taken and he still planned to do this under the new terms of reference.

"There are certain parts that might be admissible and others not and we were to have a conference to decide if or how to winnow those out," he said.

He said the new commission will have to go through all the red tape of setting up a new hearing so it likely will not open until next week in Vancouver.

"Then it will take a day or so to shape up but there will be a shortcut because we won't have to go through all the evidence already given.

"Then, as to that (tape-playing question), there will have to be a conference between counsel and myself as to how we will do it."

LAWYER MUM

Mary Southin, the lawyer who represented the Canadian union in obtaining Chief Justice Wilson's declaration the original cabinet order was invalid, declined comment on whether the new order overcame the objections.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner this morning claimed the new order could result in B.C. becoming the first Canadian jurisdiction to establish legislation creating privacy as a civil right.

He said a Manitoba law prohibiting wire-tapping was not comparable to the scope of the B.C. proposal.

Judge Sargent said he did not know whether he would expand his staff with researchers as a result of the widened terms of reference. He said he would discuss this question with commission counsel George Murray, QC, at the earliest opportunity.

CRUCIAL QUESTION

The crucial section of the new order added this term of reference to the original:

"It is deemed expedient to cause inquiry to be made into and concerning the following matters connected with the good government of the province and the conduct of the public business thereof,

"Namely, the nature and extent of the use of electronic and other listening and recording devices and records thereof for the purpose of invading the privacy of persons or organizations,

"And in particular but without restricting the generality of the foregoing the nature and extent of the apparent use of such devices and records by persons carrying on the business of private detectives under the provisions of the private detectives' licensing act or their clients and the justification, if any, for and the background of such use, with a view to determining whether any legislative enactment or amendment or extension of substantive law is necessary for the presentation of privacy as a civil right . . ."

say what caused the crash — a ripple, maybe, who knows."

Campbell appeared to have a premonition of death. Newsmen found him in a despondent mood Tuesday night.

Chief mechanic Leo Villa, who also headed the team for Campbell's father, said Campbell had turned up the ace of spades and then the queen of spades in a game of solitaire.

IN THE CARDS

"Mary Queen of Scots turned up the same combination of cards and knew from it that she was going to be beheaded," Villa quoted Campbell as saying.

Campbell had been waiting nearly nine weeks on the Coniston shore for weather conditions favorable enougugh to make his crack at the 300 m.p.h. water "barrier." He had set the land speed record of 403.1 m.p.h., since broken, and the water speed record of 276.33 m.p.h. in 1964.

As a child Campbell had suffered from rheumatic fever, which left his heart weak. Although he joined the Royal Air Force in the Second World War, he was invalided out because of his heart condition.

His father tried to keep him out of speed record attempts and got him a job with an insurance company. But when Sir Malcolm died in 1949, his son took over his daredevil career.

In 1960, Campbell walked away from a fantastic crash at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah. His 4,250-horsepower car — also named Bluebird — somersaulted three times, soared 680 feet through the air and then skidded 1¼ miles.

Campbell had his little teddy bear mascot "Mr. Whoppit" with him when he died.

Campbell's beautiful third wife Tonia, a former Belgian cabaret star, was at their London apartment when friends called to tell her of her husband's death.

"Oh, my Donald, not my Donald," she gasped and burst into tears.

She flew to Coniston by charter plane while skindivers and other experts were still trying to recover Campbell's body.

Acted Alone Ruby Stated On Death-Bed

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Ruby denied it to the edge of death.

But even his family couldn't help asking, because so many other people seemed to be asking, whether he really acted alone, and not as part of a conspiracy, to kill the accused assassin of president John F. Kennedy.

And so, near the end, Earl Ruby asked his brother again, as he had so many times before:

"Are you sure, Jack, there was nothing else?"

And Jack Ruby answered, says his brother:

"I'm not hiding anything. I'm not protecting anybody. There is nothing to hide, no one to protect. Believe me."

As he lay in his guarded room in Parkland Memorial Hospital, stricken with cancer, Jack Ruby often seemed to be begging the world to believe he would take no secrets to the grave.

He also was tormented by hallucinations in which he imagined that millions of American Jews were slain in a pogrom as punishment because he, a Jew, silenced the alleged killer of a president.

Ruby could be rational on certain levels and wholly irrational on others, according to those closest to him. For example, he might be watching a football game on television and something would touch him off—such as a penalty. Worse is being done to the Jews, he would say.

WITHOUT PLAN

Ruby insisted that he alone, without plan or prompting, shot Lee Harvey Oswald.

He swore also that rumors of secret meetings relating to the president's assassination, the killing of Dallas policeman J. D. Tippit and the slaying of Oswald, were lies invented by "momserem," a Yiddish epithet.

These details of Ruby's last days came from his brother, Earl, a Detroit businessman; Elmer Gertz, a Chicago lawyer prominent on the legal team which won reversal of the death sentence given to Ruby in 1964, and, through them, from other members of the family.

The Ruby murder trial and the Warren commission report supported conclusions that Ruby acted alone in shooting of Oswald—a shooting that was witnessed by a television audience of millions Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963.

But a broiling controversy about the Warren report has produced various theories of conspiracies — some of which give Ruby a hidden role. However, Gertz said:

"He simply could not conceive that people could not see that he not only acted alone but that they could take this and twist it into a premise for giving him a role in a plot against the president, a man he worshipped."

RUBY RECORDING TELLS OF IRONY

It All Started With an Illegal Turn

CHICAGO (AP)—Jack Ruby, who grew up on Chicago's tough west side, returned home in death today after gaining international notoriety as the slayer of President Kennedy's accused assassin. He will be buried beside his parents.

The plane carrying Ruby's body landed at O'Hare International Airport shortly after midnight following a flight from Dallas, where he died Tuesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital—the same hospital in which Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald died.

His death from a blood clot in the lungs forever clouded the doubts surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy. Until the end, Ruby insisted he acted alone in fatally shooting Oswald.

The 55-year-old Ruby had extensive cancer, but Dr. Carl Rose, the Dallas County medical examiner, said it was a massive clot that would probably have killed him even if he had not been weakened by cancer. Rose said, however, that cancer would be listed on the death certificate as a contributing cause.

Rose, who performed an autopsy, said the blood clot apparently formed in Ruby's leg Tuesday morning and travelled through the heart to the lungs.

GUARDED COFFIN

Ruby's coffin was taken from the plane here as soon as the doors were opened. Twenty policemen quickly placed the coffin in a hearse for the drive to a north side funeral home.

Ruby's brother, Earl Ruby of Detroit, and two sisters, Eileen Kaminsky of Chicago and Eva Grant of Dallas, accompanied the body on the plane.

They appeared composed as they walked uickly and silently past a waiting crowd of some 50 reporters.

Hershey Weinstein, president of the Original Weinstein and Sons Chapel, said services and burial would be held Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

Ruby's death prompted statements from various individuals connected with the case.

In New York, William Kunstler, one of Ruby's lawyers, said his death denied him the opportunity "to have a jury decide that he was guilty of nothing more than murder without malice, a crime that carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment."

Kunstler added in a statement that such a verdict—of murder without malice—"would have helped to establish that what Ruby did in Dallas on Nov. 24, 1963, was solely the result of spontaneous reaction to the president's assassination."

In Los Angeles, Joseph Ball, senior staff counsel to the Warren Commission, said he did not see how Ruby's death could have any effect on the validity of the commission's report on Kennedy's assassination.

Ball said he was sure that some persons who have been writing critical books about the report "will spread the word that there was something sinister about Ruby's death."

Ball said he saw no reason to reopen the Warren inquiry unless new evidence developed. He said he had received no communication from any commission officials about any such review.

Ruby had been moved to Parkland hospital Dec. 9 from the Dallas County jail, where he spent more than three years after killing Oswald before a television audience.

Doctors said Ruby woke up Tuesday in a "jovial" mood, had a bath, and ordered eggs for breakfast. He suffered a "generalized convulsive seizure" at 9:10 a.m. and was dead by 10:30, said Dr. Eugene Frenkel.

The autopsy performed by Dr. Rose revealed that Ruby suffered from "extensive tumor involvement in both lungs, the lymph nodes, and the liver."

CLOT KILLED HIM

Dr. Rose said the immediate cause of death was the blood clot, which in effect stopped sufficient oxygen from getting to the lungs.

Ruby had lost some 20 pounds in his 3½-week stay in the hospital, the doctors said. He died weighing 147 pounds.

Numerous books and articles were written that implied Ruby killed Oswald to silence him.

No law enforcement agency agreed, however, and the Warren Commission said there was no conspiracy, foreign or domestic. It said both Ruby and Oswald killed alone, for their own reasons.

Ruby made a clandestine recording at the hospital only days before his death in which he said it was an accident of timing that he had a chance to shoot Oswald as police officers were escorting the handcuffed, 24-year-old suspect to a waiting car in the basement of the city jail, in a routine transfer to the county jail.

Ruby said in the recording that he had understood that Oswald was to be transferred about 10 a.m.

The recording said, in Ruby's words:

"The ironic part of this business is that I made an illegal turn behind a bus at the parking lot. Had I gone the way I was supposed to go—straight down main street — I would never have met this fate because the difference of meeting this fate was 30 seconds one way or the other."

He said in the tape-recorded conversation with his brother, Earl, that the shooting of Oswald "happened in such a blur that before I knew it I was down on the ground . . . The officers had me on the ground."

Earl asked him if he knew Oswald before and Ruby replied:

"I never have known him or seen him before."

The conversation, recorded in Ruby's maximum - security room at Parkland sometime between Dec. 15 and 18, was made public for the first time Tuesday by Capitol Records at a press conference.

The three-minute conversation will be part of a long-playing record entitled, The Controversy: The Death and the Warren Report, being produced by the record firm.

A Dallas jury convicted Ruby of murder with malice March 14, 1964, and set the punishment at death. But the Texas court of criminal appeals overturned the conviction three months ago on the grounds that the trial should have been held outside of Dallas, and that the judge erred in allowing certain police testimony that implied malice.

A new trial was tentatively set for February or March in Wichita Falls, 135 miles north west of Dallas, but legal proceedings were suspended by Ruby's illness.

Celebrant Pays Penalty For Damages

A Vancouver electrician grabbed the wrong wire during a New Year's Eve taxi ride.

Milomir Markovic was fined $25 in central court Tuesday when convicted of wilfully damaging the cab's radio. He had pleaded not guilty.

The accused and four companions were riding in a taxi on Rose Street early New Year's day when the cab driver, irked by their singing, turned his radio volume up.

Markovic admitted he grabbed a cable under the dashboard and yanked, intending just to disconnect the radio's aerial.

Instead he pulled the microphone off the taxi's two-way radio. He was also ordered to pay the $18 repair bill.

Employees Bow Out Of Dealings

Two moves are being made in Saanich following the assessment inquiry report made public last month.

Lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood, representing employees in the assessment department, said they will either drop their interests in Royal Oak Estates Limited or change the objects of the company.

This is in line with one of the recommendations of the inquiry's report.

Reeve Hugh Curtis told council Tuesday night that municipal lawyer D. A. M. Patterson is working on a draft bylaw in line with another inquiry recommendation — making it a condition of employment that employees do not deal in real estate for profit in their municipalities.

At the public inquiry, it was disclosed that assessment department employees bought and sold five properties in Saanich for a gross profit of $3,050.

However, the inquiry report absolved the employees of using confidential information for personal gain.

Ailing B.C. Skipper of Trimaran Rescued by U.S. Navy in Pacific

HONOLULU (AP) — A U.S. navy vessel, the Lenawee, took aboard the ailing skipper of the Canadian trimaran Limelight in the central Pacific Tuesday.

The coast guard reported that skipper Bruce Campbell, 26, of Vancouver, was suffering from severe constipation and malnutrition but described his condition as good. Earlier, appendicitis had been suspected.

Three Australian crew members on the Limelight said they would sail the triple-hulled vessel to Honolulu, 600 miles to the southwest, arriving about Sunday.

The crew members, Peter S. Williams, John S. F. Young and Andrew J. Wardrop, said Campbell had been confined to his bunk almost three weeks and had eaten nothing for the past six days.

The trimaran was on a voyage from Vancouver to Australia via Honolulu and California when the skipper became ill. Williams said Campbell was the only person aboard who could navigate. A coast guard plane was guiding the Limelight to Honolulu.

A coast guard plane dropped a radio and medical supplies to the Limelight, which was flying a distress signal.

The Limelight, with owner-builder-skipper Campbell at the helm, sailed from Vancouver in August.

One-Month Term For Coat Theft

A man who stole a mackinaw coat worth $12 from a fellow resident of the Salvation Army hstel was jailed for a month Tuesday.

Magistrate William Ostler told Ervin Spill, no fixed address, that he was "a recalcitrant thief."

"Nothing can be done for you."

Court was told Spill, who pleaded guilty, stole the coat Dec. 27 at the Johnson Street hostel.

Japan Rejects 12-Mile Limit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Japan has refused to concede that the U.S. has the right to extend its jurisdiction over foreign fishing operations to a line 12 miles off the U.S. shore, the state department reported Tuesday.

The department said preliminary discussions between Japanese and U.S. representatives which began here Wednesday ended in disagreement. However, it said the talks had been "most useful" and were expected to resume Feb. 6.

Fire, Blasts Ravage Tanker, 7 Hurt

SOUTHAMPTON, England (Reuters) — Fire ravaged the 10,720-ton oil tanker Esso Glasgow early today after two explosions ripped through the vessel as it loaded gasoline at an oil refinery here.

Seven firemen were injured fighting the blaze which forced the closing of Southampton port to all shipping for four hours. Three other oil tankers berthed near the Esso Glasgow were moved out for safety.

The fire started just before midnight after the first explosion.

Five firemen were injured in the second blast at 1:15 a.m.

The blaze was reported under control shortly after the second blast, but flared up again later and was not extinguished until 3:45 a.m.

A fire department spokesman said the fire could resume because the metal aboard the ship was white-hot.

An Esso spokesman said the captain and a crew of 40 were on board when the fire started. None were injured.

A ship's officer said most of the crew were below decks when the first blast came. By the time the crew reached the top deck flames were shooting 50 feet into the air.

City Works Department Praised by Mayor

Victoria's departmennt of public works won praise from Mayor Hugh Stephen Tuesday for its three major accomplishments during 1966.

The mayor listed the three big jobs as the widening of the Fort Street "Dardanelles", the redecking of Johnson Street bridge and the building of the new heliport "which will undoubtedly soon be the terminus of direct downtown-to-downtown air transportation between here and Vancouver."

But of equal importance said the mayor were the housekeeping chores perfomred by the department during the year

Chores which saw:

- 215 traffic order changes and the installation of seven additional traffic signals.
- The manufacture and installation of more than 500 new street signs and 680 miscellaneous directional signs.
- The painting of 126 miles of centre lines and 500 crosswalks.
- The collection and disposal of 25,000 tons of garbage.
- The replacement of 14,000 feet of water main and the laying of 3,000 feet of new mains to serve subdivisions.
- The construction of 7,000 feet of new storm drains and 4,000 feet of sanitary sewer.
- Completion of the placing of Bowker Creek underground.
- The issuance of permits involving close to $18 million in new construction.
- And the installation of more than 1,000 new street lamps and luminaires.

"Together with the never-ending task of street paving and improvement they give some idea of the services our public works department, without whose continuing care the economy of our city would rapidly stall to a halt," Mayor Stephen said.

Two Toronto men, Antonio Mendolia, 20, a cousin of the boy, and Dale Burnett Muttart, 18, have been charged with kidnapping.

Ex-Finance Chief Becomes Minister Without Portfolio

OTTAWA (CP) — Walter Gordon, who resigned as finance minister in November, 1965, rejoined the cabinet today as a minister without portfolio

Prime Minister Pearson told a news conference that Mr. Gordon will be "a senior member" of the government and that he will be without a portfolio "for the time being."

"I am very happy to announce that I have invited my old friend and colleague, Mr. Walter Gordon, to rejoin the cabinet as a senior member from the government."

Mr. Gordon, who accompanied the prime minister at the news conference, had agreed and all members of the cabinet were glad that they would have the benefit of his advice and experience once more.

GORDON

Mr. Pearson praised Mr. Gordon for his imagination and for "his strong Canadian viewpoint."

"The two men met Tuesday and Wednesday amid speculation that Mr. Gordon would make a political comeback.

He resigned as finance minister and as Liberal campaign chairman the day after the Liberals failed to get a majority in the Nov. 8, 1965 election.

Reorts circulated last month that Mr. Gordon was planning to resign his Toronto Davenport seat in the Commons because of his opposition to the government's attitude on foreign investments.

MORE SPECIFIC POST

Mr. Pearson made it clear that Mr. Gordon, 60, soon would get a more specific cabinet post.

The prime minister said "there will be an opportunity before long to add to Mr. Gordon's responsibilities in a ministerial way."

The government had been considering cabinet changes for some months and further changes are in the offing. However, Mr. Pearson gave no indication when the shuffle would be announced.

For now, Mr. Pearson said, Mr. Gordon will handle assignments from the prime minister's office. However, Mr. Pearson declined to say what these assignments would be.

In any case, Mr. Gordon would be of "general assistance to me."

Don Campbell Killed As Hydroplane Flips

Smashup Occurs At 300 mph

CONISTON WATER, England (UPI)—The jet-powered hydroplane Bluebird carrying Donald Campbell at more than 300 miles an hour toward a new record flipped 60 feet into the air and smashed to pieces today, killing the British speed ace just short of his goal.

"She's going!" the 45-year-old racer cried over his cockpit radio. Some reports said the bullet-shaped craft appeared to explode as it hit the water and sank 150 feet to the bottom.

Campbell failed by only 100th of a second of completing the course on the mirror-calm lake that would have shattered his previous record of 276.33 miles an hour.

Apparently, he had a premonition of death. But he tried anyway.

JUST TOOK OFF

"I think the explanation of the accident was that the boat was going so fast it just took off," said Norman Buckley, chief observer at the speed test.

Like his father, the late Sir Malcolm Campbell, the water speed king raced cars as well as boats. Sir Malcolm died a natural death in 1949, the year his son started his own racing career. (See story Page 38.)

CAMPBELL
. . . after new record

Strapped into the Bluebird cockpit, Campbell was approaching the end of his return run over a measured kilometer on a lake in northwest England to try for a new speed record.

The craft leaped from the water, arced over and hit the water at a speed of five miles a minute.

Just before it rose, the right "sponson" (hydroplane leg) of the 5,000-horsepower craft lifted from the surface.

Campbell's timekeepers and mechanics heard him say over the radio:

"The water is not in good condition . . . she's tramping (bounceing) . . . I can't see much . . . she's going!"

FOUND MASK

Teammates who sped to the scene in small boats found only pieces of wreckage and Campbells' oxygen mask floating on the sufrace. The mask was Campbell's only hope of survival.

Campbell's timekeepers said his official time for the first run over the measured kilometer (about five-eighths of a mile) was 297 m.p.h. That meant he had to average 303 m.p.h. on the return run to hit the 300 m.p.h target.

"He was travelling over 300 m.p.h. when the crash came and maybe as much as 320 m.p.h.," official observer Andrew Brown told newsmen.

"He was almost through the kilometer, the lake was very smooth," he added. "No one can

U.S. Missile Soars Over Cuba After Veering From Set Path

WASHINGTON — An unarmed U.S. Air Force missile fired in a test from Florida has veered off its scheduled course into the Gulf of Mexico and presumably soared over Cuba, the defence department said today.

The weapon, undergoing research and development tests, was launched from the air force proving ground at Elgin Air Force Base, Fla.

While the defence department did not go into any explanations, the quick announcement was obviously aimed to get in ahead of any propaganda blasts from the Fidel Castro regime in Cuba.

SPECIAL TIMES SERIES

'Tailings in Buttle No Health Hazard'

The pollution of British Columbia's air and water is a major threat facing the province in the century ahead. The Times assigned reporter Gordon Ritchie to examine the many aspects of the problem in British Columbia and elsewhere. Here is his second report.

By GORDON RITCHIE

Last June the provincial government broke all precedent by allowing a mining company to establish in a provincial park.

Western Mines, Ltd., was allowed to construct a road, a townsite, a hydro-electric station and a 1,000-tons-per-day mining and concentrating operation in Vancouver Island's 100 - square - mile Strathcona Park.

Three months later the B.C. Pollution Control Board, handed the problem by a special cabinet order, granted the mining company a 5-year permit to dump daily some 750 tons of tailings — finely crushed unusable ore — into Buttle Lake, the pride of the park and the most important in a chain of lakes on Vancouver Island.

Buttle Lake is the source of drinking water for 16,000 residents of nearby Campbell River water district and is estimated to contain one-tenth of the fresh water on the Island and as much as 1 per cent of the world's total pure drinking-water supply.

The water district promptly took the mining company and the pollution control board to court. The B.C. Court of Appeal is shortly expected to hand down a ruling on an appeal by the water district against a Supreme Court decision upholding the board's action.

The mine began operations last month.

Buttle Lake has consequently been the biggest pollution story of 1966, an inescapable episode in any account of pollution in B.C.

The irony of this situation lies in the fact that the controversy is in large measure a brilliantly-conceived diversionary tactic by the politicians responsible for the far harder-to-defend decision to allow the mine to move into a provincial park in the first instance.

As a Times editorial noted on Sept. 24, shortly after the pollution control board decision was announced:

"Once the green light was given the company to operate a mine in the park it was a foregone conclusion that the means by which the operation could be carried on would also have to be provided.

"But this does not make the Social Credit policy and actions any more acceptable to the many people who consider that legally constituted parkland is a responsibility and a trust which should be honored."

All available evidence indicates the mine tailings will not constitute any public health hazard or even any immediate threat to marine life in the lake.

But all available evidence indicates the possibly highly dangerous long-run consequences of human intervention in the natural balance so carefully protected in a provincial park for the most farsighted and compelling reasons.

The mine is located at the southwestern end of the lake over an orebody of as much as 1.6 million tons of copper, zinc and lead, worth about $100 million and sufficient to keep the mine in operation for at least six and perhaps 20 years.

The annual payroll will probably exceed $2 million, according to general manager Charles Campbell, and annual operating expenditures will approach $4 million, a hefty injection into the economy of the area and the province.

The company expects annual profits of over $4 million on a total capital investment of about $11 million.

Of this $2 million represents the company's share of a 22-mile-long public road put into the park by the highways department, and $1 million — a 4,500 horsepower hydro station which will remain behind when Western Mines packs up its equipment and razes the wooden townsite 20 years from now.

During those 20 years the mine will add to Buttle Lake the treated sewage from the 1,000 residents of the campsite — and the mine tailings containing the fine rock-dust and traces of copper, hexavalent chromium, zinc and cyanide, all lethal to humans and to fish in high enough concentrations.

Right now the tailings are

JUDGE: 'CLAPTRAP'

New Challenge To Legality Of Bug Probe?

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

A second challenge to the revived royal commission on electronic "bugging" may come next week when it opens for its first hearings in Vancouver.

This possibility loomed today in the wake of a provincial cabinet order reappointing retired county court Judge R. A. Sargent as a one-man royal commissioner in a vastly widened probe.

The new order repeats the Nov. 10 terms of reference ruled as invalid by Mr. Justice J. O. Wilson last week. They restricted it to an investigation of the Nov. 5 bugging of hotel rooms used by the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and its late president Lloyd Craig.

But a second page has been added widening the investigation into the kinds and extent of "bugging" devices now being used in the province, under what conditions — if any — they should be permitted to private detectives and whether any legislation is needed to establish the civil right to privacy.

Vancouver private detective W. S. Graham testified before the original commission that he "bugged" the Canadian union's hotel rooms in Vancouver for Pat O'Neal, an organizer of the rival International Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Workers' Union.

IN PUBLIC?

Judge Sargent indicated just before the Christmas recess that the four hours of tapes produced by the bugging would be played in public when the commission resumed after the holidays and this led to the Canadian union's resort to the courts to have the commission declared illegal.

In interviews today, Judge Sargent indicated that he will proceed with his plan to discuss playing the tapes with the lawyers shortly after the new commission begins hearings, expected next week in Vancouver.

He suggested an expurgated version may still be made public.

However, John Laxton, lawyer representing the Canadian union at the commission hearings, told the Times his clients will continue to oppose playing any part of them as a direct invasion of privacy by the commission itself.

Mr. Laxton said the Canadian union had approved establishment of the original commission. But the union went to court against it "once the tape playing became a matter before it, because that changed the whole tenor of the inquiry.

'PRIVACY INVADED'

"We felt that from that point on, he (Judge Sargent) was not acting within his terms of reference which were intended to investigate an invasion of privacy."

Mr. Laxton said this was not the exclusive reason for the court case but was "one of the main ones that precipitated it.

"We oppose under any circumstances the playing of these tapes as a matter of principle— that that would be an invasion of privacy.

"We say that no part of the tapes, expurgated or not, can possibly be relevant to this inquiry.

"In our view there was no possible justification for playing them by the old commission and there stil is no possible justification for playing them by the new commission."

Judge Sargent told the Times there had been a "lot of claptrap spoken about those tapes."

He said the question of playing them "was still under advisement when I had adjourned" and this was still the situation.

55 FT. WAVES DISABLED FREIGHTER

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The 10,000-ton Liberian freighter Georgia was towed into Philadelphia today after six days of battling heavy seas in the Atlantic Ocean.

The Georgia's Greek crew told of waves up to "55 feet high" that ripped off hatch covers and poured sea water into the holds.

The freighter, of Second World War vintage, first radioed for help Friday while about 450 miles east southeast of Nantucket.

The freighter, with 29 men aboard, was carrying a load of manganese ore from India to Philadelphia.

Hanoi Hints Reds Willing To Negotiate

NEW YORK (AP) — Premier Pham Van Dong of Communist North Vietnam says his government's four - point demands in the Vietnam war are not necessarily conditions for peace talks but rather a "basis of settlement of the Vietnam problem," the New York Times reports today from Hanoi.

The Hanoi premier's statement, in an interview with correspondent Harrison E. Salisbury, raised speculation that North Vietnam had shifted in some measure from a hard-line stand which blocked the path to a conference table.

Salisbury quotes Premier Dong as saying:

"The big question is to reach a settlement which can be enforced.

"The party which has to make the first steps is Washington. We have no doubt on this point. We cannot press history forward. If this does not come about today, it will come about tomorrow. It's no use to make haste. If we show haste, the question will be put wrongly and we will have to wait again. So let the situation ripen."

Hanoi's four - point demands have been these: Recognition of the rights of all Vietnamese to peace, independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity; pending peaceful reunification, strict adherence to the terms of the 1954 Geneva agreements which divided Vietnam after the French were expelled;

He said he had planned to have one more discussion with the lawyers about playing the tapes before any action was taken and he still planned to do this under the new terms of reference.

"There are certain parts that might be admissible and others not and we were to have a conference to decide if or how to winnow those out," he said.

He said the new commission will have to go through all the red tape of setting up a new hearing so it likely will not open until next week in Vancouver.

"Then it will take a day or so to shape up but there will be a shortcut because we won't have to go through all the evidence already given.

"Then, as to that (tape-playing question), there will have to be a conference between counsel and myself as to how we will do it."

LAWYER MUM

Mary Southin, the lawyer who represented the Canadian union in obtaining Chief Justice Wilson's declaration the original cabinet order was invalid, declined comment on whether the new order overcame the objections.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner this morning claimed the new order could result in B.C. becoming the first Canadian jurisdiction to establish legislation creating privacy as a civil right.

He said a Manitoba law prohibiting wire-tapping was not comparable to the scope of the B.C. proposal.

Judge Sargent said he did not know whether he would expand his staff with researchers as a result of the widened terms of reference. He said he would discuss this question with commission counsel George Murray, QC, at the earliest opportunity.

CRUCIAL QUESTION

The crucial section of the new order added this term of reference to the original:

"It is deemed expedient to cause inquiry to be made into and concerning the following matters connected with the good government of the province and the conduct of the public business thereof.

"Namely, the nature and extent of the use of electronic and other listening and recording devices and records thereof for the purpose of invading the privacy of persons or organizations.

"And in particular but without restricting the generality of the foregoing the nature and extent of the apparent use of such devices and records by persons carrying on the business of private detectives under the provisions of the private detectives' licensing act or their clients and the justification, if any, for and the background of such use, with a view to determining whether any legislative enactment or amendment or extension of substantive law is necessary for the presentation of privacy as a civil right . . ."

say what caused the crash — a ripple, maybe, who knows."

Campbell appeared to have a premonition of death. Newsmen found him in a despondent mood Tuesday night.

Chief mechanic Leo Villa, who also headed the team for Campbell's father, said Campbell had turned up the ace of spades and then the queen of spades in a game of solitaire.

IN THE CARDS

"Mary Queen of Scots turned up the same combination of cards and knew from it that she was going to be beheaded," Villa quoted Campbell as saying.

Campbell had been waiting nearly nine weeks on the Coniston shore for weather conditions favorable enogugh to make his crack at the 300 m.p.h. water "barrier." He had set the land speed record of 403.1 m.p.h., since broken, and the water speed record of 276.33 m.p.h. in 1964.

As a child Campbell had suffered from rheumatic fever, which left his heart weak. Although he joined the Royal Air Force in the Second World War, he was invalided out because of his heart condition.

His father tried to keep him out of speed record attempts and got him a job with an insurance company. But when Sir Malcolm died in 1949, his son took over his daredevil career.

In 1960, Campbell walked away from a fantastic crash at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah. His 4,250-horsepower car — also named Bluebird — somersaulted three times, soared 680 feet through the air and then skidded 1¼ miles.

Campbell had his little teddy bear mascot "Mr. Whoppit" with him when he died.

Campbell's beautiful third wife Tonia, a former Belgian cabaret star, was at their London apartment when friends called to tell her of her husband's death.

"Oh, my Donald, not my Donald," she gasped and burst into tears.

She flew to Coniston by charter plane while skindivers and other experts were still trying to recover Campbell's body.

Celebrant Pays Penalty For Damages

A Vancouver electrician grabbed the wrong wire during a New Year's Eve taxi ride.

Milomir Markovic was fined $25 in central court Tuesday when convicted of wilfully damaging the cab's radio. He had pleaded not guilty.

The accused and four companions were riding in a taxi on Rose Street early New Year's day when the cab driver, irked by their singing, turned his radio volume up.

Markovic admitted he grabbed a cable under the dashboard and yanked, intending just to disconnect the radio's aerial.

Instead he pulled the microphone off the taxi's two-way radio. He was also ordered to pay the $18 repair bill.

Acted Alone Ruby Stated On Death-Bed

DALLAS (AP) — Jack Ruby denied it to the edge of death.

But even his family couldn't help asking, because so many other people seemed to be asking, whether he really acted alone, and not as part of a conspiracy, to kill the accused assassin of president John F. Kennedy.

And so, near the end, Earl Ruby asked his brother again, as he had so many times before:

"Are you sure, Jack, there was nothing else?"

And Jack Ruby answered, says his brother:

"I'm not hiding anything. I'm not protecting anybody. There is nothing to hide, no one to protect. Believe me."

As he lay in his guarded room in Parkland Memorial Hospital, stricken with cancer, Jack Ruby often seemed to be begging the world to believe he would take no secrets to the grave.

He also was tormented by hallucinations in which he imagined that millions of American Jews were slain in a pogrom as punishment because he, a Jew, silenced the alleged killer of a president.

Ruby could be rational on certain levels and wholly irrational on others, according to those closest to him. For example, he might be watching a football game on television and something would touch him off—such as a penalty. Worse is being done to the Jews, he would say.

Ruby insisted that he alone, without plan or prompting, shot Lee Harvey Oswald.

He swore also that rumors of secret meetings relating to the president's assassination, the killing of Dallas policeman J. D. Tippit and the slaying of Oswald, were lies invented by "momserem," a Yiddish epithet.

These details of Ruby's last days came from his brother, Earl, a Detroit businessman; Elmer Gertz, a Chicago lawyer prominent on the legal team which won reversal of the death sentence given to Ruby in 1964, and, through them, from other members of the family.

The Ruby murder trial and the Warren commission report supported conclusions that Ruby acted alone in shooting of Oswald—a shooting that was witnessed by a television audience of millions Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963.

But a broiling controversy about the Warren report has produced various theories of conspiracies — some of which give Ruby a hidden role. However, Gertz said:

"He simply could not conceive that people could not see that he not only acted alone but that they could take this and twist it into a premise for giving him a role in a plot against the president, a man he worshipped."

Stolen Treasures Recovered

LONDON (AP) — Eight paintings worth $7,000,000 stolen five days ago in the world's biggest art theft, were reported today recovered intact.

Three of the old masters were found in what was believed a professional robbers' den and others in a parcel behind a clump of bushes not far from London's Dulwich College Gallery where they were stolen, police informants said.

Scotland Yard announced the recovery of the paintings but declined to give details. Detectives were still questioning some men in connection with the theft, the yard said.

The paintings — three Rembrandts, three Rubens and one each by Gerald Dou and Adam Elsheimer—were reported to be in good condition despite exposure to frosty air. Some of the paintings were damaged slightly, officials said.

Scotland Yard insiders said three of the paintings were found Monday at a hideout which contained a hoard of other stolen property and some weapons.

They said an anonymous telephone call led detectives Tuesday night to Streatham Common, about four miles from Dulwich Gallery in south London, where the remaining five paintings were found in some bushes.

RUBY RECORDING TELLS OF IRONY

It All Started With an Illegal Turn

CHICAGO (AP)—Jack Ruby, who grew up on Chicago's tough west side, returned home in death today after gaining international notoriety as the slayer of President Kennedy's accused assassin. He will be buried beside his parents.

The plane carrying Ruby's body landed at O'Hare International Airport shortly after midnight following a flight from Dallas, where he died Tuesday at Parkland Memorial Hospital—the same hospital in which Kennedy and Lee Harvey Oswald died.

His death from a blood clot in the lungs forever clouded the doubts surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy. Until the end, Ruby insisted he acted alone in fatally shooting Oswald.

The 55-year-old Ruby had extensive cancer, but Dr. Carl Rose, the Dallas County medical examiner, said it was a massive clot that would probably have killed him even if he had not been weakened by cancer. Rose said, however, that cancer would be listed on the death certificate as a contributing cause.

Rose, who performed an autopsy, said the blood clot apparently formed in Ruby's leg Tuesday morning and travelled through the heart to the lungs.

GUARDED COFFIN

Ruby's coffin was taken from the plane here as soon as the doors were opened. Twenty policemen quickly placed the coffin in a hearse for the drive to a north side funeral home.

Ruby's brother, Earl Ruby of Detroit, and two sisters, Eileen Kaminsky of Chicago and Eva Grant of Dallas, accompanied the body on the plane.

They appeared composed as they walked uickly and silently past a waiting crowd of some 50 reporters.

Hershey Weinstein, president of the Original Weinstein and Sons Chapel, said services and burial would be held Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

Ruby's death prompted statements from various individuals connected with the case.

In New York, William Kunstler, one of Ruby's lawyers, said his death denied him the opportunity "to have a jury decide that he was guilty of nothing more than murder without malice, a crime that carries a maximum penalty of five years imprisonment."

Kunstler added in a statement that such a verdict—of murder without malice—"would have helped to establish that what Ruby did in Dallas on Nov. 24, 1963, was solely the result of spontaneous reaction to the president's assassination."

In Los Angeles, Joseph Ball, senior staff counsel to the Warren Commission, said he did not see how Ruby's death could have any effect on the validity of the commission's report on Kennedy's assassination.

Ball said he was sure that some persons who have been writing critical books about the report "will spread the word that there was something sinister about Ruby's death."

Ball said he saw no reason to reopen the Warren inquiry unless new evidence developed. He said he had received no communication from any commission officials about any such review.

Ruby had been moved to Parkland hospital Dec. 9 from the Dallas County jail, where he spent more than three years after killing Oswald before a television audience.

Doctors said Ruby woke up Tuesday in a "jovial" mood, had a bath, and ordered eggs for breakfast. He suffered a "generalized convulsive seizure" at 9:10 a.m. and was dead by 10:30, said Dr. Eugene Frenkel.

The autopsy performed by Dr. Rose revealed that Ruby suffered from "extensive tumor involvement in both lungs, the lymph nodes, and the liver."

CLOT KILLED HIM

Dr. Rose said the immediate cause of death was the blood clot, which in effect stopped sufficient oxygen from getting to the lungs.

Ruby had lost some 20 pounds in his 3½-week stay in the hospital, the doctors said. He died weighing 147 pounds.

Numerous books and articles were written that implied Ruby killed Oswald to silence him.

No law enforcement agency agreed, however, and the Warren Commission said there was no conspiracy, foreign or domestic. It said both Ruby and Oswald killed alone, for their own reasons.

Ruby made a clandestine recording at the hospital only days before his death in which he said it was an accident of timing that he had a chance to shoot Oswald as police officers were escorting the handcuffed, 24-year-old suspect to a waiting car in the basement of the city jail, in a routine transfer to the county jail.

Ruby said in the recording that he had understood that Oswald was to be transferred about 10 a.m.

The recording said, in Ruby's words:

"The ironic part of this business is that I made an illegal turn behind a bus at the parking lot. Had I gone the way I was supposed to go—straight down main street — I would never have met this fate because the difference of meeting this fate was 30 seconds one way or the other."

He said in the tape-recorded conversation with his brother, Earl, that the shooting of Oswald "happened in such a blur that before I knew it I was down on the ground . . . The officers had me on the ground."

Earl asked him if he knew Oswald before and Ruby replied:

"I never have known him or seen him before."

The conversation, recorded in Ruby's maximum - security room at Parkland sometime between Dec. 15 and 18, was made public for the first time Tuesday by Capitol Records at a press conference.

The three-minute conversation will be part of a long-playing record entitled, The Controversy: The Death and the Warren Report, being produced by the record firm.

A Dallas jury convicted Ruby of murder with malice March 14, 1964, and set the punishment at death. But the Texas court of criminal appeals overturned the conviction three months ago on the grounds that the trial should have been held outside of Dallas, and that the judge erred in allowing certain police testimony that implied malice.

A new trial was tentatively set for February or March in Wichita Falls, 135 miles north west of Dallas, but legal proceedings were suspended by Ruby's illness.
